My dear Patten,

I am sorry I was not within when you did me the favor of calling here some little while ago, and I hope that I may be more fortunate the next time and that it may not be a very long time first.

I am now a petitioner, Can you please me a tiny little Bird coming to your hospitable Breakfast Window asking for Crumbs

Counts for my still tenon unpledged, whom I have left at home in my net. If you can, James it, I may see you or other come to you for them.
At present however my intention to you, and if you can lay it upon Mr. J. to do so I shall be be obliged, is on behalf of Barrister not long fledged Mr. Charles Cooke Mr. W. W. W.
Buildings for your present & opinion and is I believe a clever man. He has the misfortune of being lame which is against his appearance & perhaps some disadvantage in his profession but he speaks tolerably well and would do credit to any recommendation if you can employ him. I shall say no more on this subject.

I hope your father is well having now other to look after some James I think offer farming before what he can use when I was last written.
It appears to me the most probable way of farming now is to undo us a great measure what has been done since the war and to lay down to pasture what at that time was converted into arable.

My dear Sir
I have the pleasure to inform you that your order is received and will be forwarded to you as soon as possible
