

July 5 1882

I shall have been here a week tomorrow.
I write now to tell you that I was none the worse for the journey, which indeed I enjoyed.
Yet I am far from well, & it is too early to say whether
I am on the road to mend.

My doctor is not here. I found all my children & quite flourishing. I think with real pleasure of the days I spent with you, & with true gratitude for your kindness to me. My wife is no less grateful to you for this than I am. I will write again when I see how things go. Ever yrs.
Jas.

— Carte postale. —

Union postale universelle. — Weltpostverein. — Unione postale universale

SUISSE. SCHWEIZ. SVIZZERA

Edward Luffad Esq

52 Weymouth Street

London W

England

July 5, 1882

I shall have been here a week tomorrow.
I write now to tell you that I was none
the worse for the journey, which indeed I enjoyed. But I am far from well, & it is too early to say whether I am on the road to mend. My doctor is not here. I found all my children & C quite flourishing. I think with real pleasure of the days I spent with you & with true gratitude for your kindness to me.
My wife is no less grateful to you for this than I am.
I will write again when I see how things go.

Ever yours

J A S

SYMONDS, John Addington (1840-1893)
Author and critic. Davos-Platz

A postcard (initials) to Edward Clifford.
5 July 1882.

He reports his arrival in Switzerland;
The journey did not hurt him, and his family is well. He thanks Clifford for his kindnesses.