MR. WARNER'S BOOK IN LONDON.

During the absence of Mr. Warner, of THE COURANT, at the Adirondacks, the following letter has been received here from a prominent London publishing firm, and we print it before forwarding it to our associate:—

SAMPSON LOW, SON & MARSTON,
LONDON, 188 Fleet street, Crown Buildings,
August 5, 1871. }

To Charles Dudley Warner, Esq., care of Messrs. Fields, Osgood & Co., Boston:—

DEAR SIR:—We have been so pleased with your little book, "My Summer in a Garden," that we have determined to try the experiment of putting it into our cheap series. If any good comes of it we shall have much pleasure in sharing the same with you. We send you a copy by this post.

We remain, dear sir, yours very truly and respectfully,

SAMPSON LOW, SON & MARSTON.

Of course there is no copyright and we are liable at any time to be reprinted on.

The book accompanying the letter is a very neat edition, uniform with other works by American authors published by the above firm. It is bound in cloth, about 250 small 16mo pages, very neatly printed. The offer of the publishers to share the benefits of the publication with the author, when there is no copyright law preventing them from retaining all profits for themselves, is highly creditable to the firm,

Dear Mr. Cogswell

I am just home
from the Adirondacks.

I am sorry that my summer is not to have the benefit of Mr. Dyer's excitation. I have nothing to suggest about Mr. Dyer's choice of subjects; he is the best judge. I wish we could have a little landscape or two by him or some body
