

would appear in the next summer

I know not if any little matter from my pen would be of use to you (I mean as a voluntary offering), but I shall be happy to send you something.

I was restrained by a feeling of delinecy from asking you for any little paper last year, and I feared that if I offered you something, it you would feel bound to return it in kind.

and in this case the advantage would have been all on my side. I displaced the matter of your good wife also had the pleasure of meeting her at Parkersville in private

My dear Sir

I remain yours
