

Alstead, Jan. 18. 1875.

Dear Mr. Osgood,

The package of books came safely, and I am very much obliged to you.

May I trouble you to send me, at your convenience, a copy of Mr. Macdonald's new book, - "Malcolm," and another copy of "Childhood Songs," which is just perfect!

Also, if you please, a "Graham's Stenography." I am not sure about the exact title.

About money, - I shall do very well for a time, but about the 1st of March my funds will probably run low. Can you then send me $100, and the same the 1st April, and accounts and balance the 1st May?

Things remain "as they were" with Mr.
Living. I wrote to him asking for the omitted accounts, and have heard nothing. He probably thinks it a little amusement of mine to play at business correspondence.

Would it be in order, - or of any use - for me to write to Mr. Lee?

Yours truly,
Richard S. Whitney
