Dear Sir

I am very much obliged to you for the letter I have just had the pleasure to receive from you, & seize the earliest opportunity to return you my thanks for your Box at Drury Lane which you have been so good as to lend me for tomorrow night and am ever Dear Sir Your most affectionate Cousin & Servant

to stab, any thing but her self; and that I think they will be more anxious to do now that the Fifth Edition of her last inestimable work is advertised, even after it had been printed in the Compleat edition of her works!

Let me again hear from you my dear Miss Mattha, & inform me that your sister continues to read such a life as hers must not be thrown away. & gratify the Ungodly your letter of the 19th my dear Miss Mattha, has made me very angry. What avails such an understanding; and such Policy as your sister proposes; if the will allow her Names to be used, and her life endangered by the Malice of the Envious? & who are so far far behind her. Can do that? Could Mr. Heath more imagine that she could write as no other woman ever did write; and not raise herself enemies? But, if she had written with the pen of an Angel; she could not have made one enemy; if her works had not met with such unheard of success if her work had been published by Subscription; altho she had obtained 20000 half guineas; besides doubtless Subscriptions, she would not have torn the Hearts of the Malevolent as the repeated new Editions of a work without other Promotion than its own Merit, must naturally do? indeed my dear Madam, she must not allow herself to pay those brutes the Compliment of getting herself at their Condemn.

I do not believe they mean
