

SIR JAMES CAMPBELL, (formerly Sir James Callander,) whose Memoirs, just published, are exciting so much attention, married four wives, and had children by them all; so that we may consider this to be not the least prolific race in Scotland. His first lady was a Miss Forbes, whom he married in Geneva, in 1769, and who died within two years, having had two children. His second wife was Miss Dufens, in 1772, who only survived the birth of a daughter, and left Major Callander again a widower. His third wife was Lady Elizabeth Macdonell, sister of the Earl of Antrim, whom he married in Dublin, in 1777, by whom he had six sons and daughters: two of the latter, Caroline and Frances, having married the late Mr. Thomas Sheridan and Sir James Graham. The fourth wife, the present Lady Campbell, so made in 1815, was Miss Descot, the daughter of a Parisian banker, who also has borne several children to our bold and patriarchal baronet.

Gentlemen

I beg leave to intrude for a moment on your leisure, to thank you, for your obliging attentions to me, when at Paris, & at the same time, entreat to know, if in any shape, I can be of use, to your Respectable House, before I return, to your City; which will be about 9: as all my business will be finished at that period.

In looking over my little account with your House, it appears to me, if I am not mistaken, that a most trifling balance remains to me — if it is so, <sup>your</sup> favor, to honor a small draft, I send with this, for only 100 francs, in favor of Mr. Dandelle —

I have the Honor to be —

Gentlemen
your most obliged Servant

J. Campbell

at John Richardson Esq,

Solicitor at Law
