(1799)

My dear Lord,

The verses very well dressed to be sent up for good. I agree however in the criticisms of the Commentator with the pencil who has gone before me. And I am tempted to add one of my own - which I do rather doubt though however - that "Altera Deianira" is more English than Latin.

I am aware of

"Alter est tunc Gigis, altera quae vobis arge"

"Salvator heros"

but I still think Virgil's use of the word is not such as justifies Edm. Major's. I may be wrong.
I

I shall soon be able to wipe off the reproaches which you say are cast upon me in Falmer yard. - My emancipation will take place next week - by which time the business produced by the former trials will be dispatched. And then I shall weary you all with calling upon you.

Ever, my dear Lord,

Most sincerely yours
