

Photostat sent to Greggs

COLERIDGE, S.T. A.L.S. 1 p., 8vo. N.p.; Sat. Noon (1824)
To "My dear Madam." 30.00

Amusing note in which Coleridge speaks of himself as a Devonshire man and thanks his correspondent for sending a copy of a Debate in The Times. He had evidently wanted a copy of a different debate, "the Attack on the Lord Chancellor in last Tuesday's Paper in which out of 250 members that were in the House 110 voted for something like bringing the Chancellor to the Bar of the House for Breach of Privilege, and in no obscure terms calling Mr. Abercrombie a Liar."

The reference may ~~be~~ to Lord Eldon, who was Lord Chancellor from 1801 to 1806 and associated with Pitt, whom Coleridge so much disliked. in 1824 and who had called Abercrombie a liar.

Sat. Noon -

My dear Madam

I am (as we Devon Folk say) very kindly obliged to you for your kindness - but this Debate of in The Times I have seen & read. The Debate I alluded to is the Affidavit
The Lord Chancellor on ^{last} Tuesday's Paper in which out of 250 members that were in the House 110 voted for something like bringing the Chancellor to the Bar of the House for Breach of Privilege, and in so doing times calling Mr. Throckmble a liar - with unfeigned respect &c. J. T. Coleridge