Trustees Name Director Of Prestonsburg Branch

A Missouri junior college president, Dr. Henry A. Campbell, has been named as the director of the Prestonsburg Community College.

The appointment became official last Friday when the Board of Trustees accepted the recommendation of President John W. Oswald to appoint Dr. Campbell to the post. At the same time, the Trustees authorized the sale of $1 million in bonds to finance part of the construction of the community colleges at Somerset and Hopkinsville.

Currently, Dr. Campbell is president of Crowder College in Neosho, Mo. He became president at Crowders when the public junior college was founded a year ago. Prior to that he was the first director at the Alamogordo, N. M., Community College. He held that post for six years.

A native of Cosmos, Wash., Dr. Campbell graduated from the University in 1949 and has two doctoral degrees—in education from New Mexico State University and a Ph.D. from the University of Texas.

The 38-year-old educator began his teaching career in 1949 at Buckeye High School in Garrard County. He taught at Cumberland and Benham High Schools in Harlan County from 1951 to 1955. He went to New Mexico as a teacher in Alamogordo High School and became director of the community college there when it was established in 1957.

President Oswald said the initial enrollment at the Prestonsburg Community College may exceed 200. He said that Floyd County businessmen have already endowed 14 scholarships, six of which have been awarded.

The Trustees approved sale of the $1 million in bonds to finance about half the construction cost of the community colleges at Somerset and Hopkinsville. Each is scheduled to open in September, 1965.

The total cost of the buildings is expected to be about $2 million. Federal funds will provide about 40 percent of that, the bonds about 50 percent, and other funds about 10 percent.

Final plans for the community colleges are under study and bids are expected to be let about July 1 with construction to start on both buildings in August.

In his report to the Board, President Oswald said that the Elizabethtown Community College will also open in September as scheduled. Ten full-time faculty members have been hired for Prestonsburg. Four more appointments are scheduled.

In Elizabethtown, 45 locally endowed scholarships are available. Dr. Oswald said that about half of the top 10 or 12 graduates from the area's high schools are planning to enroll there.

Discussions of the community college system and plans for the University's next decade prompted a Kentucky labor leader and member of the Trustees, Sam Ezelle, of Louisville, to ask for the establishment of a community college there.

Mr. Ezelle told the Trustees: "Louisville is where the greatest concentration of population and one fifth of the taxpayers are located.

"The University of Louisville, all in all, has done a good job. But a municipal college is just not as equipped as the state university is to do the job."

Mr. Ezelle, who is also executive secretary of the state AFL-

CIO, said that the Louisville area needs a University branch that will offer low-cost tuition.

He said the University of Louisville's tuition, which is substantially higher than UK's, is prohibitive to many qualified students.

Gov. Edward T. Breathitt told Mr. Ezelle that the idea of a community college in Louisville had been discussed with University officials but that nothing could be released about it now.

In other business, the Trustees:

1. Appointed Clay Maupin, director of accounting and budgetary control, as assistant treasurer.

2. Named Dr. Edsel T. Godbey assistant dean of the community college system effective July 1.

3. Increased room and board charges in men's dorms $140 a year, to $370. Coeds already pay that amount. Men will now get 20 meals a week instead of the present 10.

4. Leased an office building in Prestonsburg to provide temporary office space for the community college staff already there. The lease will run three months at $100 a month.

5. Selected Haskins and Sells, certified public accountants, as the external auditor for all University accounts and the accounts of the Kentucky Research Foundation, the Fund for the Advancement of Education and Research in the Kentucky Medical Center, the Athletic Association, and the Thomas Poe Cooper Foundation.

Cosmopolitan Club

The University's foreign students are invited to an open house from 6 to 8 p.m. Sunday, June 28, at the home of Herman Kemball, 140 N. Upper. There will be dancing and games. If transportation is needed, call 252-5952.

Board Appointed For Publications

12 Named By President To Serve On First Board

Appointment of a 12-member Student Publications Board was announced yesterday by President John W. Oswald.

The newly created board, which will have jurisdiction over all student-edited publications, including the campus newspaper, the Kentucky Kernel, and the University yearbook, the Kentuckian, is made up of six students, three faculty members and three members-at-large.

The at-large members, each appointed by President Oswald to a two-year term, are William J. Hanna, city editor of The Lexington Leader; Robert L. Johnson, director of the UK Medical Center's Division of State and Local Services; and James Shropshire, Fayette County farmer and business man who throughout the 1930's was graduate manager of the University's student publications. Hanna and Shropshire are UK alumni.

The board's three faculty members, appointed by Dr. Oswald from a list of nominees recommended by the Faculty Council, are Paul Oberst, professor of law; Dr. Niel Plummer, director of the School of Journalism; and Dr. Gifford Blyton, professor of speech.

Prof. Oberst was named to a three-year term, Dr. Blyton will serve two years, and Dr. Plummer one year. All future faculty appointees will serve two years on the board.

Student members, selected by President Oswald from a panel of 12 recommended by a special committee, are Stephen Palmer and Sallie List, both of Lexington; James Svava, Jeffersonton; Howell Brady, Mayfield; Warren Pope, Catlettsburg; and Ellen Chaffee, Hinsdale, Ill. Each will serve a one-year term, subject to reappointment.

The student nominations came from a committee which included the president of Student Congress, the president of the Association of Women Students, the editor-in-chief of the Kernel, the editor of the Kentuckian, the dean of men, and the dean of women.

Also slated to serve as ex-officio, non-voting members of the publications board are the Kentuckian editor and the Kernel editor-in-chief.

A chairman and a secretary are to be elected by the board members.

Student publications at the University previously have been under direction of the School of Journalism. Establishment of a publications board was authorized by the UK Board of Trustees, at President Oswald's request, in April.

Such a board, he said, would make student publications more representative of the entire campus and would provide a basis for University-wide guidance.

Beginning September 1, the board will assume responsibility for developing and enforcing both editorial and financial policies of all student publications. In addition, it will appoint editors and advisors for the Kernel and Kentuckian and, in consultation with the student editors, will appoint the staffs of both publications.

The student editorial staffs will continue to operate all publications, subject to the policies established by the 12-member board.

Summer Registration Figures Incomplete

Enrollment for summer classes at UK this year may well surpass last year's total of 3,571 students.

With only partial calculations completed in the office of the Dean of Admissions, the number of regular summer students has reached a total of 3,114. This summer does not include those people who are on the campus for seminars and short courses which last only one or two weeks.

A spokesman in the Dean of Admissions' Office said that this year's enrollment will "... increase over last year's with the addition of short courses later in the summer."

A breakdown by colleges of the 2,744 students who registered on June 5-6 gives the following table: College of Agriculture, 94; Arts and Sciences, 798; Commerce, 175; Education, 569; Engineering, 186; Graduate School, 821; Law, 62; Pharmacy, 12; and the College of Nursing, 27.

The partial results from this year's enrollment in the Colleges of Education, Arts and Sciences, and Graduate School, point to a substantial gain over last year. The total enrollment for these three colleges last year, including short courses, was: Education, 746; Arts and Sciences, 838; and Graduate School, 1414.

SC Board Schedules Film Series

By BUNNY ANDERSON
Kernel Staff Writer

A film program sponsored by the Student Center Board is an integral part of the board's plan for academic and social improvement on the UK campus.

For the first time in summer school, the board is sponsoring a movie series. Five films are to be shown each Saturday at 8 p.m. Admission is 50 cents. The movies are "Boys' Night Out" on June 20; "The Fountainhead" on June 27; "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof" on July 11; "Madame Bovary" on July 18; and "The Swan" on July 25.

The program was begun last spring under the leadership of Carolyn Cramer. It was to arouse interest among the students in foreign films, countries, and the directors' expression of drama.

In addition to presenting art films, the Student Board showed contemporary films. According to Miss Cramer, "We did real well first semester . . . but second semester, our attendance was small due to the social events scheduled."

Miss Cramer continued, "Contrary to public opinion, the Student Center Board is financially supported by the students' tuition fees. We receive approximately $4,000 a year, from which $900 is used to rent the films for presentation here."

Statistics made by Miss Cramer of last year's attendance showed more girls attended the 6:30 p.m. showing and dates and more boys were in greater attendance at the 9 p.m. showing.

This fall the films will be shown twice, once in the fall and again in the spring. The foreign films will be shown once a month on Saturday. Showtime will be at 8:30 and 9:30 p.m. Discussion groups will be at 8:30 p.m., during which the center of attention will concern the film's theme, implication, and political effect.

University Has Need For An Auditorium

It is surprising, with its building activity, that the University has so far avoided building a special concert hall in which to hold the numerous cultural programs, such as the Central Kentucky Concert and Lecture Series, the Little Kentucky Derby concerts, and the Blazer Lecture Series.

One constantly hears complaints from all corners that attendance at the cultural programs is lacking, but the times are few that the problem is hit on the head. That problem is that the University hasn't provided a place to hold the programs.

The largeness of the Coliseum, coupled with inadequate placement of microphones and loudspeakers, leaves much of the program inaudible. Conditions are only worsened by the inappropriate seating arrangements of the Coliseum. There are no backs on the seats on the left concourse in the building, which makes comfort a near impossibility.

And, finally, the Coliseum does not have the lighting facilities to complement the performance. In providing for late-comers, the lights on the concourses are left burning during the entirety of the program, which is both annoying and distracting to those trying to watch the performance.

The Coliseum was designed for basketball games, not concerts. Instead of providing new buildings for this and that department to expand, the University should provide a building for the use of all departments. An auditorium seating 7,000-10,000 persons not only would be the answer to the problems which plague the various cultural programs, but also would provide a place for graduation ceremonies.

The University is continually growing and expanding, but it is sorely lacking a facility which would bring the student body together, stimulate unity, and provide a place to hold concerts and other University functions.

Lectures Should End At The Bell, Not Later

The bell that ends each class period is probably the most frustrating part of any class period.

Too many professors hold their classes past the bell. They should realize that whenever they hold their students they are taking their time to get to the next class.

If a student is forced to cross the campus to get to his next class, he will need all of the 10 minutes that he is given. Over-crowded stairs and long distances make it necessary to give the student 10 minutes.

Many professors require that their students be on time for every class period, yet many of these professors are the same ones that keep their classes past the bell.

The teacher's own tardiness is often responsible for the class going overtime. Students should not be kept because their teacher is late for class.

Poor planning by the instructor is often a reason for the extended class period. Many of them are kept late because the instructor could not plan his lecture to the allotted time, yet the students have to pay for this inadequacy.

Students usually do not hear anything that is said after the bell has rung, and the instructor is just wasting his breath.

When a student is forced to enter a class late he disturbs the lecturer and the other students in the class. This is out of line with courtesy to professors and students.

Students should also show respect to the professor by not shutting or slamming their books, or putting on their coats before he is through lecturing.

This probably would not happen if the students knew that they were going to be dismissed on time.

We would like to suggest that it be mandatory for professors to end their classes with the ringing of the bell. They should finish their sentence, and end the lecture there.

Oswald Presents Look At Next Decade

By BILL GRANT

With the presentation of a 10-year academic prospectus at last Friday's Board of Trustees meeting, the University begins a look at the first decade of its second century.

Stressing that the 92-page document was not a blueprint with decisions already made but only "analysis and prospects," President John W. Oswald presented the trustees with the program as the first step toward its possible implementation.

By unanimous vote the trustees accepted the program and it now becomes an item for general campus-wide discussion. Dr. Oswald will officially present it to the faculty in September.

Entitled "Beginning a Second Century: the University of Kentucky Academic Program: Analysis and Prospects," the plan would launch the University's second century by overturning or overhauling many of the programs that marked its first century.

Implementation of the program will begin in the fall with study by the faculty. Each facet of the plan is expected to be discussed, and polished, by the faculty, and action, hopefully, will begin during the University's Centennial Year, 1965.

The plan grew out of discussion on the department level in each college of the University. Formulation of the final plan was made after "extensive consultation" with the new Academic Advisory Council, the president said.

The newly-formed Academic Advisory Council is composed of nine members of the faculty and administration including the Executive Vice President, Dr. A. D. Albright, and the Vice President for the Medical Center, Dr. William Willard.

Basically, the program:

1. Projects enrollment from last year's 10,140 to 23,500 in 1975, with 18,000 on the Lexington campus and 5,500 in the community colleges.

2. Sees the Lexington campus primarily as an upper division (junior and senior) and graduate campus. It sees approximately 40 percent of the freshmen and sophomores studying on the main campus compared with 70 percent now.

3. Thereby increases the role of the community colleges as a "feeder" system and source of two-year technical programs. In addition, the University will consider an overseas campus.

4. Proposes a reorganization of some of the professional colleges and would split the College of Arts and Sciences, by far the University's largest, into three colleges: sciences, fine arts, and letters.

5. Proposes to construct 23 new buildings by 1968 at a cost of $44,227,250 to handle record demands for classrooms, dormitories, and laboratories.

6. Pushes the Lexington campus and its faculty further into research making it imperative that the faculty excel in research and publication as well as in the classroom.

Linked with these suggested programs and the reorganization of some of the professional and undergraduate colleges, is the strong urging for the establishment of the University College as the lone lower division college.

The college would offer the same broad two-year course to all undergraduates during their first two years at the University. They would enter the professional schools during their junior year. The college would be at least a partial answer to the complaints that some professional schools "train" but don't "educate" students.

The University feels that this change would allow the professional schools to function better. It would give all underclassmen a broader basic education in the liberal arts and sciences before they enter scientific or technical fields.

If the program goes through unchanged, hardly an aspect of the University's current academic structure would be left intact.

The report foresees much higher qualification for faculty members and, in line with that, recommends more inducements in the way of fringe benefits and higher salaries to get better people.

It proposes to develop "an excellent faculty through a positive policy of recruitment and retention" and specifically recommends setting a faculty salary goal in the upper range of salaries for "comparable" institutions (Missouri, Illinois, Purdue, Indiana, Ohio State, West Virginia, VPI, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Tennessee.)

The teaching load, under the plan, would not exceed nine hours.

The academic environment of the faculty would be stressed in an effort to encourage scholarly productivity and faculty-student rapport.

In areas where research is not carried on—freshman English, music, or the arts, perhaps—the University would establish the position of lecturer now already used by many colleges. This would allow the professional ranks to become an indication of both the teaching and research ability of a faculty member.

The report says a lecturer would be "an excellent teacher who is not expected to carry on research and who is rewarded solely for his teaching performance."

Generally, however, "the University must insist that the majority of its professional staff are actively and continuously engaged in research and publication, otherwise the proper emphasis on research will not have been achieved."

The report had this comment on the proper approach to research:

"Current intellectual or social fashion alone should not direct the development of the University's research program.

"University research must respond to the needs of its larger community, but then it must be aloof from them. It faces constantly the challenge to examine ideas no matter what their current popularity or feasibility."

The report also suggested that the College of Agriculture and Home Economics reevaluate its statewide role in terms of the changing make-up of Kentucky's population.

The College of Pharmacy, the report suggests, should be moved into the Medical Center instead of remaining apart. "At present," the report went on, "lack of coordination prevails between the two where collaboration seems logical and desirable."

Student life came in for an evaluation of its own in the report. Stating the "University's main goal for the student is intellectual development," the report called for an orientation program that would, in "the first confrontation between the student and the University," insure that the potential does not see the University as a place of "fraternal frivolity, a marriage bureau, or an athletic contest, but that it is primarily a community of scholars dedicated to intellectual enlightenment and development."

The report stresses the importance of a students' campus residence as a place for an "academic atmosphere" to develop. Adequate residence halls and study areas within them, plus a better screening to place students near others with like ideas and interests is suggested.

"The University must endeavor to make ideas a more welcome element of the campus atmosphere," the reports says.

Only the "simultaneous impact which the student will receive from improved classroom and campus activity" will bring about the new breed of student the report envisions.

Leak To Head Team Pre-Civil War Era, Africa In Peru This Summer Subjects Of Recent Books

Donald Leak, director of the University YMCA, will head a group of 12 American college students who this summer will help build a community center and school in Lima, Peru.

The project is sponsored by the National Council of the YMCA and the organization's Ohio-West Virginia area council.

Original plans called for the Americans to work this summer in Cusco, Peru, center of an Inca Indian settlement, but recent peasant revolts in that area resulted in a reassignment.

Fifteen Peruvian university students will work with the Americans in Lima. Leak said the project there will serve as a guide for Peruvian students after the U. S. volunteers depart.

A carved text in stone—the first item ever commissioned for the interior of the University Library—has been received from the British artist, Ralph Beyer.

The Latin inscription translates into English as "the peace of God which passes all understanding."

Beyer designed inscriptions throughout the new Coventry Cathedral in England.

The Roman letters of the UK-commissioned work were carved in a stone known as blue Hordley, quarried in Oxfordshire and frequently used by the famous sculptor, Henry Moore.

Dr. William A. Withington, associate professor of geography at the University, will spend three months this summer in the Republic of Indonesia, where he will teach and conduct research.

He will be a visiting lecturer at the Institute of Agricultural Sciences in Bogor and at the Institute of Technology in Bandung, where UK operates educational support programs under contract with the Agency for International Development.

During much of his stay in Indonesia, the UK geographer will do field work on the island of Sumatra. The work is financed by the UK Research Fund Committee as a part of the new UK Summer Research Fellowship program. Dr. Withington will visit a number of urban centers in Sumatra to study land use and development.

Robert E. Shaver, dean of the University College of Engineering, has been elected president of the Southeastern Section of the American Society for Engineering Education.

Long active in affairs of the Society's southeastern section, which embraces 10 states, Dean Shaver is a past chairman of its administrative unit.

Also elected to a one-year term of office in the section was James F. Thorpe, associate professor in the UK Department of Mechanical Engineering. He is serving as secretary of the research unit.

Dr. Howard Hopkins, professor of pharmacy at the University of Kentucky, has been named to the awards committee of the American Institute of the History of Pharmacy.

Main purpose of the committee, Dr. Hopkins said, is to select an annual winner of the Edward Kremers Award and the George Urdang Medal, two of the top awards presented by a national group for distinguished work in pharmaceutical history.

The University Press has recently published two books by UK professors. The first of these deals with the pre-Civil War era while the other deals with the African continent and the Republic of South Africa.

Historical might-have-beens — outbreak of the American Civil War in Santa Fe instead of Charleston, and in 1850 instead of 1861—are among the topics investigated in a new book, "Prologue to Conflict," just published by the University Press.

The author is Dr. Holman Hamilton, associate professor of history at UK.

In the book, Dr. Hamilton analyzes the Compromise of 1850 and presents several aspects of the troubled era which until now had not been fully developed by historians.

He relates not only the significant roles played in the Compromise by Clay, Calhoun and Webster, but also those taken by such men as Thomas Hart Benton, Howell Cobb, Henry S. Poote and William Wilson Corcoran.

Dr. Hamilton also points out that speculators in Texas securities had an important part in the Compromise, their lobbying activities in Washington being particularly effective.

The UK historian, a former Guggenheim Fellow, is the author of a two-volume biography of Zachary Taylor. He also has written "White House Images and Realities" and is co-author of "The Democratic Experience."

"The City of God and the City of Man in Africa," by Edgar H. Brookes and Amry Vandembosch, has also been published by the University Press.

Brookes is professor emeritus of history and political science at the University of Natal and a former member of the senate of the Union of South Africa.

Dr. Vandembosch is director of the Patterson School of Diplomacy and International Commerce at UK.

Brookes is an associate of author Alan Paton in the South Africa Liberal Party, which advocates creation of a democratic, multi-racial nation in South Africa.

Views expressed in the book by Professor Brookes conflict with those which prevail in his homeland.

Dr. Vandembosch, author of a number of works on international affairs, was a recent visitor to South Africa.

In the book, the UK professor examines political developments of the continent and of the Republic of South Africa. His comments provide background and an American orientation to the essays of Brookes.

Film Series Planned By Religious Advisors

The Religious Advisors Staff of the University will sponsor a summer film series from June 23 through July 21.

Tuesday's film, first in the series, will be "The Ox-Bow Incident" starring Dana Andrews.

Films will be shown at the Student Center Theatre from 7-9:15 p.m. Admission will be 25 cents.

There will be five feature films in the series. After each film persons in the audience who desire will adjourn to a discussion of the film led by students or faculty.

A spokesman for the series said, "We invite everyone to come see these films as art forms in which the writer or the director is seeking to say something to us about life; its meaning, purpose, values, problems and cures. There is more in these films than just entertainment, although we trust that this will be an enjoyable time in the week for us all."

Other dates and films include "On The Waterfront," June 30; "Question 7," July 7; "A Raisin In The Sun," July 14; and "All The Kings Men," July 21.

University To Operate Book Store

The University will return to the bookstore business July 1 for the first time in 33 years.

James Morris, who holds the lease for the University Book Store, has asked to be relieved of that lease. He plans to retire. Robert F. Kerley, vice president for business affairs and treasurer, said the University will begin to operate the book store on its own after the present lease expires on June 30.

Vice President Kerley said that Bill Eblen, at present an employee in the book store, will become manager of the store.

Mr. Morris began operating the book store under a lease from the University January, 1931. He has held a lease for the store ever since. Prior to that, the University had run the store itself.

Music Department Gives Student Recital For Master's Degree

The University Music Department will present in recital Celia Butler, mezzo-soprano, in the Laboratory Theatre in the Fine Arts Building at 8 p.m. tomorrow.

The recital is given in partial fulfillment of the degree of Master of Music in Voice. It will consist solely of German lieder by Schubert, Schumann, Brahms, and Strauss. She will be accompanied by Ann Huddleston, staff accompanist and instructor of voice and piano.

Miss Butler, a student of Phyllis Jenness, assistant professor of voice, has appeared in lead roles in Vaughn Williams' "Riders to the Sea," Gilbert and Sullivan's "Mikado," Puccini's "Sister Angelica," and Stravinsky's "Mavra."

Entertainment Available If You Will Only Look

Although parties and other social events are certainly lacking during the summer at the University, there are many worthwhile things to do.

A good way to spend an evening is to attend the softball and baseball games at Castlewood and Woodland parks. They are league games and provide inexpensive entertainment.

For those who are participants rather than spectators, there are excellent golfing facilities available at the Picadome, located near the Campbell House Inn. The course is open to the public.

There are also numerous miniature golf courses around the city. The Par Three Golf Club, across the road from the Picadome, is open to the public also.

The University tennis courts on Rose Street offer physical recreation facilities. Other public courts are located at Woodland and Castlewood parks.

There are also swimming pools at Woodland and Castlewood parks. The Kentucky River offers water sports and recreation. The State has recently opened a park on the river at Boonesboro. There is another beach at Clay's Ferry, and the admission is only a quarter.

The Religious Advisors and the SC Board will present movies in the Center Theatre in the Student Center, and the Guignol will stage an opera this summer.

There are several downtown movies presenting good entertainment and several drive-in movies along the edge of the city on the beltline.

Lexington prides itself on its many places of historical interest, such as Henry Clay's home, the John Hunt Morgan House, Elmondolf, and the University's Spindletop and Spindletop Hall.

The famous Bluegrass horse farms are also open for tours. The Lexington Junior League Horse Show on July 6-13 will feature hunters, jumpers, and saddle horses. The show will be held in the Red Mile Club House at the Trotting Track.

Papers In Classroom Workshop Ends Today

Elementary and secondary teachers from Kentucky and other parts of the nation are completing today the second week of a University workshop dealing with the use of the newspaper in the classroom.

Featured on the program of the two-week seminar have been Hugh Haynie, cartoonist for the Louisville Courier-Journal, Martin Jesse from the Lexington Herald, and businessmen, publishers, and editors from throughout Kentucky.

Participants in the workshop studied the actual production and publication of a modern newspaper, the newspaper's relation to the local community, and how the newspaper can be used in the classroom.

One highlight of the workshop was a field trip through the entire operation of the Lexington-Herald Leader plant, preceded by a luncheon at the Phoenix Hotel. Alberta Atkinson, an assistant director of the workshop, said, "There are two main purposes of the workshop. One is to improve the actual knowledge that the teacher has of a newspaper so that he is better equipped to use it in the classroom.

"The second purpose is to explore various techniques of using the newspaper in the areas in which the participants are teaching."

The first workshop of this type were held at the University of Louisville in 1961 and 1962 and were sponsored jointly by UL and the Louisville Courier-Journal. The workshop has been sponsored by the University for the last two years.

As a result of last year's workshop, Mr. William Caywood, Kernel adviser, edited a booklet entitled "The Effective Use of the Newspaper in the Classroom," which was distributed in this country and Canada.

Mr. Perry J. Ashley, UK School of Journalism, is director of the workshop. Assistant directors are LaNelle Woods, Alberta Atkinson, Sally Kinney, and Helen Cooke.

Softball

Results of the opening games of Cooperstown softball are BC defeated A, 13-10. This game was featured by a triple play and home runs by Jerry Woolum and Kelly Chapman. E defeated D, 15-12, with John Dickson slugging a homer. F topped G, 7-4, in the other contest.
