Road race helps with cancer fund

By JAMES HOUNCHELL
Contributing Writer

The annual Delta Delta Delta "Run for the Kids" was held yesterday and drew about 200 participants to its five-kilometer charity run.

The purpose of the event is "to raise money for the McDowell Cancer Network, which is one of our philanthropic projects," said Susan Bridges, service projects chairwoman for the Tri-Deltis.

The Tri-Deltis received assistance in sponsoring the run this year from White Mountain Creamery. Bridges said the business was a "terrific sponsor."

Contestants were divided into categories according to their age and sex. There was also a special division for greeks who wanted to participate.

Fraternities and sororities entered as two-person teams, with combined their runners' scores and were only in competition with other greek organizations.

Members of the ROTC also competed in the run. Although the group in formation, members were entered separately by their age and sex.

Delta Delta Delta sorority members cheer home the finishers of the 5,000-meter 'Run for the Kids' yesterday.

Last year the Tri-Deltis contributed about $1,200 to the McDowell Cancer Network and most of this money came from the "Run for the Kids," Bridges said.

Although the exact amount raised this year hasn't been totaled yet, Bridges is optimistic that the sorority will be able to contribute a similar amount this year.

T-shirt sales for the run are an important part of the fund raising and are still available for those who would like to purchase them.

Fraternities and sororities who participated in the event received greek points for their effort.

The best time for the day in the men's division was earned by Charles Yeomans, who ran the race in 15:48.

UK gets record money from grants, contracts

By DAVID NAVLOR
Staff Writer

A $13.5 million grant from the Agency for International Development has helped UK establish a record $51 million in grants and contracts.

The amount surpasses the previous record of $42.5 million, set in 1981. In 1984-85, the University received $38.4 million in grants and contracts.

According to Susan Donohew, spokeswoman for the UK Research Foundation, the main reason larger grants are being received is because of what she terms "family involvement."

"Family involvement means that many of our grants and contracts are for multidisciplinary areas, such as the two newer groups, the cancer center and newly established aging center," Donohew said.

Donohew added that the multidisciplinary approach tends to create "spin-off" programs, which in turn generate more funding. She cited UK's Center for Excellence as an example, which involves 60 faculty members and has attracted $6 million in grants and contracts.

"Family involvement means that many of our grants and contracts are for multidisciplinary areas, such as the two newer groups, the cancer center and newly established aging center."

Susan Donohew,
UK Research Foundation

Donohew said increased recruiting for funds by both the research foundation and the faculty has brought about the record funding increase. Most of the grant money has come from the government.

Donohew said that in the 1960s, most recruitment of funds was done by the administration and that those funds were used only to assist the faculty. However, in the 70s, recruitment increased and funding has now put UK in competition with other major universities.

During the 20th annual Omicron Delta Kappa president's dinner, UK President Otis A. Singletary said that when he first arrived at UK, donations amounted to only $600,000. Singletary expressed his pleasure over the record, saying that the record "is a clear indication that this University is fulfilling its responsibilities in research and public service."

The international development grant that helped put UK over the top will assist the government of Indonesia in upgrading its higher education system.

The breakdown of grants and contracts last year shows that 65.2 percent of the money went to the UK campus, 26 percent to the Medical Center, 7.8 percent to the community colleges and 1 percent to the president's office. In past years, the proportions were similar, with the bulk of funding remaining on main campus.

Former attorney general defends Supreme Court in law college lecture

By SHARON RATCHFORD
Staff Writer

The framers of the Constitution intended for the U.S. Supreme Court to be the nation's leading authority on law, said Griffin Bell, the U.S. attorney general under former President Jimmy Carter.

Speaking to about 225 lawyers, law students and Lexington residents Friday evening in Memorial Hall, Bell said the Supreme Court's powers come from the Constitution.

"There's little doubt that the framers of the Constitution meant the Supreme Court to be the law of the land," Bell said.

In defining the court's power, Bell also addressed presidential candidate the Rev. Pat Robertson's recent statement that the Supreme Court can declare what is unconstitutional but does not have the right to make laws to enforce their decisions.

"The basic idea of the United States government is 'liberty under the law,'" said the 62-year-old attorney. "It is not good citizenship to simply refuse to follow Supreme Court decisions."

Bell's speech was the fifth in the UK College of Law's biennial Mac Swinford lectures.

Bell spent most of his 35-minute speech outlining the development of the Supreme Court's powers.

One example Bell discussed was the 1954 case of Brown vs. the Topeka Board of Education. In that case, the Supreme Court declared the policy of having "separate but equal" public schools unconstitutional. When the states didn't make new laws in accordance with the Supreme Court's decision, the court enforced it by establishing busing and affirmative action policies, said Carroll Stevens, an assistant dean of UK's College of Law in a phone interview Saturday.

Bell said that while it is right for the Supreme Court to interpret the

Senate nearing passage of ambitious drug bill

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press

The Senate is nearing passage of a $1.4 billion measure to combat drug abuse after backing off the stiffest features of a counterpart bill passed by the House — ordering the military to seal U.S. borders against smugglers and establishing the death penalty in major drug cases.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said yesterday that the House's demand that the military intercept all drug shipments from abroad was absurd.

Interviewed on CBS' "Face the Nation," Weinberger said the military is already "doing a very great deal" to fight drugs, providing logistical help to other nations for drug raids, as was the case recently in Bolivia.

But he noted that 76,000 airplanes cross the U.S. borders every day, and "we haven't yet discovered the means to know what's inside each one of them." To meet the mandate of the House bill, "we'd have to start shooting planes down."

He added: "I don't think you want your military out acting like local police. I don't."

The Senate plowed through a series of amendments to its bill by early yesterday, before ending a marathon day that also saw the Republican-controlled chamber pass a landmark tax-overhaul bill. It will return to the bill tomorrow afternoon.

Senate passage would send the bill to a House-Senate conference committee to reconcile the differences between the two versions. That panel will try to work quickly so both chambers can pass the same bill and send it to President Reagan before adjournment.

Many senators declared that their constituents are deeply worried about the drug issue and are demanding strong action, with elections barely a month away.

But the death-penalty provision was withdrawn even after a majority of the Senate effectively voted for it, and only 14 senators supported expanded use of the military.

The Democratic-controlled House approved the imposition of the death penalty for persons convicted of large-scale drug sales. A similar amendment to the Senate version was offered by Sen. Mack Mattingly, R-Ga., who called it a good way to deal with "murderous drug kingpins."

An attempt to kill Mattingly's amendment was voted down, 60-25, but he withdrew after winning that key test. Mattingly said opponents of his measure would filibuster final Senate action on the bill, which would block its chances for the year. He noted that the conference committee might retain the provision.

The military amendment was rejected 72-14 after opponents argued that it would violate individuals' civil rights and would detract from the military's chief mission of defending the nation against armed enemy attack.

The Senate did vote 83-4 approval of an amendment that would give the secretary of defense three months to send Congress a list of what actions the U.S. military can take to aid anti-drug efforts by civilian agencies.

Both bills would increase spending for drug interdiction and eradication, education, treatment and local law enforcement. They would also increase penalties for drug possession and sales, outlaw "designer drugs" and tighten provisions used to fight money-laundering by drug dealers.

UK names new director of music

By MARK SCHWERIN
Contributing Writer

Pianist, administrator and music instructor Alan B. Hersh characterizes the University music department as a "sleeping giant."

Hersh, who took over as UK's music director earlier this month, plans to remedy that situation by making the budget for the School of Music one of his priorities.

"We have outstanding faculty, an excellent program but not enough financial resources," he said. "The faculty often have to use their own money for their projects. We also need money for student travel, new equipment and to improve the building."

A large, robust man "somewhere between the ages of 40 and 75," Hersh had to decide as a young man between the piano keyboard and the football gridiron.

"At about 13 or 14, I had to make a choice between playing football or pursuing a musical career. I usually tell people I made the wrong choice," Hersh said.

Instead of throwing touchdown passes, Hersh continued his studies at the Manhattan School of Music, when he was 12 years old. By the time he was 22, he had earned a bachelor's and master's degree from the school.

Hersh had to put his teaching and academic pursuits on hold for three years when he was drafted into the Army in 1962. Upon leaving the Army, he taught music for five years at Central Connecticut State College.

Eventually, Hersh went back to school at the University of Indiana, where he earned a doctorate with high honors in 1971.

In 1972, he was made chairman of the music department at Slippery Rock State College in Pennsylvania. He then served as chairman of the music department at Augustana College in Rock Island, Ill., from 1976 to 1982.

UK student killed in car crash

Staff reports

CINCINNATI — A UK student was killed in a car accident early Saturday morning as he and a friend were driving southbound on I-74.

Michael J. Durrett, an electrical engineering senior, was pronounced dead at 7:55 a.m. at University Hospital in Cincinnati.

According to a police report, Terrence Siefert, the owner and driver of the car, was charged with aggravated vehicular homicide after his car struck a disabled car at 3:50 a.m. in the emergency lane where I-74 joins with I-75.

Siefert was released on $1,000 bond. Cause of the accident is still under investigation.

Durrett, 21, was a resident of Crestview Hills, Ky., and was a graduate of Covington Catholic High School.

Christian hardline militiamen quash Syrian-backed attackers

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Christian militia hardliners crushed a comeback attempt by an ousted, pro-Syrian commander yesterday in 24 hours of street battles in Christian east Beirut, which police said killed 62 people and wounded 196.

Fighting began at dawn Saturday when about 600 supporters of Elie Hobeika, former commander of the Lebanese Forces Christian militia, stormed across the Green Line dividing east Beirut from the Moslem western sector.

"The last pocket of resistance was mopped up at daybreak, when 12 infiltrators from Elie Hobeika's supporters surrendered," said a communique issued by the Lebanese Forces, the nation's largest Christian militia.

Police confirmed that loyalists of Lebanese Forces commander Samir Geagea defeated the pro-Hobeika attackers.

There was no word on the whereabouts of Hobeika, who was ousted from the command of the Lebanese

Forces by Geagea's hardliners Jan. 15 for signing a Syrian-sponsored peace pact with Moslem militia leaders. President Amin Gemayel, himself a Maronite Catholic, was among the Christians who felt the accord's power-sharing provisions conceded too much to the Moslems.

One report yesterday, not confirmed, said Hobeika was in Chitara, the Bekaa Valley town that houses command headquarters of 25,000 Syrian troops stationed in Lebanon under a 1976 peacekeeping mandate from the Arab League.

The collapse of Hobeika's thrust consolidated Geagea's position as the strongman of Lebanon's 1.8 million Christians.

Pro-Geagea militiamen in armored personnel carriers and jeeps mounted with 106mm recoilless rifles yesterday patrolled all four residential districts where street fighting raged all day Saturday.

Hundreds of residents trapped in basements and bomb shelters by the fighting cautiously ventured out to take stock of losses, which police estimated at about $10 million.

Broken power cables dangled across streets littered with broken glass in the sprawling district of Ashrafiyeh, where the heaviest fighting took place. Dozens of cars were reduced to piles of charred, twisted metal.

The army's 10th Brigade, predominantly Christian, replaced Christian militiamen along the east Beirut side of the Green Line.

The army stepped in Saturday to help beat back the pro-Hobeika attackers. The regulars then took over Geagea's Green Line positions in a bid to avert an outbreak of all-out civil war after Hobeika's defeat, according to police.

They said three soldiers were killed and five wounded Hobeika supporters lost 25 killed and 42 wounded and Geagea's militia 27 killed and 56 wounded.

Seven other people were killed and 95 wounded in shelling duels across the Green Line.

Spontaneous mortar exchanges persisted yesterday, but no fresh casualties were reported by police.

meaning of the law as it is written in the Constitution, it should show restraint in making laws to remedy the nation's problems.

However, the right to make such laws exists, and Robertson's comment to the contrary was "a daft statement for a lawyer to make," Stevens said.

Robertson has a law degree from Yale University, Stevens said.

Bell's speech was a "very learned discussion of the history of constitutional development," said Rufus Lisle, a 77-year-old Lexington lawyer.

Lisle noted that Bell made no predictions on what course the Supreme Court would follow under new Chief Justice William Rehnquist.

Bell does, however, support Rehnquist's appointment on the grounds that the accusations brought against him were political and not based on his merits, Stevens said.

Bell served as the 72nd attorney general of the United States during former President Jimmy Carter's term.

And for Bell, there is life after being the nation's top law official. He still argues cases before the U.S. Supreme Court, Stevens said.

Bell is the senior partner and chairman of the Atlanta law firm King & Spalding.

He served as a judge in the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals from 1961 to 1976.

Bell was born in Americus, Ga., in 1918. He graduated from Mercer University's law school in 1948, where the Griffin Boyette Bell Chair of Law has been founded, Stevens said.

Bell is also president of the American College of Trial Lawyers and a member of the American Law Institute.

1986, before coming to UK in August as a professor.

On Sept. 16, he was approved by the UK Board of Trustees to head the School of Music.

Hersh, a New York City native who grew up in Freehold, N.J., describes his role in UK's music department as a "facilitator."

"My responsibilities include assisting the faculty, curriculum, budget, community outreach and to encourage students to attend," he said. "I don't like the term recruiting. It sounds too much like the Army."

"I direct opinion, provide the faculty with support and help the faculty achieve what they think is important," he said.

Hersh, who said he rates the music program at UK very highly, decided he needed to be a part of a larger program than the one at Augustana College.

"I spent 10 years at a private liberal arts school with 2,200 students and no graduate program," Hersh said. "At UK, we have three times more faculty, four times as many students and a graduate program. It's a plum for me to be selected to head this department."

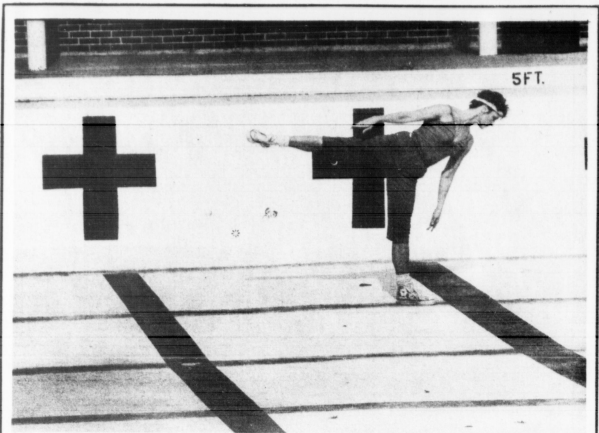

Hersh, who likes all kinds of music, still performs on the stage and will give a recital on Jan. 18 at the UK Center for the Arts.

In addition, he will be the host of a radio program titled: "The Piano Dynamic." The show will be broadcast on WKYF-FM at 8:30 p.m. on Sundays starting Oct. 12.

The half-hour program will feature commentary by Hersh, as well as music he selects.

Besides his many musical accomplishments as a performing pianist, Hersh has received academic awards as well.

While at Slippery Rock State College, he was elected to the "Outstanding Educators in America" in 1975, and received the Mellon Faculty Fellowship for research and performance at Augustana College.

Peace offering

Woodland Festival Peace Dance enacted to challenge danger of nuclear arms

By LESLIE ANN LYONS
Contributing Writer

"The fantastic robot president says 'Armageddon and you laugh,'" sang John Maraskin, as peace messages took to the sky from a mushroom cloud-shaped balloon yesterday.

The "mush-balloon" was part of the Peace Dance, one of many events during the daylong Woodland Dance Festival.

The plastic "mush-balloon" grew to only 10 feet, compared to the expected 20 feet.

However, combined with the Peace Dance choreographed by Pamela Wood and live music provided by area musicians, the balloon helped portray the problems posed by living in the shadow of nuclear warfare.

"Our aim is to confront this issue in a positive light and illustrate through the visual and performance arts, the possibilities of regaining control of an arms race which threatens our future," said Patrick McNeese, co-creator of the "mush-balloon."

During the event, performers and spectators alike joined hands and began circling the balloon, while Maraskin continued with the words "love is a chain reaction."

The most unique aspect of the festival, said artistic director, Mariah Kruse, was that "it brings a group of people here that wouldn't have ordinarily come together."

Complex 'Brazil' offers socio-political prophecy

MOVIE REVIEW

To some viewers, Terry Gilliam's ambitious "Brazil" may appear boring or too disparate to maintain their attention.

Then again, the movie may prove more realistic, that is, more representative of our own times than at first perceived.

The story takes up where George Orwell's 1984 leaves off: "somewhere in the 20th century" (which we read on the screen at the beginning of "Brazil"), in a totalitarian society where infinite, similarly dressed bureaucrats mill about, sorting papers and watching television screens for the day's reports.

This society of nameless, generic-faced people is supported by another nameless, faceless working class, who live at the factories where they work. There are arbitrary arrests of "seditionists" by the police, but those arrests are nothing more than business as usual.

The main character, Sam Lowry (Jonathan Pryce), represents one of those bureaucrats, except that he comes from a wealthier background. His mother, Katherine (Helmond), possesses the means for him to advance in government, but Lowry doesn't have the stomach.

Instead, he dreams of himself as a hero of the Greek tradition, complete with Icarus wings and a Juggernaut to fight. In addition, he must rescue The Lady, who both in his dreams and in reality is played by Kim Greist. As with most tales like this, the woman is the man's downfall.

Lowry spends the rest of the movie trying to find and make love to this elusive woman, which can only spell political doom for him.

"Brazil" almost didn't make it to the screen, even though Universal Studios had financed it. And for whatever reason, it didn't run long in any theaters (it lasted a week in Lexington), so it is now making a return engagement at the Kentucky.

"Brazil" does present a complex plot, and it has an overwhelming list of characters, a cache of dazzling special effects, a number of literary allusions and a rather bleak vision of the future. This last issue may prove the movie's strength.

Unlike Orwell's 1984 society, Gilliam's society seems a bit more benign. People have at their disposal numerous material goods, occasions for lavish parties, specialists for any whim and guaranteed housing, complete with the latest appliances.

The only requirement for unhampered citizenship is that you say or do nothing against the state, under penalty of a painful, sadistic death. And that is the movie's frightening lesson. It implies that in a world that caters to all physical desires, people should learn to trust their government, even one where citizens are executed for what may be considered a whim.

The scary thing about this idea is that most people, including freedom-loving Americans, would be content with that situation. So what about government, as long as we are properly clothed, housed, entertained?

In "Brazil," Gilliam answers the question in his own way. And that answer is what puts this ostensibly futuristic movie much closer to our own times than we might care to think.

"Brazil" is rated R and will continue at the Kentucky today and tomorrow.

Registering to vote first step in making people's voice heard

It's that time of year again. Autumn approaches and so does another season of voter registration.

To most of you this is meaningless. You're bored by the entire process, from registering to the levers in the booth. According to statistics showing low voter turnout, many of you are so disgusted by or apathetic to the political process that any call to do something as simple and painless as registering to vote is likely to fall on deaf ears.

That's unfortunate, because you deprive yourself of even a small voice in the running of your community. Yeah, you've heard it all before, about how this country is a democracy (actually a democratic republic but why quibble) and in order to keep it one, we all need to take part in our government and let our voices be heard. That is the only way to guarantee that our leaders represent us.

As old as that message may be, it is as true now as when first spoken.

In November, the voters of Lexington and Fayette County will decide whether the Sunday sale of alcohol will be allowed in their community. Because alcohol is a subject UK students tend to have some opinion about and because students do spend most of their year in Lexington, it seems that if there was ever a time when the ability to vote would be useful to a UK student, this is it.

Last week Student Government Association conducted a voter registration drive on campus. Although the drive is over, the chance to register is not. Those wishing to vote in Fayette County will have the chance to register through Friday. The proper forms are available in the SGA office in the Student Center. And of course, there are people at the courthouse downtown who are always willing to assist new voters.

So if you haven't done so already, take the time to register. Who knows, once you've taken part in a community election, you might look at the gubernatorial race and then the congressional races, and you might find that you like having a voice.

Columnist rambles

In more than four years at UK, this semester's editorials are the worst I've ever read in the Kernel. This conclusion was reached after reading the Sept. 25 column by Kake Urch. Her columns are melodramatic, rambling and in several instances syntactically incorrect.

Finally, I see no justification of the inclusion of "Woolworth's best green mascara" on the editorial page.

Oh well, what do you expect for free?

Barry D. Burchett
Math/science senior

Fashion show

Tomorrow the 16 homecoming royalty semi-finalists will be modeling the latest fall fashions provided by local clothing merchants. The 1986 Homecoming fashion show will begin at 8 p.m. in the Student Center Grand Ballroom.

The lovely candidates will be escorted by 16 of Lexington's most handsome gentlemen, and there may be some surprises in store for the audience.

Several door prizes will be given away and there will be royally voting immediately after the show, so bring your UK ID and activities card!

Be sure to come enjoy the show, as well as support your favorite candidate with your applause and your vote.

Brandi Wickline,
SAB public relations committee

Court selection

Today through Wednesday voting for this year's homecoming queen and court takes place. In order to vote, students must bring their student IDs and activities cards to the voting location.

Voting can be done at the Student Center, Classroom Building, College of Business & Economics, M. I. King Library, Complex Commons and residence halls.

Hope to see you at homecoming when UK plays Southern Mississippi at 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

Columns reflect unfair assessment of Robertson campaign

Over the past several days, those of us who read the Kernel editorial page have been treated to some wonderful examples of censorship and depriving our citizens of their Constitutional rights.

What have those obscene fundamentalists done now, you ask? Nothing. This infringement of your rights and mine is being wags from the ranks of the so-called liberal factions of our society.

Before I continue I think it is should be made known that I am not, at this writing, a supporter of Pat Robertson's political ambitions, nor am I a religious fundamentalist, I am not even what one might call a right-winger. Now with those facts known, let's continue.

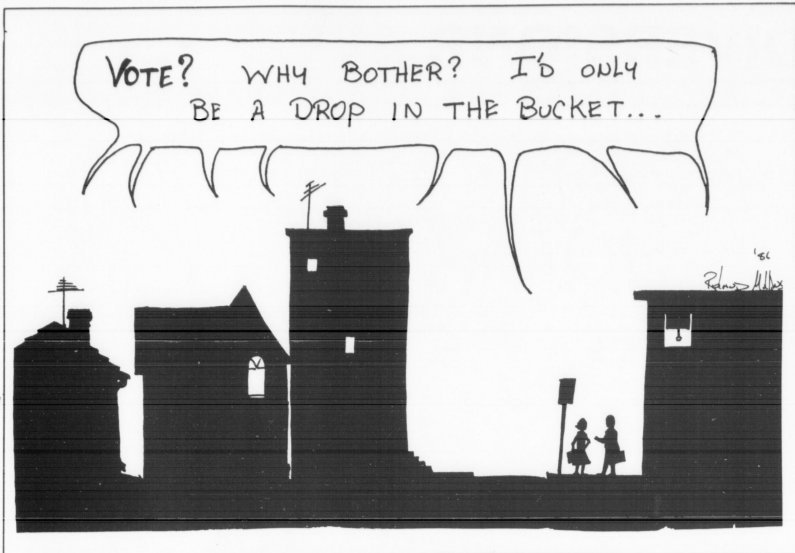

A column ran on Sept. 25 by Luca Dal Monte is an example of this disturbing trend against Americans' freedoms. Mr. Dal Monte poetically asked the question, "Who is Pat Robertson to try to dismantle what the Sage of Monticello with grand wisdom gifted us?"

Guest OPINION

Well first of all, Mr. Dal Monte, Pat Robertson is a citizen of the United States and he has as much right to run for any office in this country as Thomas Jefferson. Secondly, I have never heard Pat Robertson even remotely insinuate that part of his political platform was the combination of church and state.

If for one would like to give Pat a chance to tell us what his plans are before I condemn him.

The following day it was Kake Urch's chance to "razzily" Pat Robertson. Ms. Urch went so far as to suggest that Robertson is planning to repeal the First Amendment. For those of you didn't listen in History 108, Ms. Urch included, that's the

Diversity gives U.S. character not low IQ

The United States might not have the reputation for greatness that we proud-Americans think it has.

At least, not in the Great East. Yeah, it seems some of the Japanese are laughing behind our backs. Shooting holes in the land of the free, home of the brave.

And you know what's causing our low intelligence quotient?

Well, not in so many words. But he thinks the intelligence level in the good of U.S. A. is lower than that of Japan's.

Of course, after he shot off his mouth and his fumble appeared in print, Nakasone amended his statement.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said the prime minister had been taken out of context. (Coincidentally, two Japanese newspapers quoted him out of context in the exact same way.) That wasn't what the prime minister said exactly.

Fran STEWART

"The prime minister said in effect that the United States was a multi-racial society and had been making great progress as a democracy overcoming educational, social and other issues associated with such a background.

Oh, I see. So, it's not that we're stupid. We're just illiterate.

You know, Juan can't read. So, Mr. Prime Minister, sir, what do you propose we do about our problem? Amend the engraving on the Statue of Liberty to "Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses yearning to be free, but any one with an IQ of less than 100 can take refuge elsewhere?"

Or maybe we could have police set up periodic roadblocks to give pop quizzes on proper grammar.

Yeah, we don't need no dummies. We're Americans. It was real nice of you, Mr. Prime Minister, sir, to concede that we've been making great progress as a democratic nation. With what we have to work with and all. I mean, your nation is all one race. So I guess it doesn't have any undesirable holding it back.

Maybe we could have police set up periodic roadblocks to give pop quizzes on proper grammar.

Maybe we are stupid. We buy your cars, radios, cameras, when we could be buying American. Most of us are at least smart enough to know a bargain when we see one.

I'd be the first to admit that the United States has a problem with illiteracy. Not intelligence, just illiteracy. I'm appalled at the number of high school graduates who can't read, amazed at the number of students who drop out of school.

In other words, I'm not really impressed with the educational system in the United States. I think it could and should be better and all it would take is a willingness on our part to make it better. To emphasize education over recreation to show that it's more important what you know than who you know.

So, maybe ours is an attitude problem, not an ethnic one. Maybe, when you get right down to it, we're all the same, all capable of the same greatness.

But, Mr. Nakasone, your comments are just proof that prejudice and bigotry are worldwide problems.

But it was so kind of you to apologize later (and it only took a little push, er... shove, from Japanese lawmakers) for possibly offending those of us who believe that diversity gives America strength and character.

"I have always firmly believed that America's greatness derives from the dynamism and achievements of her many ethnic communities," Nakasone said in an apology released last week. "It was not my intention whatsoever to imply any racial discrimination nor to criticize any aspect of the American society."

"It is my strong political commitment to strengthen the friendship between our two peoples, and I am determined to work for this cause."

Yeah, right. Personally, Mr. Prime Minister, sir, I'm not interested in politics and your apology reeks of it.

UK has right to enforce alcohol policy

"Many a person seems to think it isn't enough for the government to guarantee him the pursuit of happiness. He insists it also run interference for him." — Anonymous

After reading the guest opinion published Sept. 24, I was inspired to respond to that opinion put forth by Cyndi Weaver in support of David Botkins' legislation.

The initial claim, "The rights of students including that to consume alcohol, are as fundamentally important as those of staff, faculty and administration."

Question No. 1: David, are you saying that a student who is 21 years old has the right to consume alcohol regardless of the University's and state's right to designate where and when alcohol is to be consumed?

Question No. 2: Cyndi, you stated quite clearly that a dorm room is leased to a student. Do you not understand that leases are contracts with specific regulations that limit in what ways the lease may and may not use the property?

Guest OPINION

if it is all so important for you to pursue the creation of a right to consume alcohol in the residence halls, would it not be of equal importance for the University community Why?

I would be more inclined to believe that both of you are not at all interested in understanding this issue so much as you are interested in the publicity you stand to gain by pushing this popular issue in front of the University community.

You haven't ever pursued the issue of pets in residence halls. And of your own evaluation of what an issue is, pets would be an issue—but not very popular.

Neither of you have been able to accurately define why consumption of alcohol in residence halls is a fundamental right.

Cyndi, you stress the importance of a lease and then fail to see past your own handwriting. It works both ways, Cyndi. If a student signs a lease, the University has a right to enforce the lease so long as it doesn't break the law.

Just for your information, Cyndi, had you or David done a little research, you would find that the administrative regulations stipulate:

"Displaying or consuming alcoholic beverages, or exhibiting drunken behavior, are prohibited activities. And part of your agreement with the University.

Now, as for the difference between where and when alcohol can be sold on state property and when it cannot, I invite you to do some research on the subject.

Try to think about the differences between faculty clubs and residence halls. Try to understand that when the legislation was passed to limit the use of alcohol on public property, it was done so properly, with work and research.

The key element was the notion that people either have a right to use alcohol any and everywhere or they have a right to alcohol-free public property, in my opinion.

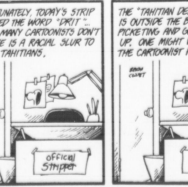

Evidently, it was decided that private institutions could handle the alcoholic environment, and public property could provide the alcohol-free environment.

The faculty club will be subject to specific laws governing the legality of liquor sales on state property. Before you comment on these laws, I recommend that you do your homework first. Then please answer my questions.

I just want to be popular.

Shaun Meredith is a philosophy junior.

Defense main key as Wildcats hold off Cincy for road win

Lucas out for season with knee injury; Baker could return after ankle heals

By BRETT HAIT
Senior Staff Writer

CINCINNATI — An old football adage says offense sells tickets but defense wins games.

And by beating the Cincinnati Bearcats Saturday afternoon at Riverfront Stadium, the Kentucky Wildcats took that theory to its limit.

Cornerback David Johnson and linebacker Chris Chenuault turned in interceptions into touchdowns to offset a strong Cincinnati passing attack and beat the hosts 37-20.

"The score was not a good indication of how close the game really was," Kentucky coach Jerry Claiborne said. "Cincinnati played a good game from the beginning to the end."

The Cincinnati offense, led by junior quarterback Danny McCoin, outgained Kentucky in total offense, 423 yards to 288. But it was the Wildcats' big plays on defense that led them to victory.

"The ultimate thing you can do on defense is score," defensive tackle John Shannon said. "You always shoot for that."

Chenuault's score came near the end of the second quarter with Cincinnati holding a 9-7 margin and driving to another score.

McCoin, who said UK's defense harassed him all day, tossed a pass to the left side, where Chenuault picked it off and went 65 yards untouched to give UK a 13-9 halftime lead.

"I saw the quarterback scrambling, so I waited for the opportunity to break to the ball," Chenuault said. "I poured it on and gave it everything I had. It was the greatest feeling I've ever had."

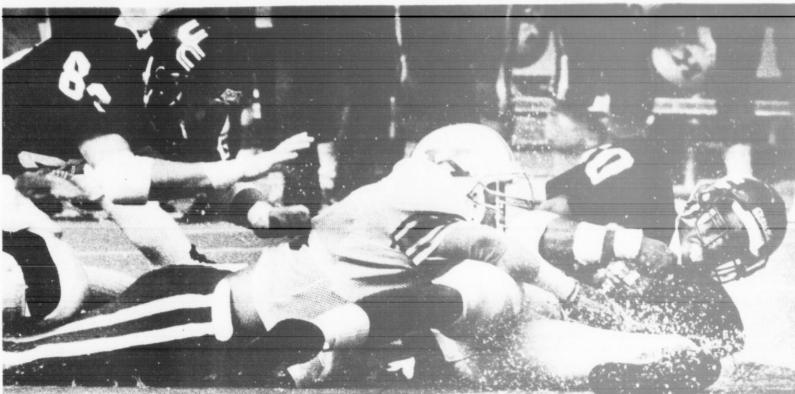

Johnson's score came in the third quarter and gave UK, now 24-1, a comfortable 20-9 lead. Johnson picked off a McCoin toss at his own 5-yard line and went 56 yards for the score.

"I thought I would run out of bounds, but I got some good blocking," Johnson said. "A play like that brings everybody up a little. These are the exciting parts of the game, but I've never been so tired in my life."

McCoin, who finished the day with 303 yards passing, said his two interceptions turned the game around.

"It made a big difference," he said. "They were two of the worst passes I've thrown all year."

A driving rain in the 30 minutes prior to kickoff soaked the field and produced a number of slips, falls and dropped passes. Early in the first quarter, a clipping call negated a 37-yard punt return for a touchdown by Kentucky's Cornell Burbage.

Johnson later recovered a fumbled Cincinnati punt at the Bearcats' 15-yard line to set up the first UK score.

Kentucky quarterback Bill Ransdell hit reserve tight end Joe Curry for a 15-yard scoring strike to give the Wildcats an early lead.

The Bearcats struck back when McCoin and Stargel hooked up on a 58-yard touchdown pass to tie the score at seven.

On UK's next possession, Cincinnati linebacker Alex Gordon sacked Ransdell in the end zone for a safety, giving the Bearcats their only lead before Chenuault's touchdown gave UK the lead for good.

Kentucky fullbacks Andy Murray and Marc Logan added 1-yard scoring plunges in the second half to pad the Wildcats' lead. Joe Worley also added a 45-yard field goal for the Wildcats.

A UC record crowd of 36,233 watched the Bearcats drop their second game in four starts, but the Kentucky fans who made the trip may have outnumbered the Cincinnati fans.

"I don't normally hear the fans, but I knew they were there," Claiborne said.

Freshman running back Al Baker and senior tight end Matt Lucas both underwent surgery yesterday at Central Baptist Hospital for leg injuries they sustained in Saturday's win over Cincinnati.

Baker had a plate put in his right ankle to stabilize his fractured ankle, UK trainer Al Green said. Green said Baker, who also had ruptured ligaments repaired during the surgery, may return to the team this season.

Lucas, who missed four games last season with a leg injury, had torn ligaments repaired in his right knee and will be out of action for the remainder of the season, the trainer said.

Baker will be on crutches for at least three weeks, Green said, while Lucas will need crutches for six to eight weeks.

Green said Baker's injury wasn't as serious as it at first seemed and he should be "as good as new" after he heals.

Lady Kats defeat UT, win two on the road

Staff reports

The Lady Kat volleyball team kicked off its Southeastern Conference season Friday night in the Avia Classic with a victory over previously unbeaten Tennessee on the Lady Vols' home court (13-15, 15-9, 15-12, 15-11).

Kentucky was led by Lisa Bokovoy, who had 21 kills, 17 digs and eight blocks against UT.

Saturday the Lady Kats knocked off George Washington in four games (11-15, 15-8, 15-6, 15-8) and closed out the weekend with a loss to Central Michigan (15-5, 15-10, 13-15, 4-15, 5-15).

Against Central Michigan, UK had a one-point lead (13-12) in the third game of the match but gave up three points for the loss. UK is now 9-3 on the season.

Boston blitzes Toronto, wins AL East

By DAVE O'HARA
Associated Press

BOSTON — Wade Boggs became the first Boston player to get 200 hits in four consecutive seasons yesterday as the Red Sox clinched the American League East championship with a 12-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

With a 93-61 record and their first division title since 1975, the Red Sox will meet the California Angels for the AL pennant in a best-of-7 series opening here on Oct. 7.

The AL East was the last of the major league's four divisions to be settled and marked the earliest date since division play began in 1968 that all races were over.

Boston eliminated Toronto, its challenger and winner of the division last year, by breaking out of a mild hitting slump and capitalizing on Blue Jay errors for five runs in the second inning and four unearned runs in the fourth.

Staked to the big lead, Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd breezed to his 16th victory, a career high. Boyd, who has lost 10, scattered eight hits, including a two-run homer by Lloyd Mose-by in the fourth and Moseby's RBI single in the fifth.

Boggs, bidding for his third batting championship, walked twice and lined out to right before getting his 200th hit with a two-run single in the fourth. He drove in a third run with a grounder in Boston's two-run eighth inning. He went 1-for-4 as his average fell a point to .352, two percentage points better than New York's Don Mattingly.

Marty Barrett drove in four runs with a bases-loaded walk and three singles, while Don Baylor had a two-run single in the big second.

The Blue Jays, whose faint hopes of overtaking Boston were crushed in a 2-0 loss to southpaw Bruce Hurst on Saturday, gambled on right-hander Duane Ward, acquired from the Atlanta Braves in July.

Ward lasted less than two innings in a 2-0 loss to southpaw Bruce Hurst on Saturday, gambled on right-hander Duane Ward, acquired from the Atlanta Braves in July.

Rich Gedman put Boston in front to stay with a double driving in the first run in the second.
