INTRAMURAL

By MARVIN N. GAY

The tenth annual intramural basketball tournament got under way Wednesday night in the Gym Annex with six independent teams providing action in the opening round.

In all, a total of 24 teams are participating in the title quest, 7 independent teams and 17 fraternality fives.

Independent teams expected to make a strong bid for the championship are U. K. Band and Tartars. The strongest fraternality fives, according to their managers, are Phi Delta Theta, Phi Kappa Tau, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Chi, Alpha Tau Omega, and Delta Chi.

Three fraternity teams were scheduled to battle for supremacy last night. Five games are on tonight's card, Tartar vs. RDK, U. K. Independents vs. Refugees, Chipmen vs. U. K. Band, SN vs. LCA, and PSK vs. KS.

Under the tournament rules, a team must win three games in order to qualify for the finals. If a team forfeits twice, it will be automatically eliminated from the tournament.

Dormitory Girl Tells How Their Meals Are Cooked

By LESLIE LEE JONES

Crystal drops of sweat began to emerge on the otherwise dark and wrinkled brow of Mary, head cook at the women's residence halls of the University, as she stooped to stick a long-handled fork into each of the ten beef roasts which had been baking all afternoon to turn delicate cinnamon-brown faces up to her now, as she opened the oven doors.

Over in the pastry room, Nannie, the colored woman who specializes in making pies, cakes, pudding and hot rolls, was deftly rolling round little rolls against one another in a tray. She had to space each one exactly right because there were six hundred and one of them. Six hundred and one because upstairs at six o'clock two hundred and three girls would be anxiously awaiting hot bread.

Years ago, when as a small child I slipped into the kitchen where grandmother and the auntie were busy preparing Thanksgiving dinner, I remembered feeling uneasy and out of place as I did now. No matter where I stood I seemed to be in the way. In this suburban kitchen where four cooks reign supreme, I felt small and insignificant as these women ruffled about in their stiff, blue uniforms turning potatoes, stirring gravy and dishing up the meat on long white platters.

Every night, promptly at six o'clock, two hundred and three girls turn out of their respective rooms at Boyd and Patterson halls to become engulfed in the sea of women that swarm into the brightly-lighted dining room. As the co-ed's chatter fills the room and dishes of food are served by the colored waitresses in gray and white uniforms, very few of the girls realize the work that was necessary preparatory to cooking the food, and afterwards the final and most important step in cooking and seasoning the vegetables, meats, and desserts that are a part of every meal.

Mary, who is "big boss" of the cuisine, superintends the preparing of all the food, and keeps an eye on the various pans bubbling on the stove. She came to Kentucky from Texas on the recommendation of Mrs. Alfred Washington, who is the new dietitian at Boyd hall.

I walked slowly over to the whirling machine where Nannie, the Irish queen who has been cooking for ten years, was watching an electric blender angrily whip some white, frothy mixture.

"Mindly I asked, 'That's cream, isn't it?'"

At this question she threw her big, kinky head and shook with laughter. "No'm," she said, "that's fo'ly egg whites whipping around together. That's the topping for your rice pudding tonight."

Unwilling to show my culinary ignorance before this experienced negro cook any longer, I backed out of the room and climbed the stairs to the dining room. Dinner was served. Everywhere I looked, hungry mouths were engaged in the none-too-pretty process of eating the delicious, well-prepared food. Downstairs four pairs of feet shuffled wearily over the floor, as four tired, colored women breathed a sigh of relief at having finished another night's meal.

visitors is made by Miss Foster, and an auditing of her books showed that the composition, 'Patience,' by Tschalkovsky, has been played more than any other selection included in the music library.

The modern school of dance music is not without its supporters, however, and a recording of Duke Ellington's 'Mood Indigo,' and a couple of swing tunes played by Benny Goodman are often requested.

Surprising as it may seem to those sleepers who speak of 'this dance-mad age,' there are numerous requests for operas.

The music room is tucked away in a recessed portion of the fourth floor of the library. The equipment, consisting of an electric victrola and over 30 recordings of all types of music by many famous composers, was presented to the University by the Carnegie Institute.

According to Miss Foster, boys, as a rule, are more interested in visiting the music room after the afternoon and 7 until 9 o'clock at night on week days, and on Saturdays, from 9 until 12 o'clock in the morning.

'A PUZZLING SITUATION,' REMARKS PROFESSOR FUNKHOUSER AS OVER 100 SIGN UP FOR HEREDITY CLASS

By MARGARET ANDERSON

The University of Kentucky can boast of a professor who so interesting he has to resort to drastic measures to keep the enrollment of at least one of his classes within the capacity mark.

Not only did every junior and senior in the University seem determined to seek knowledge along the lines of heredity this semester, but apparently twenty-five per cent of the lower classes attempted to sign up for the course only to be ruthlessly turned away because

Guignol Theatre's Past Is Exposed By Co-ed Reporter

By MARTHA MOORE

Do you realize as you sit in your seat at the University Little Theatre enthralled by a gripping drama portrayed by the Guignol players that once this playhouse was the center of the social life of the Lexington colored people? Yes, indeed, black in 1923 the negro folk made merry at weddings, suppers, and parties in this same building where now dramatic activities are carried on and plays are presented.

Dr. Carol Sax, who was head of the department of art at the University in 1924, was responsible for the purchasing of this negro church. His art students were called forth and were given freedom to paint anything they wished on the walls of the interior of this building, which was to serve as the Romney Theatre for four years.

The first production was presented amid a riot of color on Jan. 7, 1924, in the Romney theatre. Side walls of deep purple, ceiling of blue, a proscenium arch in weird and intricate design and wall lights of huge candles mounted on wrought-iron holders and shaded with tannourines, combined to supply an appropriate environment for the life of a carefree people.

It is in altogether different surroundings than the Guignol players are this week, presenting their first play of the semester, 'Invitation to a Murder.'

their registration cards were of the wrong color. Despite efforts of Funkhouser to discourage prospective heredity students, the enrollment soared, passing well the hundred mark by the time registration was officially closed.

Obviously something must be done, so at the first class meeting he summons his most brusque manner and snaps, 'I'll warn you students at the beginning that I'm a busy boring lecturer. This class is made up of lectures entirely. The first half of the course is very dry and technical, with many scientific names. The seating arrangements in this room are not satisfactory. Many of you won't be able to see the board, and board diagrams are an important part of all my lectures. If you're near-sighted there's little hope for you! A pause for breath punctuated by discouraging looks at students, and then the professor brings forth his clinching point—examinations.

"The grades," he says, "are based entirely on the hard examination of the board, and board diagrams, not on sink or swim. I have no mercy. Now do I see any volunteers who would like to drop the course on the spot? Be willing to drop the course?" Dead silence reigns, and so as if by divine inspiration Dr. Funkhouser seized upon the plan that absences on that first day would be dropped from the roll. Almost feebly he read through the long list of names being able, to his disappointment, to drop only four names.

"Something will have to be done," says Dr. Funkhouser, stroking his cheek. "This is a puzzling situation."

COACH ADOLPH RUPP'S Kentucky Wildcats will be pronounced favorites when they meet Vanderbilt's Commodores tomorrow night in their last Southeastern Conference struggle of the regular season. The Commodores, usually one of the top ranking fives, have been one of the door mats of the conference, losing five out of seven conference struggles. Earlier in the season, the Wildcats handed the Vanderbilt quintet a 41 to 26 trouncing.

When interviewed, Coach Rupp expressed confidence in the ability of his basketballers to take the measure of Vandy. The Wildcat mentor feels that the 'Cats will have their hands full Monday night when they bring their season to a close with Xavier.

After a nip-and-tuck battle, Kentucky managed to defeat the Musketeers in an over-time period at Cincinnati. However, Xavier has been showing steady improvement, having walloped Centre College 42 to 21 last week.

Nevertheless, the 'Cats will probably rank as slight favorites as they have happy faculty of seldom losing on the home court. In their last 50 home starts, the Ruppmen came out victorious in 48 games.

Southeastern Conference officials will meet tomorrow at Knoxville to select the eight teams to participate in the tournament starting there late this month.

Contrary to general belief, Coach Rupp expressed the opinion that Kentucky has the best chance to win the basketball 'crown' that it has had in several seasons. Coach Rupp believes the tourney will be a wide open affair with all teams equally matched.

The Kentucky mentor seemed pleased by the fact that for the first time since he came to Kentucky the Wildcats will not be ranked as favorites. Each year the 'Cats have journeyed to the tournament with all the teams, and as the crowd, giving all they had to upset the Kentuckians. Tournament crowds have always pulled against Kentucky. All the world loves an underdog.

Kentucky's chances would be greatly enhanced if Ralph Carlisle should suddenly start hitting in his early season form. Up to the Creighton game, Ralph averaged 16 points a game. Since then, the Wildcat forward's average has dropped to 6 points.

The only undefeated conference quintet is Georgia Tech, winner of seven consecutive intra-conference struggles. However, the Yellow Jackets' opponents have generally been among the weaker fives. Georgia Tech's chief claim to fame came in its game at Philadelphia with the University of Pennsylvania. The Southerners lost to the skillful Northern five by one point, 31 to 30, after putting up a game fight.

The eight teams expected to receive tournament bids are Georgia Tech, Mississippi, Tennessee, Auburn, Mississippi State, Georgia, Louisiana State, and Kentucky.

Two important rule changes are to be considered when the basketball mentors meet early in March. The two rules coming in for the harshest fire are the three second rule and the center tip off.

Under the three second rule, offensive players are limited to three seconds in the foul slot and entire foul circle. This has practically done away with the pivot play, one of the most spectacular in basketball.

Coach Rupp says that he is heartily in favor of doing away with the three second rule as he was one of the hardest fighters against the rule when it was enacted. According to Mentor Rupp, the chief reason the rule was enacted was because it looked as if "Big Ed" Edwards would be at Kentucky for two more years. Now that Edwards has departed, the coaches are ready to do away with the rule.

The center tip off, according to some observers, is doomed. If done away with, the referee will put the ball in play by giving it to a member of the scored upon team, to throw in from the end court line under his own basket.

Those in favor of eliminating the center tip say that by doing away with it approximately five or six minutes of actual playing time will be added to the game.

Coach Rupp dismissed the center tip off with the words, "the center tip off will never be eliminated so long as there is basketball."

Kentucky's swimming team, coached by Sherman Hinkbein, will meet the Eastern Maroons Saturday night at Richmond. The swimming team should be given considerable credit as it meets some of the outstanding teams in the South.

Last year, despite the fact that they had no pool in which to practice, the swimmers won the state championship. Several of the boys drive over to Richmond and practice in the Eastern pool whenever they find time.

The Kentuckians were defeated in their first start this year, losing to the undefeated Tennessee team 45 to 32. According to Coach Hinkbein, the Kentucky team is attempting to arrange a quadrangle meet to be held at Richmond between the following schools: Eastern, Berea, Kentucky, and Auburn.

Although swimming is recognized as a minor sport, the University is not paying the expenses of the team. The University did give the team $10 for the Knoxville trip with the balance being supplied by the University of Tennessee. As long as the team is representing the University, it is this writer's opinion that the University should pay the team's expenses, and should give it the same treatment as any other minor sport.

Seven University students are included in the group of eight champions who will represent the state of Kentucky in the national Golden Gloves tournament at Chicago. These boys will leave Lexington early Sunday morning for the Illinois metropolis.

The hopeful young champions are John Burnett, flyweight; Paul Durbin, featherweight; T. J. Gragg, bantamweight; Dave Rogan, lightweight; J. C. Posey, welterweight; Robert Forsythe, middleweight; Joe Moore,

WILDCATS FACE WORST SEASON ON NET COURT

By MACK HUGHES

For the first time in six seasons the Wildcat basketball team has dropped two successive games.

Not since Adolph Rupp took over the coaching reins, has any Kentucky quintet had such a disastrous season as the present squad is experiencing. Their last two losses, to Alabama and Tennessee, not only set them down to a low standing in the Conference, but they also terminated one of the long record streaks which the Big Blue was trying to prolong.

Many conspicuous records have been set by Wildcat teams and individual stars since Coach Rupp became mentor for the University basketballers. Some of these records have since been broken and some in the form of winning streaks. However, incidentally, two games are still standing and show no indication of being threatened.

Long before Rupp came to the University, the 'Cats had the reputation of having strong basketball teams. The 1921 team went to the Southern Conference tournament and came back to Lexington with the title. Around 1925 the Big Blue team took a slump and it was not until 1928, when Johnny Mauer became coach, that they began to rise in prestige again.

Coach Rupp came to the University at the beginning of the 1930-31 season, and with a fine bunch of material he went to the Conference Tournament finals with the 'Cat team only to be defeated 27 to 23 by a strong Maryland quintet. During this season was the last time a Kentucky team lost two in a row, but the fact that they just missed annexing the Southern title by two points proved that they had a great team. Incidentally, these two games were the only two lost by the Wildcats before the tourney that season.

Since the beginning of the 1930 season, Wildcat teams have played 130 games, including tournament tilts, and have lost only 21 of them. Four of these were in tournament play. Coach Rupp's team holds the unique record of having averaged better than a point a minute per game for more than one hundred games.

Aggie Sale, two time All-American and captain of the 1933 team which won the conference title, set an individual scoring mark during this year's tournament which has never been threatened. The '33 team also set a scoring record in the tourney which has never been broken.

That sensational All-American Wildcat, Leroy Edwards, who played but one year on the Big Blue varsity before turning pro, set a new national high scoring record for a single season and gained the unique distinction of scoring 34 points in a game in which he played only 34 minutes.

The 1934 squad went through the playing season of 15 games and won all of them. Heavy favorites to win the Southeastern Tournament, they dropped the opening tilt to Florida.

Perhaps the most noticeable record that the Wildcat teams have hung up is the one they have set by losing only five games on their home floor during the entire seven years that Coach Rupp has been mentor. They have won 48 out of the last 53 games played in the Alumni gymnasium.

No records have been set up by the present Kentucky team nor has any previous records been approached by them, but perhaps as the underdogs, they may show fight enough to win their way through to the Southeastern title if invited to participate in the tournament.

"Lighthorse Harry" Cooper won the Houston Open Golf tournament with a total of 280 strokes in a 72 hole.

Markings will be placed in Crosley Field showing the depth of the flood waters.

light heavyweight; and Frank Winchester, heavyweight. All of these fighters are University students with the exception of Burnett.

In the Chicago tournament, the Kentucky boxers will meet the outstanding amateur fighters of the nation. While not expecting them to win any titles, we believe the Kentucky boys will make a creditable showing. It takes this opportunity to join with the student body in wishing them the best of luck.

At Last We Have "The Inside" On Those Campuses

By ELEANOR SNEDEKER

"I am sorry but I am campused this week-end and won't be able to keep that date."

Often the boys wonder if this is just a way of breaking dates or whether the girl is really campused. However, there are very few girls who will use this as an excuse because not one of them likes to have to stay in. Everyone dreads a campus and will do all they can to avoid receiving that penalty.

How does a girl get campused? Oh, for various reasons, the two main ones being the forgetfulness for signing in and the other for arriving late. It seems as if any girl could remember to sign her John Hancock when she comes in, but a look at the campus records will show that this is the heaviest offense and that the majority of campuses are given for this reason.

The other major campus is when a girl gets in late. A girl is allowed four minutes after the closing bell to get in the hall, so if the watch is slow or the car has to stop for a red light, she can make it. But if she is five minutes late she receives a campus. So, gentlemen, if you want your girl to attend your fraternity formal see that you get her in before the gong sounds.

When a girl is campused she is not allowed to receive or make any phone calls or see any callers. Each girl of course reacts to her campus differently; that is only human nature. There are the girls who take their punishment like good sports and say, "Oh, well, I have to study anyway." Then, there is the girl who gripes about her campus all the time and makes life miserable for her roommate and everyone else around her. Then, there are the girls who always use up so much energy signing in every hour, that they have to order colas and hamburgers to keep them from starving.

Some of the girls are just lost if they are campused; they really don't know what to do with themselves. They wander around the halls, bothering this one and that and wishing they could see Tommy, Dick, Bob, or who ever the current attraction might be until they are so bored that they go to bed.

There is always the lucky girl who the boys feel sorry for and when she is campused send her food or flowers. In these cases being campused is fun!

As soon as the girl's campus is over there is much rejoicing and celebration and the girl vows and declares that she will not break any more rules or do anything again that will keep her from her usual busy week-end. The majority of the fair coeds claim, however, that a girl has really not been to college until she has been campused.

U. S. Senator Gerald P. Nye says: "I enjoy the comfort a light smoke gives my throat"

"I have smoked Luckies off and on ever since my first term in the Senate 11 years ago, and I have always enjoyed their taste and the feeling of comfort and safety a light smoke gives my throat. I have done a great deal of public speaking, on the floor of the Senate, over the radio and at conferences. Necessarily this results in a strain on the voice. So naturally, in smoking, I have to think of my throat—and I have found that a light smoke is suitable to my throat."

Gerald P. Nye
HON. GERALD P. NYE
U. S. SENATOR FROM NORTH DAKOTA

In a recent independent survey, an overwhelming majority of lawyers, doctors, lecturers, scientists, etc., who said they smoked cigarettes, expressed their personal preference for a light smoke. Senator Nye's statement verifies the wisdom of this preference and so do leading artists of radio, stage, screen and opera, whose voices are their fortunes, and who choose Luckies, a light smoke. You, too, can have the throat protection of Luckies—a light smoke, free of certain harsh irritants removed by the exclusive process "It's Toasted". Luckies are gentle on your throat.

Espionage Ring Exposed!

By CLYDE WALDEMERE

During the past week 50 per cent of the student body cheated on examinations in some way or another. It's pretty safe bet that either you attempted to copy from the person next to you, or you were copied from you. At least, that is the result of an extensive investigation carried on by Dr. J. B. Miner of the psychology department some years ago, and corroborated by Yale University reports.

Remember that the penalty for the first offense is failure in the course, and the second is dismissal from college. So, in order to reduce to a minimum your chances of being caught, here are some simple rules to follow:

Don't copy the answers from your neighbor verbatim—always add a personal touch of your own because very often the proctor will arrange the papers according to the seating arrangement in order to compare those in adjacent seats. (A very unique six-point system insures your apprehension if you are careless about observing this rule.) In case suspected and called on in the carrel, remember that you will be treated as the one who copied, not the one who copied—so act accordingly. If you are asked to take a repeat examination, don't, for the love of Mike (or whatever your name is), answer the questions right. Try as best you can—with your limited intelligence—to answer the same as before. That will make your paper look like it was the original work though it was originally wrong.

Beware, my falling friend, of the solicitous professor, since he is beaming smile, announces that he is going to let you grade your own papers. This is just a trick to get you checking up on your index of character, if not for more serious intentions. A neat little series of four point systems gives the index in this dodge too.

Another insidious but none the less effective method of catching cribbers is the neat little A-S on your paper when you know you will only add up to seventy-five, be a nice little student and call your teacher's attention to the least half the errors he made, because without a shade of a statistical doubt, your mental incapacity is directly proportional to the

BEHIND THE SCENES In PATT HALL

By ELEANOR SNEDEKER

When your girl, beautifully gowned, enters the reception room ready to go to that big formal affair, have you ever stopped to think how long it took her to get ready? Do you realize what a madhouse the dormitory is just before a date? By the time you arrive everything is serene and quiet, but if you had come an hour earlier it would have been far from quiet.

The noise, confusion, and rushing around starts right after dinner. "Mary, please press really good, you press yours."—"Oh, my flowers won't go with this dress, what will I do?" Please let me wear your black one."—"I haven't got the third no-break; I know I will be stuck, oh, why did I ever tell Bill that I would go with him?"—"I'll answer my buzzer and see who wants me on the phone, I am trying to get my nails fixed." These and similar comments are heard all over the hall.

Girls rush from one room to another trying to borrow this and that, showing off their dresses, and exclaiming over the new ones. The ironing boards are in constant use with a line waiting. Buzzers ring, flowers arrive and in truth it is one wild place. Some of the girls start dressing as soon as they are through dinner, and then are not ready when their dates arrive. Then there is the girl who has an early date and comes tearing in about a half hour before her date dance date, yet somehow she manages to be ready when he arrives.

For some girls it is their first dance and they are petrified; all they can worry about is whether or not they are going to be stuck, and they listen eagerly to advice given to them by their more experienced sisters. Then there is the girl who has a blind date, a date of a friend of hers. She is worried about whether or not she can dance with him, and just what kind of a line she will have to employ to keep him from being bored. Then of course, there are always the girls who are used to going to all the dances and have no qualms as to how they will get along. As the evening goes on some of the girls begin to get alarmed and wonder if their dates are going to arrive, or if they are stood up. Of course, there is always the girl who has two or maybe three dates for the dance and so must leave an excuse in the office saying she is ill, her family is in town, or something on the order, to be delivered to the unlucky man.

By the time ten-thirty arrives, the deadline for going to dances, the office girl is about worn out. She has rung countless girls who have answered the phone millions of times.

For a really unique piece, don't miss the chapeau of silk pique which shoots up above your right ear but it kept under control by small strips of plaited chiffon (regal blue and cerise) knotting in the back.

Let's talk about dresses! And, to be specific, Louise Mulligan and Ellen Kayes. As you may know, both of these are designed especially for young women. As testimonials to this, they come in sizes from nine through 17, so you see, if you are one these little people, extremely difficult to fit, Louise and Ellen solve your problems for you. "Clever" is a most inadequate word for their styles. They think of so many attractive ones that it's really a puzzle to know which to choose.

Ellen Kaye has a frock she calls the "Dagger" dress—of silk pique, mustard color with a belt of British tan, and an action back. Tiny gold daggers form the cuff links and buttons. Louise Mulligan presents "Printed Editor"—a lovely soft silk in black, brown, or navy with small baskets of bright flowers flung all over it. Tiny buttons on the gold grosgrain ribbon bands forming the belt and tie. Wide tucks are used in an entirely new manner across the blouse and sleeves.

We really can't neglect the men.
