Women's college enrollment rises as men's, full-time student's fall

By JIM CAGEY
Staff Writer

UK's student population profile is gradually changing, revealing similarities and differences of trends among colleges and universities in the region.

According to an analysis by the Southern Regional Education Board (SREB) in Atlanta, women now make up the majority of the student population in the South.

The SREB analysis also indicates that although recently there have been significant declines in the number of full-time students enrolled in southern

At UK, the differences in student population make-up from the early to late 70s largely have been made by an increased number of women attending college, according to Keller Dunn, an enrollment analyst in UK's Dean of Admissions and Registrar office. Dunn said 75 percent of UK's growth this decade is because more women now go to college.

And while the Fall 1978 population statistics show a ratio of 45 percent women and 55 percent men, Dunn said this year's freshman class is the first class to approach equal distribution of women and men; the class of 1983 has more than 49 percent women in it. Dunn said the percentage of women in graduate school this year is 52.2 percent, the second consecutive year in which women enrollees have outnumbered men.

Overall gains in enrollment have been significantly affected by women in the 1970s, according to the Fall 1978 Enrollment Report. The table (below), reprinted from that report, shows the total change from 1970 to 1978 in the enrollment of men and women.

Student population trends of the 1970s are different from those of the 1960s. Dunn said the post-World War II "baby boom" placed concentrated numbers of students into college in the 1960s, when "yearly population increases of 10 percent or more were typical." By contrast, Dunn said "a 4 percent change (in growth) is a whopping change for education in the 1970s."

"There is an expected decline in the number of all students in the 1980s. This may not affect UK or other large universities, depending on the types and variety of programs offered by the institution; a broader spectrum of offerings keeps the campus population more stable," Dunn said.

Schools thought to be most affected in enrollment shifts will be community colleges, technical schools and business schools. Atlanta's SREB analysis, likewise, reported a 10 percent drop in two-year college enrollment in Kentucky for 1978, and similar drops in other Southern state schools.

Declining population in America will continue to affect college enrollment in the next decade, according to SREB projections. James Mingle, SREB research associate, said total enrollment in the South for 1986 will "show the same level of enrollment as in 1978." However, when the projection counts only full-time students, enrollment in the South may drop by as much as 4 percent by 1986.

According to the SREB report, "This difference of more than 100,000 full-time-equivalent students is significant to the revenue and workload prospects of higher education. If an institution loses one full-time student, it needs to attract nearly three part-time students to recoup revenue losses."

Vance, Dobrynin meet unexpectedly to talk

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top U.S. and Soviet officials held a surprise meeting at the State Department yesterday as President Carter remained at Camp David working on a speech about the Russian brigade in Cuba.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin began their meeting at 2 p.m. but State Department spokesman David Nall would give no indication of the meeting's purpose or even which side suggested it first.

President Carter said he would address the nation at 9 tonight when negotiations with the Soviets apparently had broken down, with the Russians refusing to budge on Carter's insistence that they change the "status quo."

When Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko returned to Moscow last week after meeting in New York with Vance, he gave no indication of the Soviets softening their position. They maintain the brigade — which U.S. officials say has 2,000 to 3,000 soldiers, 40 tanks and artillery and armored personnel carriers — has been stationed in Cuba since the 1962 missile crisis with the full knowledge of previous American presidents.

In a news conference Friday, Cuban President Fidel Castro eclaimed the hard Soviet line and accused Carter of creating an artificial crisis.

Carter then huddled with 15 retired national security officials, including former secretaries of state Henry Kissinger, William Rogers and Dean Rusk. The president went to Camp David Saturday afternoon.

White House spokesman Dale Leibach said Sunday the president was spending the day working on tonight's address. Leibach said he did not believe Carter had summoned any speech writers to Camp David.

Russian troops reported near Japan

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO — Not only is the United States wrestling with the question of Soviet troops near home, but Japan, too, it seems, is faced with a Cuba-like situation on an island just off its coast.

According to a U.S. intelligence report, about 2,000 Soviet military personnel recently were moved to Shikotan — one of four small islands off Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost main island.

Shikotan and Cuba are separated by not only thousands of miles but also differences in the nature of the controversies surrounding Soviet troop presence.

Cuba, 90 miles from U.S. shores, is an independent country where the Russians are officially welcome. Shikotan, 60 miles from Hokkaido, has been claimed by the Soviet Union and Japan since the Soviets occupied it at the end of World War II.

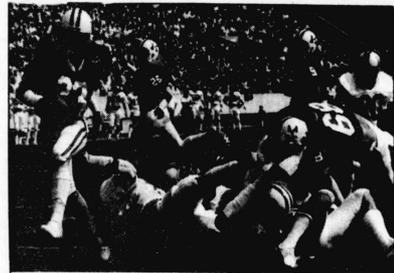

The Soviet-Cuban issue was forced on President Carter by two U.S. senators, both Democrats facing reelection in 1980. And Shikotan has its own political overtones. First leaked to Japanese reporters in Washington, it captured the headlines in Tokyo in the midst of Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira's campaign to tighten his grip on Japan's parliament in a general election set for Sunday.

Japanese commentators say the timing may be connected with the election, especially because Soviet troops had actually moved in several weeks earlier, part of a buildup during "recent months," according to the U.S. State Department.

The territorial dispute with the Russians about Shikotan and its sister islands is of particular importance in Hokkaido, where many thousand former inhabitants of the islands — Japanese citizens and voters — now live.

Carter, who has scheduled a television address for tonight on the Cuban issue, has previously said the Soviet troops in Cuba pose no threat to U.S. security.

'Storybook' game has happy ending

By JOHN CLAY
Sports Editor

Yes, Virginia, in college football storybook miracles can happen. The Kentucky Wildcats proved it Saturday afternoon as they astonished 57,800 sun-splashed fans at Commonwealth Stadium by defeating the heavily favored Maryland Terrapins 14-7.

"That was the most courageous effort of any team I've ever been associated with," said a tired but happy UK Coach Fran Curci after the game. "It was the most unbelievable thing I've been associated with."

What was so unbelievable? Well, take your pick.

It could have been the fact that the collapsing Wildcat defense turned in a stellar performance holding the Terps' Charlie Wysocki, the nation's leading rusher, to just 59 yards on 23 carries — not to mention a meager 16 yards on 11 carries in the first half. The Terps' sophomore flash had averaged more than 150 yards a game. "It was the most unbelievable thing I've been associated with."

Whatever you choose, as Curci said, "It had storybook written all over it."

"We played Maryland's type of game," Curci said. "We controlled the ball on offense and controlled the field position also."

The reason for that was simple, said Maryland Coach Jerry Claiborne. "They whipped us at the line of scrimmage and completely contained our line in the first half."

Things didn't look too well for the home team early in the game when Jenkins hopped off the field after marching his team to the Maryland 31. Shut came in and moved the Cats the rest of the way, spinning over from the three to give the Cats a 7-0 lead.

Then in the second quarter Chris Jones sneaked over from a yard out to pad the Cats lead to 14-0.

The Cats seemed to be in control but surely it was just a matter of time before the Terps started to take contest in the first three Maryland games.

"I said before the game that Wysocki wasn't going to get his average," said Curci. "He might get 100 yards but he wasn't going to get his average."

It could have been that the Wildcats beat the Terps' frightening eight-man front with a quarterback (Mike Shurt) whose right shoulder feels like it is going through a meat grinder everytime he raises it to throw.

And to beat that front Curci had planned on having freshman quarterback Randy Jenkins put the ball in the air "at least 25 times." But Jenkins fractured his ankle during UK's first possession, forcing Curci to go with Shurt.

It could have been that the team with supposedly the best kicker, Maryland's Dale Castro, was upstaged by freshman walk-on Chris Poulton from Columbus, Ohio, who had never punted in a college game and wasn't expecting to play in this one.

Poulton punted so well that Maryland started seven drives on or inside their own 20-yard line. The most important coming on the Terps' final possession when he bounced one on the Maryland five.

Whatever you choose, as Curci said, "It had storybook written all over it."

THE SUPREME COURT yesterday overturned a lower court order which would have required Amtrak to continue running its New York-Kansas City train, the National Limited, effective today.

Chief Justice Warren Burger signed the order vacating a U.S. Appeals Court ruling that would have required Amtrak to continue operating the National Limited at least until Oct. 12.

The ruling does not affect four other trains whose future is being contested in other courts.

Amtrak had asked both the Supreme Court and a U.S. Court of Appeals yesterday to issue an emergency order allowing the rail company to discontinue the National Limited.

RANK AND FILE MEMBERS OF THE UNITED AUTO WORKERS union ratified by a 2-1 margin their new three-year national wage agreement with General Motors Corp., union officials said yesterday.

The final tally announced last night was 129,374 favoring the new agreement and 51,391 against, the officials said.

UAW president Douglas Fraser and vice president Irving Bluestone said GM had been formally notified of the ratification.

With the ratification, the additional 24 cents an hour in cost-of-living allowance — which the union negotiated to cover the June through August period, not covered under the former contract — will be retroactive to Sept. 17 for UAW members at GM plants, Bluestone said.

CUBAN PRESIDENT FIDEL CASTRO said yesterday the dispute with the United States over Soviet troops in Cuba is a "comedy" that could turn into a crisis if President Carter tries to flex U.S. military might around his Caribbean nation.

Castro also said he would not object to a meeting with Carter to resolve the dispute, but said he was not calling for such a meeting.

The Carter administration maintains the Soviet troops are part of a combat brigade made up of 2,000 to 3,000 soldiers, 40 tanks and artillery and armored personnel carriers.

"There has been no change in the nature or function of the Soviet military personnel in Cuba in the last 17 years," Castro told interviewer Dan Rather through an interpreter.

Hussein also indicated he believes most Palestinians would accept a position that recognizes Israel's continued existence.

But Hussein, considered one of the more moderate of Arab leaders, indicated the key to any successful resolution to the conflict will be Israel's willingness to yield on the question of Palestinian autonomy.

"The issue is self-determination under conditions of freedom, and if this were granted the Palestinians, I believe that the overwhelming majority would choose something that all of us could live with," Hussein said.

The king made his comments in a taped interview with reporter Barbara Walters on ABC's "Issues and Answers." The program was broadcast yesterday.

Communications College status must be decided now

The future of the College of Communications must be decided before next semester because it may mean drastic changes for the students, faculty and staff. If the presidential committee appointed by UK President Otis Singletary arrives at a recommendation on schedule, the answer should be known by December.

How Singletary will act on the recommendation, and how soon he will act also affect the situation. In any case, the final action on the college may affect other Kentucky universities.

UK is the only Kentucky college with a College of Communications and a communications degree. If the college's three units — telecommunications, journalism and human communications — are separated, Kentucky will lose the only College of Communications it now has.

With the college's overall enrollment up 30 percent this year — the largest increase of any UK college — those 809 students looking for degrees in communications are worried.

Students are entitled to get their degree under rules which were in effect when they entered the University; any changes made in the curriculum or degree requirements won't affect students already enrolled.

However, those students trying to complete their degrees in communications aren't as worried about program changes as they are about the total picture. How much will a communications degree be worth if the people hiring UK graduates know the degree no longer exists at UK because the college was disbanded. Or, if one of the college's three units — telecommunications, human communications or journalism — are shuffled and filed in the College of Arts & Sciences conglomerate, why major in these at all? (No matter what you major in, if it falls under the A & S college your degree will be from Arts & Sciences.)

Ironically, the Council on Higher Education is considering approving a recommendation for a Ph.D. program in communications at UK. The council meets Oct. 17. How can they approve the program and make a decision when they don't know if the college will even exist next year?

They can't, and they probably won't.

The sooner the committee make a recommendation and Singletary makes a decision, the better. This must not get tied up in committee, or before the Board of Trustees.

The answer must come quickly, not only to quell the worries of the students and faculty members involved but to answer the questions of incoming students. If UK can no longer offer these students a major in communications, they may decide not to come to UK.

Military rule in perspective

Civilian rule returns to Nigeria

By DANNY AKEREJAH

After thirteen years of military rule in Africa's richest and most populous country, the Federal Military Government of Nigeria will officially hand over power to a newly elected civilian government today. This follows a series of elections to the various political offices at state and national levels. The elections were climaxed by the race for the presidency on August 11, 1979, in which a winner was declared out of the five candidates who contested.

In what could be regarded as the most tremendous and well-conducted election in Africa, a considerable percentage of the 47 million registered voters cast their votes for candidates of their choice. This event is of enormous significance as it has no doubt ushered in a new era in Africa's political development. More importantly, it is Nigeria's second attempt at constitutional government since becoming independent of British rule on Oct. 1, 1960.

The collapse of the first republic came after a military coup carried out by young army officers on Jan. 15, 1966. In essence, the British parliamentary system of government, a direct legacy of colonial rule, was overthrown and supplanted by the military. Between 1967 and 1970, the country engaged in a bloody civil war that actually tested its viability and livability as a nation-state opposed to a mere geographical entity. Nigeria pursued accelerated reconciliation and reconstruction with astoundingly positive results after the civil war.

After the first military coup of January 1966, regimes have changed hands three times, even though the third administration is regarded in Nigeria as a continuation of the preceding regime. The military officers who are currently handing over power to the civilians took power in the bloodless coup of July 1975. It too was a victim of a coup attempt that failed in February 1976, resulting in the assassination of then Head of State, the late General Murtala Muhammed. Murtala Muhammed is regarded as the first nationally accepted leader of Nigeria.

Under military rule, Nigeria took a giant stride forward and gained a new sense of direction. The continued rise in oil prices from 1973 has helped to sustain the economy and to finance ambitious development projects. It is worth noting that Nigeria is the second largest supplier of oil to the U.S. after Saudi Arabia.

When the outgoing military regime announced in 1976 its intention to hand over power to the civilians on Oct. 1, 1979, many pessimistic observers claimed we could not count on the pledge of "the controllers of the instruments of violence" to voluntarily relinquish power. Perhaps the traditional stereotype of a military regime does not fit in the case of Nigeria. The process of demilitarization of politics and military disengagement which began in early 1976 has proved to be really remarkable. The military has retained its enviable position in the making of Nigeria.

The swearing in today of Alhaji Shehu Shagari as the first executive president of the Federal Republic of Nigeria helps to put military rule in Nigeria in its proper perspective. I sincerely believe that the apparent trans-Atlantic movement from London to Washington in search of a workable constitution will work out for the better, as Nigeria has come to stay.

Disconcerting find

I find it disconcerting that a college paper with the reputed high quality of the Kentucky Kernel cannot do a better job of proofreading articles for publication. The latest offense was Wednesday's excellent commentary by John Scarborough, which was so aptly butchered by the Kernel. I counted twelve typos within the first column alone, at which time I ceased keeping score; it was obvious that Mr. Scarborough lost. May I suggest that you find a more dexterous typist or a more keen-sighted copy checker?

New Journalism

Dr. Lewis Donohew's electronically induced discovery that readers respond more strongly to "story-telling" news reports than to "traditional summary style" ("Narrative articles increase reader response, says communications prof," by Cynthia DeMarcus, Kernel, Sept. 26) repeats that of New Journalism. From its struggling origin in the 1950s as "zoot-suited prose"

(John Leonard, editor of the New York Times Book Review) New Journalism has advanced to critical recognition in the literary world and has found its voice through Gay Talese, James Baldwin, Truman Capote, Jimmy Breslin, Norman Mailer, and (Hail the Chief!) Tom Wolfe. These journalists, essayists and novelists insisted 20 years ago on the power achieved by applying the devices of fiction (primarily narrative and point of view) to nonfiction. Their eager readers still substantiate this belief.

As worth is measured by one's dollar, sincerity by the size of one's gift, so goes the way of New Journalism to the realm of quantification. Now New Journalism is left sadly to electronic monitoring, translating its vitality to a sterile needle's measurement of one's "skin conductance." Perhaps Tom Wolfe's next book will be a reappraisal of first and be titled, The Electric Kool-Aid Dynograph Test.

Pro book exchange

Yes, yes, yes, yes. I'd like to think the interest in a student book exchange were the result of the power of positive thinking, for many's the hour I've spent of late mulling over the most effective way of bypassing the bookstores and had resolved to stand alone, sign aloft, at next semester's drop/add. If this book exchange idea becomes reality, I shan't have to do that. And that would be nice. See you in Room 119 at the Student Center, Oct. 3 at 7 p.m.

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — Policeman Michael Kearney didn't know he could look so attractive — but because he did, 10 men have been charged with soliciting the services of a prostitute.

Kearney was among officers assigned to a crackdown on prostitution in the Long Island community.

The slim, 28-year-old Kearney's uniform was a handbag, make-up, a blonde wig, spike heels, tight jeans and a snug turtleneck over a well-stuffed bra.

His arrests, in just three hours, included a certified public accountant and the owners of a dry cleaner and a delicatessen.

"We were forced to use a male as a decoy because we don't have any women on the force," a police official said.

"For the past five years, we've used a sergeant as a decoy to catch muggers. But this is the first time we've used a decoy to arrest johns."

Two prostitutes were also arrested, police said.

Pope denounces Irish murders

KNOCK, Ireland (AP) — Pope John Paul II took his peace pilgrimage to Ireland's most sacred shrine, in the bogs of County Mayo, yesterday and in a forceful denunciation of terrorism declared, "Murder is murder, no matter what the motives or ends."

The pontiff called the Northern Ireland conflict "this great wound now afflicting our people" and appealed to the Virgin Mary to "cure and heal it."

"Mother, protect all of us and especially the youth of Ireland from being overcome by hostility and hatred," he said.

But the pope's pleas for peace were not persuading the mostly Catholic guerrillas in British-ruled Northern Ireland to put down their arms. A nationalist spokesman in Belfast said the "war of liberation" would continue.

Earlier yesterday, John Paul made an appeal for nonviolence to about 250,000 cheering Irish youths gathered for a Mass at Galway's race track. He told the Catholic youths that a "moral sickness" stalks society.

"How many young people have already warped their consciences and have substituted the true joy of life with drugs, sex, alcohol, vandalism and the empty pursuit of mere material possessions?" he asked.

It was one of the most explicit denunciations yet by the 59-year-old Polish pontiff of the growing material concerns of Western consumer societies.

'Going broke' easier under new law

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

A new bankruptcy law which goes into effect today will take some of the pain out of going broke.

The Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978 is the first major overhaul of the U.S. bankruptcy code since the 1930s. It is expected to result in an increase in personal bankruptcies, already on the rise because of the recession.

In general, the law allows individuals who file for bankruptcy to keep more of their possessions. It also restricts the right of creditors to repossess property and simplifies the filing procedures.

Personal bankruptcies reached their peak of 224,354 during the recession year of 1974-75 when private individuals accounted for more than 88 percent of all the bankruptcy petitions that were filed.

The number of people seeking help under bankruptcy laws declined steadily after 1975, but increased again this year. In the 12 months that ended June 30, individuals filed 196,976 bankruptcy petitions accounting for about 87 percent of all filings.

"We think that this trend will continue," said H. Kent Presson, assistant chief of the bankruptcy division of the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, discussing the increase.

Credit counselors say the state of the economy is partly to blame for the rise. "One would expect bankruptcies to go along with the business cycle," said Bill Hempel of the Credit Union National Association.

They also note that the stigma that used to be attached to bankruptcy has gone.

Individuals are allowed to file for bankruptcy when their debts are greater than their assets. There are two types of relief: straight bankruptcies or the wage-earner plan.

Under straight bankruptcy — Chapter 7 — most of the debtor's possessions are taken over by the court which converts them into money and pays as many debts as possible.

The new law provides, for the first time, a federal property exemption which allows a debtor to keep an interest of up to $7,500 in real property being used as a residence, along with up to $1,200 in a motor vehicle and up to $200 in a number of individual items like clothing.

A debtor is allowed to choose between the federal exemption and state exemptions which, Presson said, range from "very generous to very miserly." But States have the right to prohibit debtors from choosing the federal exemption and several legislatures have already taken steps to do so.

The wage-earner plan — Chapter 13 — allows the debtor to keep his or her property and repay creditors over an extended period in a plan worked out by the bankruptcy court.

In the past, individuals usually had to pay back all of their debts — 100 cents on the dollar. The new law allows a judge to approve a wage-earner plan providing partial repayment.

UK defensive line shines in upset

By JEFF HOWERTON
Reporter

For the 57,800 who turned out to Commonwealth Stadium Saturday afternoon, UK's 14-7 upset of Maryland was attributable to a number of factors and accomplished despite a series of nagging injuries.

Perhaps the pivotal reason for the Wildcat win, however, was defense. Not the regular version, but "Kentucky defense" as it was termed by noseguard Richard Jaffe. He defined the magic Terrapin thwarter as nothing more than "hard-nosed football."

Something obviously was working, though, as Jaffe and his defensive teammates held Maryland to 174 yards total offense and its nation-leading running back Charlie Wysocki to 59 yards.

The heart of any defensive unit is its line, and the Wildcat trio of Jaffe, Kevin Kearns, and Tim Gooch all played a role in the victory. They were responsible for a combined total of 23 tackles.

Fran Curci is just glad Kearns is a freshman. "That way, we have four years of him," the coach explained. If his play Saturday becomes a regular occurrence, Kearns should provide fans with many exciting moments in the future.

Kearns said his most memorable play was his second quarter sack of Terrapin passer Mike Tice. Most fans, as well as UK coach Fran Curci felt Tice grounded the ball intentionally, but the referee ruled the play an incomplete pass.

Despite many stellar individual performances, Tim Gooch—as well as many others—viewed the victory as a team effort. "As a defense, we all had to play together," he said. "We grew up a lot today," he added.

"We lost some people in the first half, and really came together after that."

Jaffe gave credit for the team's performance to its coaches.

"They do a super job every weekend," he said. "You say during practice, 'Hey, why are they jumping on us?', but the practicing, hard is showing up in games."

This year's team, Gooch said, differs from its predecessors. "In the past, we had great athletes—some super ballplayers," he said. "Everyone was always waiting for one of the great ones to pick us up. Now any one of the eleven is working. We all root for each other."

Just in time?

Maryland quarterback Mike Tice gets off a pass as he goes down during Saturday's game against UK. One official ruled that Tice was guilty of intentional grounding on the play. However, he was overruled by another official who said that Tice was trying to throw to running back Charlie Wysocki. After the game Curci remarked that the other official "must have been within 100 yards" of the play. The Cats won 14-7

Radar guns disallowed by Florida judge in use across U.S.

MIAMI (AP) — Five months after a judge short-circuited police radar in Florida, patrolmen and traffic courts around the country still are relying on an estimated 100,000 radar guns to check speeding motorists on the nation's highways.

Spot checks by The Associated Press in a dozen states show the Florida ruling has had little effect outside Dade County, where police temporarily stopped using their 22 radar guns. The number of speeding tickets plummeted 50 percent.

Soviet troops near Japan cause concern

Japan's foreign minister, Sunao Sonoda, returning from the United Nations, told reporters he did not regard the Soviet troops on Shikotan as a threat to Japan's security. Ohira said his government would take "appropriate action," evidently a protest to Moscow.

Japan's Defense Agency has taken the position that the troops are "defensive," and speculates that 260 tanks, 300 armored personnel vehicles, anti-aircraft missiles and rockets are on the islands. The United States has called the troops in Cuba combat troops, and President Carter said intelligence reports indicate they have about 40 tanks and some field pieces. Cuba and the Soviet Union have denied the troops are combat troops.

The Cuba controversy set off new alarms in the White House just as the administration had become confident that the SALT II arms limitation treaty with the Soviets would win Senate ratification. Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, the Foreign Relations Committee chairmen, declared that it could not be approved with the Soviet troops in Cuba.

"Police agencies don't understand what happened down there," said Neal Sanders, director of legislative relations for Electrolert Inc. of Troy, Ohio, which manufactures "Fuzbuster," a radar-detection device. They spent $30,000 to underwrite the Miami court challenge. Judge Alfred Nesbitt, the administrative judge for Dade County courts, convened his hearing after television reports showed radar clocking a banana tree at 86 mph and a house at 28 mph.

After his ruling in May when he declared radar unreliable, Nesbitt became a sort of highway folk hero. He received hundreds of congratulatory letters from the United States, Canada, Australia and Ireland and more than 2,000 requests for copies of the ruling.

Though Nesbitt's ruling covered only 80 speeding cases and was not binding on other judges, it raised speculation that radar would be banned in other courts. Sanders said "no more than a few dozen" judges have said they will throw out cases based on radar readings.

In Florida, state Rep. Ronald Silver, a Democrat from North Miami Beach, has introduced legislation to ban radar. The Nevada Legislature killed a similar bill. Sanders said hearings are under way in Nebraska on a bill to set equipment and training standards for radar units.

Court challenges against radar have failed in Nevada and Idaho. A few tickets were thrown out in Colorado courts but radar use has not been challenged in court.

About 4,000 speeding tickets were pending in Dade County at the time of Nesbitt's ruling. Most were thrown out if defendants bothered to show up in court.

Storybook game has happy ending

advantage of the Cats' no-pass situation.

"When he (Jenkins) went out of the game we thought there was no way we'd pull it out. Everytime Mike threw he was in excruciating pain," said Curci.

"I didn't even see it, (Jenkins injury)," admitted the Cats' Felix Wilson, who had already made three receptions on the drive. "I didn't even realize it. I just thought they had put Shutt in for ball control. Then when I came to the sidelines after the touchdown and saw Randy, my whole body dropped."

The acrobatic Wilson, made five catches in the first half, two from Shutt, but that was far less than he had expected. "Coach told me before the game that if I didn't catch 10 passes I couldn't play no more," he said jokingly. Maryland did cut the lead in half when quarterback Mike Tice lofted a five-yard scoring pass to brother John.

But Larry Carter, playing his first series of the game after sitting out with an injured sternum and shoulder, intercepted a Tice aerial with 22 seconds left to cap the Cats first victory and administer the first scar to Claiborne's team.

Still, that last drive brought visions of the Miami game (a game the Cats lost 15-14 after leading 14-0) racing through Wildcat fans heads.

But as Tice said "You can't wait until the fourth quarter to beat a team as fired-up as Kentucky was."

Or as unbelievable. "It was a hell of a win," said Curci. Who knows, maybe somebody up there likes Fran Curci after all.
