Dallas unveils

tribute to JFK on anniversary

Associated Press

DALLAS — With an assassin's nest as a bleak backdrop, Dallas unveiled a simple but eternal urbute yesterday to the memory of President John F. Kennedy.

Twin fighter jets thundered low above Dealey Plaza and a flock of white doves fluttered skyward at the exact moment of the assassination 30 years ago.

It was 12:30 p.m. Nov. 22, then and now.

In 1963, a clock atop the Texas School Book Depository recorded the time as a sniper on the sixth floor opened fire on the motorcade, killing Kennedy and wounding Gov. John Connally's widow, Nellie, slipped a black drape from a plaque marking the sloping, sunswept plaza as a National Historic Landmark.

"Thirty years ago, fate brought me here as an unwilling player in the most unforgettable traige drama of our time." Mrs. Connally told thousands of spectators and dignitaries.

Some choked back tears. Others some choice back tears. Others wept openly, "Now," she continued, "three decades later, we are gathered not to look back with grief, but to look forward with hope.

"Many of us share our own indelible memories of that awful hour, but today, we recomine the leating wants of us started of with flour, but today we recognize the lasting place this site will forever have in our nation's history."

Sen. Edward Kennedy and other family members and friends marked the day with visits to JFK's grave at Arlington National Cemery in Virginia.

His sister Jean Kennedy Smith observed the anniversary in Ireland, land of the family's ancestors. Smith, the U.S. ambassador to Ireland, read extracts from his speeches at a memorial Mass in Dublin. "It's a day to remember the great man that he was and that for a short space of time he was at the highest seat of power in the world," said

One company that is bucking the trend, at least temporarily, is Toyota Motor Manufacturing U.S.A. Inc. The firm still uses college recruiting centers extensively.

SAB names three to executive posts

By Brant Welch

The Student Activities Board has named three new members for next semester, SAB president Wes Butler announced yesterday.

Candi Jaworski was named SAB secretary/treasurer: Masha vossugh was selected as multi-cultural co-chairwoman; and first-time SAB member Erica New-house was named concert co-chairwoman. Butler said the three will assume their posts by the first week in January.

"I am very impressed with the individuals that we have selected." Butler said. "We always get a group that is ultra-qualified. The races are very competitive." In selecting the new members, Butler said, officials looked for people who could work with the current board. Jaworski, a sophomore, will be responsible for keeping an accurate record of all SAB meetings, reporting the financial status of the board and providing advice on financial matters. The secretary/ treasurer also works closely with the president and vice-president in conducting board matters.

Vossugh and the multi-cultural committee are charged with providing educations and artisite programing for the University. In addition, they are responsible for communications with other cultural organizations.

Vossugh has served on the committee for two years and was appointed to the position of co-chairwoman last semester.

Newhouse and the concert committee with the responsible for booking the latest acts in rock'n roll. R&B, alternative, country and pop music for campus shows. Past artists have included Sing, the Violent Fernmes and Boogie Down Productions.

Butler said SAB positions for Homecoming and the Family Weekend have yet to be filled.

His fraternity was placed on one-year social probation late last spring for incidents that occurred during the fraternity's annual Old South Week celebration in April.

The group also was assigned by the Dean of Students office to do 1,500 hours of community service.

The penalties were handed down for debris that was found in front of the KA house during Old South Week and included a punishment for streaking by one of the fraternity's members.

Despite the recent trouble, however, incumbent IFC President Michael Wainscott said Bruser is an appropriate choice.

"I know he has gone through some tough times with his fraternity, but he will do a good job," Wainscott said.

The new executive vice-president of IFC is Grant Vo-rhauer, a member of Pi Kap-pa Alpha social fraternity.

Judge blasts government for obstruction and delays in sex discrimination case

By James Rowley

WASHINGTON — A 20-year-old sex discrimination suit against the Navy ended yesterday with court approval of a $1.05 million settlement but only after the judge blasted the government for "blatant obstructionism and deliberate delaying tactics."

The $1.05 million in back pay was divided among 83 women who sued the Navy as part of the class-action discrimination lawsuit.

U.S. District Judge Harold Greene held more than a decade ago that the Navy's computer oper-ations center had hired the women as systems analysts at lower pay grades than similarly qualified male applicants and promoted them more slowly.

His 1981 ruling led to a series of government appeals, including one to the Supreme Court, which ordered Greene to reacliculate certain satisficial findings.

She sends Wednesday and Pugsley to summer camp and marries Fester but is unable to kill him, no matter how hard she tries.

As in "The Addams Family," the family sticks together to try and bail the gulible Fester out of trouble. Gomez doesn't accept it when Debice tells him Fester doesn't want to see the family anymore.

Wednesday does everything in her power to escape from summer camp so she can tell her uncle what Debbie really wants. Even baby Pubert is aware of the family member's responsibility to each other. He is the one who saves the family in its moment of despair.

said. "They are getting better every time out."

Their last time out was Friday at the Walsch Invitational in Cincinnati. The team's performance hit the bull's eye. Freshman Eric Anderson and sophomores Naney Napolski and Mike Singer all broke or tied school records at the meet. Being out of the public eye has two sides, Mullins said. "Sometimes that is pretty depressing because they do well and don't see anything from it," he said. "They've had to deal with it in high school, so they are somewhat used to it. They don't have as much pressure of having to do well because people don't read about them every day."

Bill protecting clinics from protest violence benefits all women

EDITORIAL

The owner of a Florida abortion clinic has her home staked out for weeks, and the friends of her children are told her mother is a

Other doctors are followed and have prices put on their heads One is murdered, leading to dozens more resigning.

And all the while, women are denied a service that is perfectly gal in this country.

These actions are not free speech. They are harassment and violence, and should carry stiffer penalties than slaps on the wrist. Fortunately, they soon will.

A bill was just passed overwhelmingly in Congress to make crimes stemming from anti-abortion protests federal offenses.

This is an issue that is politically loaded because abortion itself is such a volatile issue in our society. Congress has been tip-toeing around the tide of anti-abortion violence for years.

However, the fact is that this bill has nothing to do with abortion and everything to do with a law-abiding person's right to live free from harassment and fear of violence.

Proof of this is the fact that 30 anti-abortion congressmen voted in favor of the bill.

No one is questioning the rights of anti-abortion activists to protest. They can be out on the sidewalks with their signs every day until the sun freezes because they are exercising their constitutional rights.

But too many activists (note we don't say all activists) have be-come frustrated with the judicial and legislative systems, and have resorted to blockades, intimidation and violence that go way be-yond any rights the Constitution gives them.

This new law will curb this and other forms of harassment by in stituting stiffer penalties. We applaud members of Congress for taking a stand on an issue that could hurt them politically.

It sends a message that women and issues that concern them are important enough to protect. That will only help women of all po-litical ideologies.

I find it interesting that Beverly Knapp and Jonathan Whitaker ex-press such deep indignation to-ward a cartoon (Alex DeGrand's piece regarding the New Jersey governor's election), and yet do not express outrage regarding the political corruption the cartoon satires.

At first glance, this might seem to be the simple result of "law stu-dents" who never learned what political satire is.

I suspect, however, that their etter can be read in another way: It is racist even to speak of the ra-cism of others (in this case the Republican Party).

In other words, the very fact that a political cartoon deals with the problem of racism in our soci-ety means, in the twisted logic of Knapp and Whitaker, that it "fur-. racist misconception and

Top ten reasons to be thankful for males

In the spirit of Thanksgiving, I've also decided to write a little something about how thankful I am for men.

Pay attention, all of you who questioned my sexual orientation, parentage, etc., last week.

The top 10 things about men that I am grateful for this Thanks-giving week:

10. Men can open almost any jar you put in front of them. I easily will concede that I do not have the upper body strength or patience to open sealed jars.

My mother can open jars, but I think she knows an incantation and a dance that makes lids fly off without any trouble.

9. Men can hold open the White Hall Classroom Building doors. Most of the men on this campus are fairly polite and will hold open those doors for you if you act pitiful enough — and run fast enough.

8. Men occupy most administra-ve positions on this campus, naking it easier for women to ob-tin the jobs with substance and meaning. Let them push paper. It makes them happy.

7. Most men will not hit a woman back, making them wonderful punching bags when you are angry. But I stress "most"—be careful when selecting a man on whom to vent your anger.

6. The fashion industry makes ball and hockey. And they are very

4. Men are very nice in that they have always graciously taken over the presidency every four years.

Women wouldn't want to have to decide on vital issues or actually go to those boring meetings all the time — EWWW!

3. The mean height of men is higher than the mean height of women, making it easier for me, at 5-foot-9, to look them in the eye

In the spirit of Thanksgiving, I've decided to write ... about how thankful I am for men. Men occupy most administrative positions on this campus, making it easier for women to obtain the jobs with substance and meaning. Let them push paper. It makes them happy.

I can't survive without men's jeans and sweaters. They don't make the sleeves long enough on women's sweaters.

2. Men have been conscientio enough to agree to decide on what the laws on abortion will be, since they are the authorities on the suband counterpoints than women.

They can stay calm longer than women, and they never ever announce that they're right and you're wrong. They also don't throw tantrums like women.

I really enjoyed all the phone calls and electronic mail messages I received last week — all from men. I'm glad you're all taking an interest in what I write and sitting down to think about it before you call me and express your displeas-ure with the content of my col-

Not sarcastically now, I'd just like to thank all my male friends, especially Brian L., Chris B., Chris M., Matt F., Jim S., Jerry V., Tim N., Joe K. and my dad, for convincing me this past week that not all men are the missing link.

member that when you come back, your professors are going to real-ize you're only halfway through your class syllabus — and will at-tempt to do something about it.

Sim City teaches lesson in the game of life

puter games, especially games that attempt to mir ty. One of my favorites one of my favorites — and a inner of several teaching awards — is the game Sim City.

This game simulates the job of a city planner in designing a town, watching it grow and meeting the changing needs of its population. My urban planning classes in North Carolina even used the game as a teaching tool.

A few weekends ago I was playing Sim City for an afternoon break and decided to redesign Lexington or some real city and see how it would change if I speeded up the game.

Then I hit a problem: My little Sim City citizens were all rational beings.

Sure, I could designate areas as commercial, residential or industrial. Some of these areas near water or parks might hold higher values, and thus I could introduce a class structure into my city.

On the other hand, my little Sim Citizens lived in a world without racial or gender divisions.

I could not summarily restrict one segment of my population ac-cording to some feature (perhaps skin color) to one part of town and different segment to another resi-dential neighborhood.

I could not include the segrega-tion laws and zoning regulations that divided the races in the past and gave birth to our contempo-rary residential neighborhoods.

Nor could I take into account the social divisions largely remaining (at least here in Kentucky) between different races.

Perhaps it is just my own racist

Jeff Jones Kernel Columnist

bias, but I have a feeling my little Sim Citizens are pure ol' boring white bread, Euro-folk.

Likewise, a few churches popped up automatically as the form of a building or two in my city blocks, but no mosques or synagogues or oak tree circles appeared.

There went all hopes for a Little Jerusalem or a Shakertown. My Sim City lies firmly in Christen-dom, without even a few religious minorities to convert, discriminate against or burn in the town square.

I tried to put residential, com-mercial and industrial areas next to each other so my electronic sin-gle parents would be close to work and home.

Unfortunately, you either build industrial zones or have massive unemployment

Likewise, there is a certain ... shall I say "Soviet" feel to these industrial zones: They all come up as things like oil refineries and chemical plants. Apparently IBM doesn't locate in Sim City.

The zoning itself effectively en-gineers my Sim Citizens if they have genders.

Unlike the largely unspecial-ized cities of the pre-industrial age, people rarely work, live and shop next to each other today.

If gendered along the lines of our society, my single-race Sim City is set up for the women to suppose I also need not worry about Sen. Tim Philpot visiting my city. There would probably be no porn stores because you couldn't have porn in an asexual society (I think!). My citizens are apparently androgynous, or at least genderless.

I suppose I also need not worry about Sen. Tim Philpot visiting my city. There would probably one porn stores because you couldn't have porn in an asexual society (I think!). My citizens are apparently androgynous, or at least genderless.

Or are they? True, my Sim City was designed by a male (me), but the program doesn't allow me any other choices really.

stay out in the suburbs (zoned residential), and the men to go to the industrial areas "to work."

Being the self-assured electronic town planner I am, my little Sim City weathered and evolved through economic depressions, crime waves, increasing population and even I even hautral disasters. Removed from reality as it was, winning was still difficult.

I learned, however, a lot about reality from my game.

This game has a lot of assumptions about society as monocultural: Christian, one race and designed largely for men.

In effect, Sim City simulates planning for and by our society's elites.

•If planners like this game for its interesting simulations of real urban planning, what does this say about urban planning in America?

Although there is a branch of planning called advocacy planning, which is aimed at address ing social issues, it appears that a good number of models underlying planning projects are based on some unrealistic perceptions of general society.

Multi-culturalism needs to be addressed in urban forms.

•If cities are built for people, then we need to realize that not all people are the same — nor are they treated equally in our society.

Thus, Lexington does not need light rail links to Louisville or an-other public project off Man O' War Boulevard.

What we need is accessible health care and quality education in all areas of the city — including the north side.

So, the next time you want to learn something via a computer game, try Sim City. It definitely is a teaching tool, both in its intended goal and the assumptions behind it.

Study: Improper use of drugs costs nation $100 billion yearly

By Lauran Neergaard

WASHINGTON — Americans fail to take their medicine properly half the time, and that costs the nation $100 billion a year in medical bills and lost productivity, the drug industry said yesterday.

said yesterday.

Many Americans skip doses, abandon their medicine early or don't even get prescriptions filled — traits that keep them sick and have caused a surge in drug-resistant diseases.

drug-resistant diseases.

The problem is an old one but the Task Force for Compliance, a consortium of 22 pharmaceutical companies, put a price on it for the first time.

It found missing medicine
