An exumenical worship service was held at Central Christian Church to bring logether members of its predominantly white congregation and members of the predominantly black congregation of East Second Christian Church to celebrate the life of King, the slain civil rights activits who died in Memphis, Tenn., April 4, 1968.

At the end of the service, the group stood in a circle in the church and joined hands in prayer, "just like Dr. Martin Luther King envisioned," several members said.

The theme for the march and candle lighting ceremony was "United

"we shall overcome someday."
With tear-filled eyes, student fellow students from United Campuss Ministry and Black Voices.

"From what I know Lexington is

The candle lighting ceremony, which followed the march, concentrated on preserving those themes for which King gave his life, such as the bond of the family, education and bringing together a community of nations in good will. Travis Tritt's newest release continues fusion of rock, country

By DAVE LAVENDER Staff Critic

Not too many years ago, guitarist Lonnie Mack recorded a song that said, "I'm too rock for country, too country for rock 'n' roll." Unfortunately for Mack, the statement proved to be painfully true. For at that time, the rock and country mixture was like drinking and driving: a deadly combination.

But that was then and Tritt is now.

Tritt, a brilliant balladeer from Marietta, Ga., has quickly endeared himself to country and rock fans. He seems to have it all: a trademark husky voice, good looks, great songwriting ability and last, but not least, a great sense of humor. After winning the Horizon Award (Dest new artist) from the Country Music Association, Tritt quickly quipped, "Maybe people will quit calling me Anady" (referring to fellow artist Randy Travis).

It also is his sense of humor that

To prove his sardonic sense of humor, Triti debuted the song on "The Tonight Show," stating, "If anyone could relate to a song for divorcees, it was those two guys (Johnny Carson and Ed McMahon)," Triti's landmark chorus, "Call someone who'll listen and might give a damn, maybe one of your come round here handni'me none or your lines/Here's a quarter, call someone who cares."

However, it is Tritt's brash, hard-driven translations of "Don't Give Your Heart To A Rambler," a 1954 Jimmie Skinner bluegrass tune, and a live, eight-guains-walling version of an Atlanta Rhythm Section's tune, "Homesick," which really sets this album on the cutting edge of the work of the control of the con

Tritt displays his Southern-fried rock best during a live recording of "Homesick," and on "Biblebelt," a true story waved into song about a married youth pastor running off with a married piano player in church Tritt attended in Marietta.

Travis Tritt's newest release, It's All About To Change, features guest appearances by ex-Eagles member Bernie Leadon and Nash-ville studio musicians Paul Franklin, Billy Walker Jr., and Matt Rol-

Equipped with Little Feat, Tritt rocks the "Biblebelt" with all the funk, blues and rock energy that three minutes can afford. However, the best tune on the album has to be his duet, "The Whisekey Ain't Workin," with Sharart, examenber of Johnny Cash and Emmylou Harris' bands.

Knopfler sometimes shifts gears too abruptly (from lonely Dobro to full orchestra at one point). Many of his ideas are recycled from earlier albums, and this one would have benefited from tighter editing. The opener "Calling Elvis" runs on for more than six minutes — did Elvis ever cut a six-minute song? Still, On Every Street explores more stylistic avenues in 12 songs and 60 minutes than many major pop groups cover in an entire career.

High-scoring Houston leads Tennessee attack

Denying Vols' star the ball key to victory, Pitino says

By TIM WIESENHAHN Sports Editor

The "haves" and "have nots" of this world can do more than affect social, political and economic change. They, too, can affect the outcome of many of life's less significant, but perhaps more entertaining pastimes. Namely, UK-Tennessee basketball games. With a basketball in his hands, Tennessee gard Allan Houston becomes a have.

One possibility would be amending the bill to place all current board members be automatically nominated for reappointment. But Jones shot down that idea Friday.

"The bad ones as well as the good ones ... Sure, I would have an objection to that." Jones said.

Another possibility was mentioned by Rep. James Zimmerman (R-LaGrange) in the House debate Friday. He proposed using the accounting principle of "last in, first out." That could take former Gov. Wallace Wilkinson off the UK Board of Trustees, which many have said is the sole intent of the bill.

House Majority Leader Greg Stumbo (D-Prestonsburg) also said the abolition of the boards could be phased in by accelerating the expiration of some trustees' terms. Rep. Ernesto Scorsone (D-Exington), the sponsor of the bill, said the wait in the Senate would provide time for negotiations.

scene for exposure to tear gas, officials said.

The confrontation marred one of Denver's largest ever celebrations of Martin Luther King Day. Earlier in the day, more than 10,000 people paraded through east Denver.

About 100 white supremacists gathered for a rally at the state capitol after a federal judge reversed a decision by the Colorado State Parol to deny the group a permit, saying denial would violate their right to free speech.

After the rally, a crowd of about 1,000 people throwing bottles, bricks and snowballs attacked the school bus on which police tried to spirit the Klan members out of the capitol area.

Police on motor-yeles and horses used tear gas and nightsticts o dispesse the crowd, said police spokesman John Wyckoff.

Later, youths ran down a nearby shopping district and ransacked a Foot Locker sports clothing store, punching two store employees, store manager Ron Borho said.

"They came in and took every-thing they wanted," he said, esti-mating about $1,000 worth of mer-chandise was stolen.

Of the five people treated at the hospital, three were overcome by tear gas, one man was punched in the nose, and a police officer was hit in the chest with a brick, said spokeswoman C.L. Harmer.

At a ceremony earlier in front of a statue of King in City Park, May-or Wellington Webb prayed for the KKK members, calling them "mis-guided representatives of hatred and intolerance."

"Those who would spread evil and racial hatred ... need our prayers," said Webb, who is black. "We're strong people, God's people placed here to bring people together for all the nation to see."

Gov. Roy Romer also participated in the celebration.

Let the debate begin with or without ex-Gov. Wilkinson

Today Wallace Wilkinson will attend his first board meeting as a UK trustee. He appointed himself so that he could stimulate reform of higher education. In a speech last week to the Lexington Rotary Club, Wilkinson laid out what he says he views as the problems at today's colleges and universities.

In general, he is right. His complaints are worthy of debate and a search for solutions. Higher education and UK, in particular, are not in general, ite 1 signt. Ins companies are wonly or decoact and search for solutions. Higher education and UK, in particular, are not above question. To simply throw off his questions would be to further the clitist image of higher education, which ultimately hurts it in the eyes of the average Kentuckian.

Too many students do not succeed in obtaining a four-year de-

Wilkinson pointed to similar statistics that show fewer than half the students who immediately enter college upon high school gradu-ation are able to obtain a degree within seven years.

"We must re-examine the teaching and learning activities of our faculty and students to see why this is happening," the former governor told the Rotarians. "In no part of our society, certainly not in business, do we tolerate such a high failure rate."

"Publish or perish is not a cliche," he said. "Story after story relates how young professors who receive outstanding teaching awards are denied tenure because they haven't published or because they haven't published enough."

For evidence, we offer the following: Patrick Kagan-Moore in fine arts and David Olster in history and honors.

The cost of higher education is on a crash course with excluding

We hope for a full and honest debate, a debate that will find solu-tions to the problems that plague higher education today.

For Wilkinson: Our conditions of self-appointment

In all likelihood, Wallace Wilkinson will be a UK trustee for a long time — nearly six years. His appointment was government at its worst, a breach of the public trust.

Unfortunately, all our efforts to get him to resign were fruitless. And the legislature's illegitimate attempt to purge him from his seat on the UK board seems headed to a similar defeat.

It is time to move on. Trustee Wilkinson's proposed deb ucation reform is a legitimate one. In order to ensure its full hearing, the former governor must take the following steps at today's trustees meeting and throughout his tenure on the board:

Promise, as he did on his last day in office, that he will not run for chairman of the board. Also, he should promise that he will not meddle in the day-to-day affairs of the University. Wilkinson must promise that he will not use his seat on the board to settle old scores.

2. Promise that he will not use his position on the board as a pulpit from which to run his next campaign. The first consideration Wil-kinson gives to running for another public office while on the Usbard will be the end to the debate regarding higher education re-form. For the next six years, the governor can only cheer for others

3. Wait to start talking reform the debate until he fully understands the University. In general, Wilkinson is right, but applied to UK, some of his specifics are dead wrong. If Wilkinson enters this debate half-coked, he will not be taken seriously and will cause the debate to be sacrificed before it gets rolling.

4. Wilkinson says he is doing this for the students. Too many trustees don't know what a college student is, unless their children are enrolled. The former governor should take the time, now that he has it, to meet with students. He needs to spend time on the campus meeting them, just like when he traveled the state meeting the people of Kentucky, campaigning to be their leader. But this applies not just to Wilkinson, but to William Sturgill and the other 18 trustees.

We wish the governor well, as long as he has the best interests of the University and its students at heart. If he takes these steps, he will show that he is serious about this debate, that it is for the bene-fit of the Commonwealth's students and is not self-serving.

We believe these to be modest proposals. We hope Wilkinson won't make us look like British Prime Minister Neville Chamber lain after the appeasement of Adolf Hitler.

"I love our University, and I am loyal to it," Wilkinson said. "And would like it to be the lead University in this nation in reforming

Maybe that doesn't explain everything that went on, but it's close. And it is a whole lot closer than Stone's version of things. Stone, in short, distorts the truth and that often is called a lie.

Stone is a hippic still caught in the '60s. From 'Platoon' to "The Doorst," and now "JFK," Stone seeks to rewrite history as his warped mind would prefer it to be, not as it was.

Truth means nothing to him. Truth is whatever will reach the desires. He is a sick, naive man. To think that everyone was in-

GOP's silk stockings are failures

By SCOTT D. WARD

Three cheers for Sarah Coursey for her Nov. 25 commentary.

The problem we face as Republicans in Kenucky is not voter registration or political philosophy. The obstacle we face is that certain members of our party leadership activity and would rather "be captains of a rowboat than deckhands on a battleship."

We need to repeal this tradition of decisions being made by a special clique at the top and open up our party to new ideas and new leadership.

our party took a sound thrashing with Larry Hopkins as our standard-bearer. Contrary to what many Democratic political hacks vehomently hope, however, the Republican Party in Kentucky is not deal, twant a whole political party that went down to a disastrous defeat, it wasn't a whole political party and was a concept of political organization predicated on elitist leadership and a certain Republican factor that was soundly defeated.

drilled. It did its way, on its own, and its time is up.

"The times they are a-changing," and the Kentucky Republican Party can lead the way. We can sweep away the silk-stocking and country-club image our party has. We can offer an alternative to politics as usual and make campaign reform reality.

Many times during the primary I said that all Kentuckians would lose out if Kentuckian Republicans didn't have the courage to stand up to those who wish to make our decisions for us.

sions for us.

We missed our chance in May.
Let's not miss this opportunity to make the necessary changes for the Republican Party. Let's sweep out the old and welcome in the new along with the tried and true; and in four years we can all walk barefoot
on the carpet of the Governo's Mansion with Larry Forgy and look forward to a promising future for all Kentuckians.

Hey, I Want To Be A Columnist!

Got an opinion you want to express to the campus? The Viewpoint Page is now accepting applications for staff columnists. Staff columnists will write at least two columns, each 500–800 words long, a month and attend monthly staff meetings.

Those interested should submit at least three writing samples, each at least 500 words long. Samples may be on any topic, but at least one should discuss a contemporary event that is of broad interest to a general audience. Send applications to: "Hey, I Want To Be A Columnist", Viewpoint Page; Kentucky Kernel; 035 Enoch J. Grehan Journalism Building, UK; Lexington, Ky, 46506-0042. Deadline for applications is 4 p.m. Friday, January 24. Columnists will be chosen no later than Friday, January 31. Those who wish their samples returned should include a self-addressed stamped envelope.

"While the public health services long have said the only way to transmit the HIV virus is through blood, sex or needles, judges are perpetuating the belief that AIDS can be spread casually, through spiting or biting," said Larry Gostin, chief author of the Harvard School of Public Health study.

"We like to think judges are leaders of public opinion, but in this case, they have been perpetuating some of the fears that are prevalent in society."

The report, released Sunday, was conducted for the U.S. Health and Human Services Department, the Public Health Service and the National AIDS Program Office.

It reviewed more than 370 cases and covered legal issues related to housing, education, employment, prisons, the military and family law.

Americans may be numb to homelessness, poll says

Associated Press

NEW YORK — A poll published yesterday found Americans divided over whether the pervasive sight of homelessness is numbing people to the problem.

The New York Times-CBS News Poll showed significant differences in the way people of various age groups view the homeless.

Fifty-five percent of those between 18 and 29 years old said they thought most people are so used to seeing the homeless that they don't feel upset by them.

Forty-five percent of respondens between 30 and 44 years old, agreed with that senti-
