TRUCK: The truck is here! It was picked up 366 days after it was due for delivery. We hope to start scheduling deliveries the week of Jan. 7. The problem now is what to christen the truck. If you have some ideas about the name it should have, send them to Cliff Black. He'll collect them and a name will be bestowed.

COPYRIGHT: The following is taken from a letter dated December 13, 1973 from Stephen A. McCarthy, Executive Director of ARL: "This is a victory for NLM and NIH and for libraries generally. The majority of the Judges concurred in the view that the photocopying services provided by NLM and NIH do not constitute an infringement of copyright. At the same time this is a narrow ruling by the Court, because the decision is limited to this particular case and to the conditions and facts of this case. Nevertheless, this ruling becomes, in effect, the law on library photocopying unless Williams & Wilkins makes a successful appeal to the Supreme Court or until the Copyright Revision Bill containing new provisions with respect to library photocopying is enacted." A copy of the Opinion handed down by the U.S. Court of Claims on November 27, 1973 (No. 73-68, The Williams & Wilkins Company v. The United States) will be on file in the Director's Office for those wishing to read it.
