

U Senate votes yes to establish telecom department

By JOHN GRIFFIN
Staff Writer

The University Senate voted to re-establish the telecommunications department in the College of Communications yesterday after the dean assured members that there is money available for faculty positions.

Some faculty members initially opposed the plan, saying there is not enough money to finance the new department, chairman and faculty positions.

Countering these charges was Herbert Drennon, acting dean of the College of Communications. Drennon said funds for the positions were "authorized a couple of years ago. We have the necessary funding substantially to go ahead with our chairman search next year," he said. "If (the money needed) won't be huge by any means."

According to Drennon, the Board of Trustees established funds for the positions two years ago, one of those a chairmanship. At the time, the board said it recognized that the money was not adequate for that number of positions, Drennon said.

However, President Otis Singletary appointed a committee to examine the structure and organization of the College of Communications, and froze the money until the committee's report was released last Spring. Gov. John Y. Brown's budget cut last summer continued the freeze.

"Long before the crunch, the University allocated funds for the department," Singletary said. "These funds are still intact though, we haven't spent them."

Drennon said telecommunication classes are so overcrowded that some contain about 100 students. At present, there are two full-time faculty members teaching — one a visiting professor — and four part-time professionals from the community.

"We've been finding it increasingly difficult — especially in the production classes," he said. "In upper level courses, class size is overwhelming."

The salaries for each of the two new professors will probably be about $16,000 to $17,000 each year, he said, adding that it is impossible to estimate the cost of filling the chairman's position. Drennon said he also did not know how much money was available at present for the positions. The proposal will go before the Board of Trustees today for action at the 2 p.m. executive meeting.

The senate also voted to abolish the honors code in the College of Dentistry, which its dean said was too "laborious" to keep in existence.

The group discussed reports on the nature of the state's higher education written by three senate subcommittees formed by the Council for Higher Learning of Kentucky.

The first subcommittee's report dealt with the question of whether or not high schools were preparing students adequately to fulfill the requirements of college, and addressed the question of offering remedial courses at state colleges.

The report also addresses opportunities offered in college to gifted students.

The second subcommittee investigated the relationship between the number of students attending colleges and faculty salaries.

The third subcommittee dealt with low faculty morale, and the increasing problem of fewer faculty position openings.

Threat of academic suspension hangs over those lax in studies

By JAMES EDWIN HARRIS
Staff Writer

The words "academic suspension" struck home for more than 300 students in UK's three largest colleges last semester, while a larger number of students were placed on scholastic probation.

Curtis E. Harvey, acting associate dean of the College of Business & Economics said that "television, partying and other activities" are reasons for students' poor academic performance.

Raymond Cox, associate dean of the College of Arts & Sciences was more critical, citing low ACT scores, poor writing and parental pressure as causes for failure.

"Some students just can't read, write or organize material well enough," he said. "And some want a degree, but are unwilling to put in the time to get it."

The rules for dismissal and probation are outlined in the Student Code of Rights and Responsibilities.

"If a student has a quality point deficit at the end of his first full semester, the dean shall warn him that he is making unsatisfactory progress," the publication says.

Quality points are computed by multiplying the number of class hours attempted by the grade point average. A student with less than a "C" average is said to have a quality point deficit.

If the deficit is more than five points, "the dean may place him on scholastic probation. If he has demonstrated that he cannot or will not do satisfactory work, he shall be subject to academic suspension from the University, but the dean may place the student on scholastic probation if the individual case justifies it," the publication says.

Additional rules place students on probation who have GPA's of less than 2.0 after 90 hours of work, or who have accumulated a quality point deficit of five or more.

A student may be suspended if he acquires an additional deficit of five or more quality points while on probation, if he has a cumulative deficit of 15 or more quality points while on scholastic probation or if he spends three consecutive semesters on probation.

Suspension also brings an enforced absence of at least one semester plus a summer session.

The deans said they react to suspension in a liberal manner, usually requiring that a student fulfill at least two of the above rules.

"We are on the generous side," Cox said. "I follow the guidelines (in the rules) as closely as possible, but there is a degree of subjectivity to it."

"Dismissal means that the University is insisting that the student follow the rules," said Lyle Back, assistant dean of student records in the College of Engineering. However, he said he gives students the chance to see "the error of their ways."

"You hope that someone can catch fire and pull out of their academic doldrums," said Jack Delap, A&S associate dean of student records. Dismissal rates run higher in the spring because students do not take advantage of their second chance, he said.

"Students in most cases realize that it is their own fault," Harvey said, adding that he thinks probation causes students to try harder to succeed.

"You sort of get better in time," Cox said. "Students who get through their freshman year are usually aware of what it takes to stay in school."

The students dismissed are usually freshmen and sophomores, the deans said. There are juniors and seniors, however, who are also dismissed. But Cox said fewer than 10 seniors were dropped from A&S last semester.

Informing parents of academic problems is up to the student.

For seven years, the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974 has prohibited institutions above the high school level from revealing to anyone the status of a student's academic record without the student's written permission.

"Schools and colleges are prohibited from giving information (from files) to anyone outside official educational channels without the permission of parents or adult students," said an article in U.S. News and World Report soon after the bill, referred to as the "Buckley Amendment," was passed.

An adult student's parents are permitted access to his file only with his written consent.

"Any institution flouting it (the law) could lose all financial aid from the U.S. government," the article said.

SCB pares field of applicants from 67 to 19

By LESLIE MICHELSON
Staff Writer

Now that the new Student Center Board has been selected, 19 people will be given the power to decide what concerts, speakers, movies, trips, artists and special events will be arranged next year.

For such responsible positions there needs to be a wholesome method of selection.

Seven students (four of whom are non-returning SCB members) were in charge of deciding. One faculty adviser presided over the meetings, but was not actually involved in the selections, according to SCB Contemporary Affairs Chairman Mary Stan Fizer.

Since there were 67 applicants the decision was difficult. Fizer said the applicants had to first fill out an application and sign up for an interview. There was an orientation, then interviews, and finally an open meeting for applicants to learn specific details about the SCB groups.

Fizer said the main factors the selection committee is looking for are "experience, willingness to work, openness to new ideas, dedication, and flexibility of schedule."

Although certain character traits are desired, Fizer said no particular "types" of people are preferred. "We are looking for a variety of people who like all kinds of different things," she said. "Everything from applications to interviews is taken into consideration because each case is special," Fizer explained.

She said the people who do not make it usually join the committees eventually. Some people get discouraged and do not come back immediately, but "sooner or later most people return if they were really interested in the first place," she said. One reason why applicants are turned down is lack of experience, Fizer said.

Even though some of the rejected applicants may not agree, Director of Student Activities John Herbst said the selection process is completely fair.

"There are three ways of getting a new Student Center Board: election, appointment, and selection. We use selection to avoid a popularity contest and because we can get the most qualified and interested students," he said. Herbst added that UK's selection process is so successful other schools have adopted it.

NCAA student tickets to be distributed tonight

Student tickets for the NCAA Tournament preliminary round, to be played March 15 in Tuscaloosa, Ala., will be distributed by lottery tonight at 6 p.m. in the Great Hall of the Student Center.

UK's opponent will be the winner of the University of Alabama, Birmingham — Western Kentucky University contest.

Athletics Director Cliff Hagan requested and received additional tickets for the University this year. A total of 250 tickets will be available for students — 25 going to the pep band and 225 allocated for sale to students.

Any student with a validated spring semester ID and activity card can participate in the lobby. Lottery stubs will be issued beginning at 5 p.m. Students must be present after receiving the stubs until 6 p.m.

Lottery winners may purchase two tickets, which will be sold at $7 each and must be purchased with cash.

If the Wildcats win on Sunday, a second lottery for student tickets for the NCAA Mid-East Regional Tournament played on Friday, March 20 at Bloomington, Indiana, will be held at 6 p.m. on Tuesday, March 17 in the Ballroom of the Student Center.

SA works its proposals into parking plan to be voted upon by Board of Trustees today

By PEGGY BOECK
Staff Writer

At last night's Student Association meeting, SA President Brad Sturgeon announced SA's success in incorporating eight of its 11 proposals into the parking plan which will be voted upon today by the Board of Trustees.

"I'm very happy with the results," Sturgeon said. "It proves that students will be listened to when it comes to on-campus decisions."

Sturgeon said the SA's ideas which were incorporated into the parking proposal are:

- The University will employ six students for the 1981-82 school year to issue tickets for cars illegally parked.

- All people using campus parking facilities will be issued parking stickers. Sturgeon said the senate was opposed to this proposal, however, he felt it was essential.

- A graduated fine system will be implemented. Students will have five working days to pay parking fines. The fine is being proposed at $4. If the fine is not paid in five working days, the fine will be raised to $7. The current fine is $5.

- An amnesty week will be held May 4-8, in which parking fines can be paid for $3.

- The appeals process will be printed on parking tickets for students with questions or objections regarding tickets.

- 1000 additional parking spaces will be paved at the Stadium parking lot. SA proposed that these spaces be paid for by the Athletic Association.

- The parking proposal suggests one-half of the cost be paid by the Athletic Association, with the other half of the money coming from parking sticker revenue.

- The towing fee will be $20. SA suggested a $10 towing fee. The initial plan called for a $25 towing fee.

- There will be transportation improvements, such as mini-buses for night service and improved bus shelters.

- The plan will be implemented over two years, instead of the one-year period initially proposed. SA proposed a three-year implementation but compromised on the two year period. "We came off pretty well on that we did get some ideas incorporated and there were some compromises," Sturgeon said.

In other action: Finance Director Bobby Clark said that SA's hearing, scheduled for yesterday, regarding its suit against Gov. John Y. Brown was postponed. The suit was filed in Franklin Circuit Court.

SA is charging the governor with over-stepping the executive authority given him by the constitution by making a legislative decision to merge the Utility Regulatory Commission and the Energy Commission into a Public Service Commission.

Touché! Newspaper staff bemoans fact that hindsight is a much better safeguard than foresight

Calling a newspaper racist or sexist is an attack on the inherent journalistic principle of objectivity. Such attacks should not be viewed lightly.

At the Kernell, they are not. Yet we have been barraged by such attacks recently. And these attacks are not without foundation.

Look at the evidence:

Last semester, we referred to a female UK housing resident as a coed. Such a term is archaic and sexist. It should not have been used.

In February, we used the catchline "So what?" with a picture of two black girls who were listening to their uncle — University of Texas professor George Wright — give a speech on Black History Month. Although the girls looked tired, the sensitivity of the subject their uncle was addressing did not merit the use of such a catchline.

Last week, we ran a story on cheating. Included in the story was a graphic design depicting two students apparently in the pro-act. Although it was unintentional, the two students appeared to be black.

We have admittedly erred.

But we hope that these errors are viewed as amateur mistakes and not as Kernell policy. We are, for the most part, amateurs putting out a daily newspaper for 23,000+ students. And as such, we do occasionally make mistakes.

But regardless of these errors, our record indicates that we have supported the move for equal rights for women and have supported minorities in their efforts to have better representation at UK as well as nationwide.

In the future, we will strive to be more aware of sensitive subjects and treat them as such.

By being more aware, we can give readers a more accurate representation of what is going on.

It is unfortunate, however, that hindsight is often the clearest kind of vision.

Distraught roommate feels left out after Franklin's house burns

I opened the door to see a smiling lady standing there, holding a paper bag.

"My, you do look awful," she said, smiling sweetly.

I sighed. "Well, you know, everything I own just burned up in a fire. Other than that, though, there's no excuse."

She smiled again. "Well, that's why I came. I brought these clothes for Franklin." Her face grew sad. "I'm sorry, I didn't know he roomed with another person."

"He didn't," I answered bitterly. "Just me."

I swung the door wide as Franklin came bounding into the hall. "Aunt Mammie, what's happening?" She kissed Franklin, who was standing, wet and wrapped in a towel.

guest column

I turned to shut the door, but a girl quickly ran in. "My God, Franklin, how do you do?" She grabbed him and kissed him.

His smile faded. "I think I'm all right, Nancy," he said sadly. "At least, during the day. But I'm just not sure I can face tonight alone." She hugged him. "Don't worry, baby, I'll stay with you." She turned to look at me. She wrinkled her face.

"Is this creep one of the firemen?"

"Actually, I'm just observing Ash Wednesday through Sunday," I said. "The phone rang and I answered it."

"Is Franklin there?" a voice asked urgently.

"I think so, why?"

"I heard his house burned," said the male voice. "I'm his history professor and I'm calling to tell him not to worry about the test. I'm giving him an A for the semester."

I hung up, remembering that the same professor had just called to tell me he was changing my incomplete to an E.

I walked back into the living room to discover hundreds of people milling about. All carried packages of clothes, food and money. Franklin was talking to a girl as I walked up.

"I'm really all right, Dorian," he was saying, "during the day. I just don't think I can face Friday night alone, though."

Bass Messy, with whom he had moved in with after the fire, walked in. "Hey, Franklin, I just brought you some filet mignon and chocolate mousse in case you're hungry," he called.

I pulled Messy aside. "I'm getting a little tired of this," I said. "My apartment burned, too. But Franklin gets all the attention. You gave him the spare room and made me sleep in the garage. His friends collected $5,200 in cash for him, the Japanese students got together and gave him a car and the girls are now sleeping with him in hourly shifts."

Messy looked at me. "Don't feel so neglected. I brought you something, too." He pulled a mound of material out of a sack. "Here," he said. "It's a suit, and I'm giving it to you."

I looked at him. "How do you know it'll fit?"

"Has to," he answered. "It's one size fits all."

Just then a large man wearing a hard hat burst into the room.

"Franklin," he yelled over the noisy din. "I'm a builder and I'm here to tell you I have a house that's yours for the asking."

Everyone screamed and whooped for joy. Except for me. I looked over at Messy. "Well, I guess at least I get Franklin's room now," I said.

Messy stared at me. "Are you crazy? I'm torching this place."

Money on the table

Griffin picks winners in NCAA

I've worked the better part of the past week on a reply to Dana Pico's mindless defense of capitalism, but I'm now gripped with basketball fever, and for the next few weeks every roundball fan, and thus every Kentuckian, will be as close to heaven as we can get on earth.

Almost as close, that is. As close as we'll be, some will be still closer. For example, when Bowie goes up for the alley oop, or when Aguirre winds up for a windmill slam dunk.

The NCAA playoffs may doom President Reagan's economic plan from the start.

Consider the economic impact of the NCAA championships: from March 12 to March 30, almost three weeks, millions of dollars of idle capital will sit in bedroom drawers, money invested in basketball pools and assorted basketball wagers.

The government's economic figures for the period ought to reflect the inflation in point-of-capitalism and the Women's college journey (not to mention countless other journeys) will all add to the crowded spring schedule.

State high school playoffs (boys and girls, 50 states), NIT playoffs, NBA championships, Women's professional league championships, and the Women's college journey (not to mention countless other journeys) will all add to the crowded spring schedule.

It is a good thing there is a lot of basketball to be watched, because there is not so much to be played. This area is sorely lacking in public basketball facilities. The outdoor court that is open may be missing a hoop, and a net is a rare sight. Indoor courts are almost always too crowded, usually with no play or some other organized activity.

Organization is not the nature of pickup basketball, not the nature of the basketball most people know. It is fine for those who know what they will be free on the same day for a number of weeks in a row; it is a disappointment to the average person, who rarely knows what is going to happen from one week to the next.

The good courts that are available will likely be used for a full-court game, depriving deserving others like a driver whose car uses up two parking places.

Basketball is on the way to becoming a spectator sport, a non-sport rarely, where performers are paid to entertain audiences with their wondrous feats. The roots will be missing, however, and the sport will surely die. What gives basketball such appeal is that the spectators are frequently participants. We are there with the players, dishing off the pass to the open man on the give and go, hauling down the rebound off the glass, taking the ball to the hoop and slamming it home. We know the tune, we know the words, so we hum along.

The song will not always remain the same. Unless facilities are expanded to accommodate the weekend player, basketball will become the opera or ballet of the privileged. Ticket prices will continue to go up, and cable will mean paying to watch games on television.

It would not be surprising to see basketball clubs pop up like tennis and racquetball clubs. Pay to play, if you can.

What starts on the playgrounds of the ghetto has an uncanny way of becoming chic to the elite. From jazz to drugs to modern art, money is attracted to the games and recreation of the backroads and alleys.

Already, ticket prices are prohibitive to many fans. Universities, like everyone else in organized basketball, are looking to make a dollar. Or several hundred thousand.

Alumni ticket sales are no more than sanctioned scalping; large donations buy access to prime seats.

The closest I'll get to the post-season action this year is entering numerous basketball pools.

It's a great way to get involved in each and every game, and the basketball novice has as good a chance of winning as the die-hard fan. Upsets are common in tournament play, and knowing the favorite is more of handicap than a help.

Let's put this in a capitalist light. According to Dana Pico, "If a person does not work at all, then he has earned nothing and deserves just that." Seen this way, basketball pools are a communist tool designed to encourage collective action by the masses.

Maybe that is why I'm so attracted to them: they're a way to beat the system. You actually get something for almost nothing. Small risk, big payoff.

Anyway, in this year's NCAA tournament, I pick DePaul to battle Kentucky for the Midwest spot in the final four. LSU to beat Iowa in the Midwest, North Carolina to beat Oregon State in the West, and Virginia to get revenge on Notre Dame in the East. The Midwest victor will take it all.

Faux pas

After enduring your "ducky" faux pas of last week, and your recurring Reaganean wisdom, I feel obligated to point out that in your March 5th edition, you neglected to point out in which country the American Embassy was fired upon in the "World" section. While the United States does not have embassies in all the 150-plus countries in the world, I believe some better indication of perhaps the hemisphere is in order. ### On the Court

Since the United States Supreme Court handed down its decision concerning the posting of the Ten Commandments in Kentucky's public classrooms, much has been written and said about it. There have been certain misleading statements concerning the Supreme Court decision and the role of the Attorney General's Office in this matter. Other comments have indicated an apparent lack of understanding of the basic principles underlying our constitutional form of government and the statutory role of the Attorney General's Office of Kentucky.

In November, 1980, the United States Supreme Court declared unconstitutional a Kentucky statute requiring the posting of the Ten Commandments in public classrooms of Kentucky. However, the court in its opinion went far beyond a simple discussion of the statute in question. Here are the exact words of the United States Supreme Court:

"The pre-eminent purpose for posting the Ten Commandments on schoolroom walls is plainly religious in nature..."

"This is not a case in which the Ten Commandments are integrated into the school curriculum, where the Bible may constitutionally be used in an appropriate study of history, civiliation, ethics, comparative religion, or the like. . . posting of religious texts on the wall serves no such educational function. If the posted copies of the Ten Commandments are to have any effect at all, it will be to induce the school children to read, meditate upon, perhaps to venerate and obey, the Commandments. However desirable this might be as a matter of private devotion, it is not a permissible state objective under the Establishment Clause."

The Court went on to point out that it made no difference that the posted copies of the Ten Commandments were financed by voluntary private contributions. In other words, the United States Supreme Court indicated that it does not matter how the school board receives the copy of the Ten Commandments, by gift or otherwise, because it is the permanent posting of the Commandments that violates the United States Constitution.

The above words and thoughts are not Steve Beshear's — they are those of the United States Supreme Court. The Attorney General's Office was then asked by the Kentucky Superintendent of Public Instruction what should be done about copies of the Commandments already posted in classrooms. By statute, my office is to give such an advisory opinion when requested. We therefore issued our advisory opinion, based upon the clear language quoted above, that the United States Supreme Court is requiring the removal of those copies of the Ten Commandments now posted on Kentucky's public classroom walls.

Contrary to some statements being made, the Attorney General's Office is not ordering anyone to do anything. This office has no authority to order a local school board to take this kind of action. Our opinions are advisory only and are meant to give guidance to local officials as to what the law is. If we had not advised local school boards the way we did, we would not have been doing our job.

As the son of a Baptist minister who was raised in a Christian home, I understand and appreciate the sincere feelings of many Kentuckians that copies of the Ten Commandments should be posted in the public classrooms. However, under the Kentucky Constitution and the laws of this state, my job as Attorney General is to tell people what the law is — not what many people might like it to be.

There are only two ways to change a decision of the United States Supreme Court: 1) Wait for the membership of the Court to change and hope that a new majority has a different attitude on an issue; 2) An amendment to the United States Constitution.

As you can imagine, this is not an easy opinion for me to issue. However, the United States Supreme Court left me no choice. I didn't make the decision, but once made, my role is to advise school boards so as to keep them out of legal difficulties, including possible lawsuits.

State

Kentucky's state gasoline tax will increase by one-half cent per gallon, effective April 1, rising from nine cents to 9.5 cents per gallon.

The increase, which will amount to a nickel for each 10 gallons, is based on a rise in the wholesale price of gasoline in January.

It is the first increase under a 1980 law that changed the gasoline tax from a flat 9-cent per gallon charge to 9 percent of the average statewide wholesale price.

Under the law, the percentage tax was to go into effect when the average wholesale price, excluding federal and state taxes, exceeded $1 a gallon.

An Elizabethtown realtor implied yesterday that former state Democratic chairman Howard "Sonny" Hunt duped him into a check-swapping arrangement connected with the Hidden Valley trial.

Frank Nelson Crain, who described himself as "patronage chairman" of Hardin County Democrats at the time in 1977, told in federal court of receiving a check from Link Real Estate for $16,700 and then delivering a check of the same amount to Hunt in state Democratic headquarters here.

Crain said this was done at Hunt's direction because Hunt "said he owned various companies, had problems at home and needed to shift funds."

The prosecution alleges in the trial that Hunt got the $16,700 for helping arrange for the state to buy Hidden Valley, a former dude ranch in Powell County.

The defendants are state Sen. Woodrow Stamper, D-West Liberty, and Robert Link, a Lexington realtor who owned the Link firm which sent Crain the original check.

Crain said he knew neither Stamper nor Link. He said Hunt gave him no further explanation of the check-trading process.

The march was the focal point of a two-day walkout, organized by the United Mine workers, that closed virtually all of the nation's major coal mines.

UMW President Sam Church called for the two-day "memorial period" as labor's response to President Reagan's claim last month the black lung benefits fund was in shaky condition because of alleged award abuses. The president called for tighter eligibility standards and a "reasonable" coal tax increase upon mine operators.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland joined the ensuing half-mile march to the White House. As they passed the White House, many shouted "Down with the jellybean!" referring to the president via his street tooth.

President Reagan applied the finishing touches yesterday to an unprecedented budget-cutting blitz which delves into more than 200 federal programs to trim $5 billion from government spending this year and $45 billion in 1982.

Reagan will formally submit his reworked budgets to Congress today. Already, he has drawn cheer from business and fiscal conservatives and outcry from the pained defenders of dozens of affected social programs. Even as he completed the final draft, for example, thousands of coal miners marched upon the White House to protest would-be cuts in black-lung benefits.

Reagan also planned to submit to Congress this week the details of his tax-cut proposals, which he unveiled last month when he outlined his economic recovery program.

Administration officials have confirmed that programs affected by the new round of cuts will include veterans programs, farm subsidies, water projects, subsidized loans, employment training and legal services.

undercurrent of irritation over American-Canadian issues and mounting disapproval for his emerging global policies.

The new president's 28-hour visit will be the first to Canada by an American chief executive since Richard M. Nixon traveled to Ottawa in 1972.

U.S. officials say the trip is designed mainly as a get-acquainted session for Reagan and Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

But in their several hours of talks, the two leaders will have a host of U.S.-Canadian problems to discuss, most dealing with economic and environmental matters. Differences will probably emerge over international issues as well.

Canadian groups opposed to the Salvadoran government are planning an anti-U.S. protest for Reagan's arrival.

Three Pakistani air pirates threatened an "extremely drastic measure" against more than 100 hostages aboard a hijacked jetliner at Damascus airport yesterday if imprisoned opposition activists were not freed in Pakistan. Three Americans and two other U.S. residents were among the hostages.

In its eighth day, the hijacking that began over Pakistan tied in duration the 1976 Entebbe incident, believed the longest-ever.

Rumors of a possible Syrian commando assault to rescue the hostages circulated after Pakistan President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq was said to have phoned Syrian President Hafez Assad and given him a free hand to deal with the situation. But veteran observers doubted any storming of the plane would take place while other options remained.

The heavily armed skyjacker set no deadline for the threat they made of "drastic" action after flying the Pakistan International Airways jet from Kabul, Afghanistan, to the Syrian capital before dawn. The nature of the "drastic" measure was not specified, but the hijackers previously threatened to blow up the plane or shoot more captives. They killed one Friday, a Pakistani diplomat.

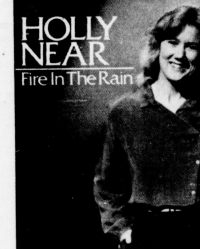

The spokesman said there were 116 passengers and seven crew members sitting in the aircraft 500 yards from the control tower.

Sports let wheelchair student 'grab the world again'

By BILL STEIDEN
Senior Staff Writer

"I said to myself, 'Well, I'm going to wake up tomorrow and everything's going to be OK,' but it just didn't work out that way."

When Judy Hale, a 20-year-old sophomore from Manchester, Ky., was paralyzed from the waist down in a 1976 motorcycle accident, she didn't let it keep her down for long.

"I've got to live with this," she said. "I had to go out and grab the world again."

Her way of "grabbing the world" has been to grab a basketball. Now Hale has the distinction of being the only female player on the formerly all-male UK "Wheelcats" wheelchair basketball team and can claim to be one of the best players nationally in her disability classification.

Moreover, the Wheelcats are ranked 16th among the 150 teams in the National Wheelchair Basketball Association.

It wasn't easy for Hale to become a basketball star.

"It took me a long time just to be able to hit my first shot," she said. "It took a lot of determination on my part not to just give it up."

Hale said her determination grew out of a desire to "have some form of recreation."

"I just couldn't see myself as the stereotyped cripple," she said, "I mean, becoming sedentary, sitting there all day watching TV or reading books."

In any case, she was no stranger to basketball, having played for her high school girls' team. Experience "played a big part" in helping her develop skills as a wheelchair player, she said.

"All the rules are the same. The goal is still 10 feet up."

Hale said she was introduced to the sport as soon as she began undergoing therapy at Lexington's Cardinal Hill Home for Crippled Children, where she spent nine months following her accident.

"I started out on the UK women's team," she said, "but it folded after two years" for various reasons (particularly a lack of players). So Hale qualified for the men's team, over what she said were the objections of some of her present teammates.

"They didn't like the idea of a woman being on the team," she said. "They were afraid I would get hurt."

However, her teammates' reservations turned to camaraderie as she proved her worth as a player, she said.

"I hurt them just as much as they hurt me," she said, referring to the broken fingers and overturned wheelchairs that sometimes occur during close play.

The fact is, Hale has attracted the attention of other teams.

"I was offered a job and a really nice place to live if I went to play for the Eastern Paralyzed Veterans' Association in New York," she said.

But Hale, a journalism major, prefers to make a career of writing.

"I hope to write for Sports and Spokes," she said. "It's a really good magazine about wheelchair athletics."

Basketball is not the only athletic pursuit open to handicapped persons. Recently, Hale has become involved in "wheelchair racing," a track competition similar to the usual running events except for the specially-equipped wheelchairs participants use.

She has been successful, winning one gold medal, 12 silver and one bronze in the national championships — all during her first year of competition.

Her interest in the sport began when she tried out a friend's chair while visiting him in Florida she said.

"I wanted him to go out and get me a paper, and he said 'Here, take my chair and get it yourself.'"

It was a racing chair, and despite the fact that the newspaper stand was "just up at the corner," Hale said she was gone for "about three hours."

"I had the time of my life," she said, adding she didn't mind when she discovered that getting her out in the chair had been a deliberate ploy on the part of her friend, Phil Carpenter of Tampa. He finished third in the wheelchair division of last year's Boston Marathon, Hale said, minutes ahead of the "able-bodied" winner, Bill Rodgers.

She said the first race she entered was a marathon at the Kentucky Horse Park, in which she was the only disabled participant.

"It was a bad course," she said. "Too hilly, but it really got me in shape."

Since then, she has participated in meets at Ohio University and Transylvania University, as well as in the national championships at East Tennessee State University. She expects to resume competition this month, with the beginning of the racing season.

In the meantime, Hale stays in shape by "doing wheelchair sprints until you drop," totalling about six miles a day in the Seaton Center, where the Wheelcats practice. With the approach of the racing season and warmer weather, she takes to the streets of Lexington, "dodging cars and buses."

Hale expressed interest in other wheelchair sports, many of which she said have been developed recently, including volleyball, badminton and tennis.

"Tennis is a sport we can play with able-bodied people," she said. "In basketball, we put them in a wheelchair, but in tennis they can stand up."

Although disabled players are allowed an extra bounce of the ball, "we usually don't take it," she said.

Hale does not yet play tennis, but said she was invited in September to attend the National Wheelchair Tennis Championships in California. She could not attend because she lacked the money to finance the trip.

Hale said money has also been a problem for the Wheelcats, who are no longer supported by the University, perhaps in part because not all the team members are UK students. "Some players can't make away games because they can't afford it," said Hale. "It's John Y's (Gov. John Y. Brown's) doing. He cut us to the bone."

Another problem disabled students face, she said, is inaccessible buildings and facilities at the University.

Although she said the University is "generally pretty good" about making campus structures accessible to wheelchairs, she was very critical of the Journalism Building, where she attends classes.

"What they use for an elevator, I just can't do it. I just can't open the doors," she said, adding that she is dependent on other people to help her get in and out of the building.

Another problem is bus service, she said. "The north campus bus is one of only two in the city that are accessible," she said. "They said they were going to fix all the buses, but now the city says they don't have enough money."

Hale said although the University's Handicapped Student Services organization "helps pretty well," more cooperation from the University administration is needed.

"Just as long as they don't build new barriers" to the handicapped, she said, "that's the thing. New barriers just have to be ripped out."

While she is not a member of any formal disabled citizens' group, Hale said "disabled citizens as a group, are a group" and she attempts to stay informed of the latest developments in disabled persons' rights.

"I hate to see people going through life not knowing what they can do, or feeling they're limited because they're disabled," she said. "I've done my best to bring people out, and I've succeeded."

As for herself, she said, "I just roll along with my head up and I think that, even though people look at me, they don't pity me so much."

Her opinion of pity? "It's a wasted emotion," she said. "You can talk until you're blue in the face. You've just got to get out there and show them."

Judge postpones hearing in SA suit against GTE

The PSC will rule on utility rate-making, such as the requested rate increase by General Telephone of Kentucky. The state constitution says the state legislature is the only government branch that can rule on utility rate-making organizations.

SA further contends the PSC will not have jurisdiction to decide on GTE's proposed rate-increase unless the 1982 legislature upholds the governor's executive order.

Clark said the hearing was delayed in order to give Judge Henry Meigs the opportunity to read the written testimonies submitted by SA and the Attorney General, who is representing the governor.

Sturgeon said the judge took this action because of the "sensitive political questions," involving the separation of government power and the constitutionality of the PSC.

If the judge feels an oral argument is necessary, he will set a hearing date, said Sturgeon.

Clark said SA will attend a hearing held by the PSC on March 24 to present its argument against a full 38 percent rate increase for GTE. SA will propose GTE receive a 16 percent increase, enough to meet the fair rate of return, and not be given a further increase until it meets adequate service requirements, Clark said.

SA will state its position as a representative of the students, he said, and will express the impact such a rate increase would have on the students.

SA also passed a bill allocating $500 to cover expenses of a sexual harassment conference the group is co-sponsoring. The conference is scheduled for April 25 in Dickey Hall.

The proposal of this bill stirred several arguments within the senate. Ray Carmichael, Business & Economics senator, said $500 was too much money to allow for the conference. He said other organizations were allowed only $150 from SA's student organization assistance fund and that activity should be no different.

Sturgeon said "under the circumstances of tight economic times" SA should allow only $150 now, and if more money for the conference could not be obtained elsewhere, SA could possibly allot more money later.

Debbie Earley, senator-at-large, said the conference was a good cause, and supported the proposed $500 allotment. Sexual harassment occurs more frequently than most people are aware, Earley said, adding that sexual harassment can have some very damaging effects.

Cheryl Hillen, director of women's concerns and co-sponsor of the bill, said this will be the first time for this type of conference in Kentucky and only the second such conference in the nation. The first conference on sexual harassment was held in Texas.

Aguirre on All-America squad, again

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Mark Aguirre of DePaul, college player of the year last season, was named Monday to The Associated Press' 1980-81 first-team All-America squad for the second consecutive year.

Aguirre, a 6-foot-7 junior forward, was joined on the first team by 7-4 sophomore Ralph Sampson of Virginia; 6-4 junior Kevin Magee of California-Irvine; 6-5 senior Danny Ainge of Brigham Young; and 6-1 sophomore Isaiah Thomas of Indiana.

Aguirre averaged 23.5 points per game during the season and still managed to hand out 130 assists, an average of 4.6 per game.

Although he was unimpressive in Virginia's 85-42 loss to Maryland in the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament, Sampson was an overwhelming choice for the center spot, averaging 18.4 points and 11.8 rebounds a game.

The towering Sampson was a driving force in the Cavaliers' 28-game winning streak that stretched over two seasons before ending Feb. 22 with a 57-56 loss to Notre Dame at Chicago.

Magee, a transfer from Saddleback Junior College in Mission Viejo, Calif., led the nation in scoring for much of the year, winding up third after the regular season with an average of 27.5. He hit 67.1 percent of his field goal attempts this season, second best in the nation, and averaged 12.5 rebounds a game, fifth best in the country.

Ainge has scored 2,384 points in his career, including 35 in BYU's 95-76 upset of Utah last Saturday. Ainge was an honorable mention last season.

Thomas got off to a slow start this season, but as he gained momentum, so did the Hoosiers, who won the Big Ten Conference title. Thomas, a prototype point guard, had 154 assists this season, an average of 5.3 a game, and 64 steals.

Thomas' scoring average was 15.7 a game, and he had 92 rebounds from the guard position, fourth best on the team. Thomas made honorable mention as a freshman.

Selected to the second team were 6-6 senior Al Wood of North Carolina; 6-7 senior Danny Vranes of Utah; 6-10½ senior Steve Johnson of Oregon State; 6-3 junior Eric "Sleepy" Floyd of Georgetown, and 6-2 senior Darnell Valentine of Kansas.

Lewis Lloyd, a 6-6 senior from Drake; 6-8 senior Jay Vincent of Michigan State; 7-1 sophomore Sam Bowie of Kentucky; 6-6 senior Jeff Lamp of Virginia; and 6-2 sophomore Rob Williams of Houston were named to the third team.

Albert King, a senior forward from Maryland, was the obvious absentee from this year's first three teams. He made honorable mention after being selected to the first team last season, when he scored 21.7 points and grabbed 6.7 rebounds a game. King had an off season in 1980-81, however, when he averaged 17.7 points and 5.7 rebounds a game.

Baseball team wins

The UK Baseball team won their season opener yesterday 14-3 over Georgetown at Shively Field.

Mark Martin led the Cats by pitching six innings, giving up only one unearned run. UK's Bob Silvanik pitched the final three innings, giving up two runs — one earned, one unearned.

UK's Jeff Shartzler hit the only home run. Coach Keith Madison's squad hopes for a big things this season and will face Bellarmine College tomorrow at 3 p.m. at Shively Field.

Lady Kats play

The 10th-ranked UK Lady Kats (22-4) will square off tonight against 16th-ranked North Carolina State (20-8) in first-round action of the AIAW Region II tournament.

The game begins at 7:30 p.m. at Memorial Coliseum in which the Lady Kats hope their experience will pull them through.

Tonight's game will have an added twist with former Lady Kat coach Debbie Yow who now works as a recruiter for her sister, Kay, the head coach at N.C. State.

Admission to the game will be $1 for UK faculty, staff and students with a validated ID.

Deefense

By BURT LADD/Kernel Staff

Debbie Shriver of the Blazer Dunkers puts a tenacious "D" on Kirwan IV's Cindy Krugel in last night's women's residence hall championship game. The Dunkers beat the defending champions 31-25.
