President touring UK community colleges

By MICHELE ERB
Senior Staff Writer

President Otis Singletary, as a result of the administration's reorganization last July, has been "visiting around the state" a lot recently — but he was in touch with UK all along.

The president, who said, "I really feel the need to be out there, seeing the place looking at it myself, talking to people, hearing from them," has teamed up with Charles Wethington, community college chancellor, to tour 10 of UK's 13 two-year institutions this semester.

Singletary said he'll visit the remaining three by semester's end.

The president said he and Wethington agreed some time ago to try to visit all the campuses this year and assure officials at the colleges of the University's interest in them — an interest that included sending time talking and listening. Singletary credits the reorganization with permitting him to make the trips.

"One of the things that I had hoped the reorganization would do was make it possible for me to get freed up to do some more visiting around the state, and that has proven to be correct," he said.

During the visits, Singletary and Wethington have met with the directors of the colleges and members of their staffs and have toured the campuses to see the physical facilities.

They have also listened to people, learning about their concerns and their problems, Singletary said.

"We've usually had an opportunity to meet with some cross section of the faculty," he said. "I've had an opportunity, on most of the campuses, to visit with some cross section of the student group."

They also have held meetings with each college's advisory board and foundation board, he said. "Those advisory boards want to tell me what they perceive to be their problems and concerns."

The advisory boards help to determine what community needs are in the technical and vocational areas, Singletary said. The state's dental technician program and Lexington Technical Institute's social professions program are two programs that are moved from campus to campus in response to those needs.

About the dental technician program, Singletary said the University admits and trains about a dozen students annually to the two-year course, then move the program to another of the campuses.

"They fill a need for those dentists, right there," he said. "And then we take it out to Hazard and let them stay there for two years and leave about a dozen qualified people right there for the job market."

LTI's social professions program has been moved to Hazard, he said.

"We have a lot of institutional cooperation in the community college system and it's good," he said.

With the help of the advisory boards, the community colleges are continuing to grow in enrollment, at an average of 6 percent this year, while other institutions in the state are leveling off and declining, he said.

The nation's economy is a strong factor in that growth, he said, because more people are deciding to stay close to home and save money otherwise spent for room and board. The Lexington campus' selective admissions policy, scheduled to take effect Fall, 1984, will not affect that greatly, Singletary reasoned.

The growth has another side-effect — six construction projects, scattered throughout the system, are in various stages of completion. Some have started, while others are about to be bid. "We like to keep a close eye on those developments," the president said.

The media also has been involved in the excursions; Singletary and Wethington have made courtesy calls on newspapers and thanked them for their support of the college in that area. "We've gone by some radio or TV stations and cut tapes if that was of any interest to them," he said.

So far, the two have been to the community colleges in Elizabethtown, Henderson, Madisonville, Somerset, Hazard, Cumberland, Ashland, Maysville and Louisville.

They are going to Paducah this spring, Singletary said, and are scheduled to go to Hopkinsville next month. The only visit still unscheduled is in Prestonsburg.

Reflecting his concern for the system, Singletary said, "The community colleges are in fairly serious financial straits, as we all are. But I think the morale is good and my belief is that the state is finally giving the community college system the kind of recognition that I think they have deserved for some time. They do a very good job with what they have."

The 1981 report of the Prichard Committee, a group of distinguished citizens chosen by Gov. John Y. Brown in 1980 to study and make recommendations about education in Kentucky, spoke very favorably of the community college operations, Singletary said.

Another report done by Price Waterhouse and Company, a firm hired by Brown a year ago to study higher education in Kentucky, gave very high marks to the community colleges, he said.

"We're now getting some recognition from people who have looked at it and have found it's well operated and the state is getting a lot for its money," Singletary said.

SAB readies plan for change in committees

By STEPHANIE WALLNER
Staff Writer

The Student Activities Board yesterday announced at its regular meeting plans that would reorganize committees in order to reach more effectively a larger number of students.

The board plans to "redirect their activities in an attempt to involve other student organizations," said Doug Kennedy, public relations chair. Kennedy believes that, by organizing activities with other groups, the quality of programs offered will be much better.

"If we can offer better quality activities, more students will become involved, which is the idea," he said.

Reorganizing and establishing committees are ways the board plans to reach students.

The board voted to discontinue its travel committee and institute changes in the format to form a similar committee. "The present travel committee isn't meeting the needs of students anymore," Kennedy said.

John Herbst, student activities staff adviser, feels the "economic climate has changed," and doesn't provide reasonable service to students. "I think it would be best to start with a whole new outlook," he suggested.

The board intends to offer shorter

Unknown vandal hits Kirwan elevator car

One of Kirwan Tower's three elevators was damaged by student vandalism early Sunday morning and may be out of commission for the rest of the academic year, Head Resident Dave Rabe, said. Jim Ruschell, assistant vice chancellor for administration, said repair costs have not been estimated. A similar incident last year cost about $3,500, however. A contractor has been asked to evaluate the damage.

The vandal, an unidentified student, allegedly struck the elevator doors and walls while the car was rising, said Jack Blanton, vice chancellor for administration.

There were three individuals on the elevator when the incident occurred. No one was injured, according to Mark Smithson, a Kirwan Tower resident adviser.

Blanton said the student will be obligated to pay for the damages and could possibly be taken to court if he refuses.

According to Joe Burch, dean of students, any student who damages residence hall property is first judged under violation of the housing contract, then subjected to University discipline.

Sloane challenges foes' tax plans

OWENSBORO — Louisville Mayor Harvey Sloane has challenged his two Democratic opponents in the gubernatorial race to "tell the people whether they plan to raise taxes or renege on their campaign promises."

Sloane said yesterday at a candidates forum he had reviewed the spending commitments of former Human Resources Secretary Grady Stumbo and Lt. Gov. Martha Layne Collins.

"They have apparently adopted the deficit spending philosophy that is so much in vogue in Washington," Sloane said. "Either that, or they're making promises they can't keep."

Collins repeated her proposal for a state-funded system of regional jails supplemented with local 72-hour holding facilities.

Stumbo said in Frankfort that if elected, he would support creation of a regional jail system and increased use of community work as punishment for crimes.

Syria predicts war with Israel

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Syria said yesterday it expects to fight again with Israel, and Lebanese leaders expressed pessimism about U.S. attempts to arrange a pullout of Israeli forces from their country.

Syrian Prime Minister Abdel Raouf al-Kasm told his Cabinet in Damascus an Israeli attack on Syria was "possible and expected." But he claimed the Soviet-supported nation was ready to fight the Israelis.

In Beirut, Lebanese elder statesman Saeb Salam conferred with U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib for one hour and told reporters he was pessimistic about negotiations aimed at getting Israeli forces to withdraw.

"Israel is trying to dictate peace by the gun barrel," he said. "We cannot go on negotiating forever. The United States should realize this and seek to rescue its credibility. I have made this position clear to Ambassador Habib."

Reagan proposes missile cut

WASHINGTON — President Reagan sent the Soviet Union a scaled-down proposal yesterday that would first reduce, rather than eliminate, the arsenals of medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe. But the Kremlin's chief negotiator said, "I'm not optimistic."

The proposal still leaves room for the United States to install new cruise and Pershing II missiles on the continent late this year, while requiring the Soviets to tear down some of theirs. Reagan declined to discuss the specifics, but said "We've never retreated" from the plan.

Still, his proposal represents the first major U.S. effort to break the 16-month deadlock in the European negotiations. It was put on the bargaining table in Geneva, Switzerland, by U.S. negotiator Paul Nitze as the talks broke up for a recess until May 17.

The Reagan administration has long been urged by NATO allies to offer an interim arms deal, demonstrating the United States is not inflexible from the "zero-zero" plan originally proposed by the president. The allies also hope the new proposal will give the United States an edge in the propaganda battle over the entire issue of arms control.

Bradford, Freudenberg are best choices in SGA race

As the Kernel-sponsored Great Debate showed Monday night, the candidates for the Student Government Association presidency this year are exceptional. All three argued well and forcefully, relying on well-thought-out serious platforms and a solid knowledge of the issues facing students.

The vice presidential candidates, although not appearing with their running mates in the debate, are equally impressive. All are visible members of the SGA Senate and are invaluable to their respective tickets.

Choosing between them is no easy task. If it were possible to roll all three into one, we would be more than satisfied. In the absence of this alternative, however, it has been necessary to exhaustively evaluate each platform and candidate before deciding on an endorsement.

After hours of discussion, the Kernel's editorial board has finally arrived at a conclusion: Based on experience, platform and record, the best team for the job is that of David Bradford and Tim Freudenberg.

The John Davenport/John Miller ticket was hard to pass up. Their pledges to promote campus safety, particularly pedestrian safety — long a sore point on this traffic-jam prone inner-city campus — and to pursue the establishment of a day-care program for adult students are indicative of their strong desire to provide practical services for students.

Also, Davenport's experience as Senate chair pro tem — a position to which he was elected by the Senate — has given him experience in a leadership role that combines both administrative and legislative functions.

Miller has also demonstrated his ability to lead in a constructive manner. When the Senate was faced with the prospect that students opposed to the mandatory health fee would call a General Student Assembly for the purpose of approving a referendum on the issue, Miller, who was opposed to the referendum, saved SGA — and ultimately, the students — a considerable amount of time and money by introducing a referendum bill, which was passed by the Senate.

But the ticket has its drawbacks — not critical, but worth noting. Davenport has demonstrated an unfortunate tendency to leap before he looks, which earlier this school year led to a Senate investigation of possible improprieties on his part in a committee appointment. He later was cleared of the charges by the investigators, who found his mistake had been innocent — a result of inexperience. But it showed he had not taken the time to learn all the rules and regulations governing his job — something that could lead to serious consequences were he to be elected president.

And Miller's outspokenness, while indicative of his sincerity, seems to come more from the gut than from the brain. His lonely stand in favor of the mining of Robinson Forest was a particularly good example of strong sentiment misplaced.

The Cheryl Hardcastle/Jack Dulworth ticket is also appealing. Hardcastle made a point of emphasizing that she would not waste time and resources on unrealistic measures, even going so far as to say she would pay for lobbying trips to Washington, D.C., out of her own pocket.

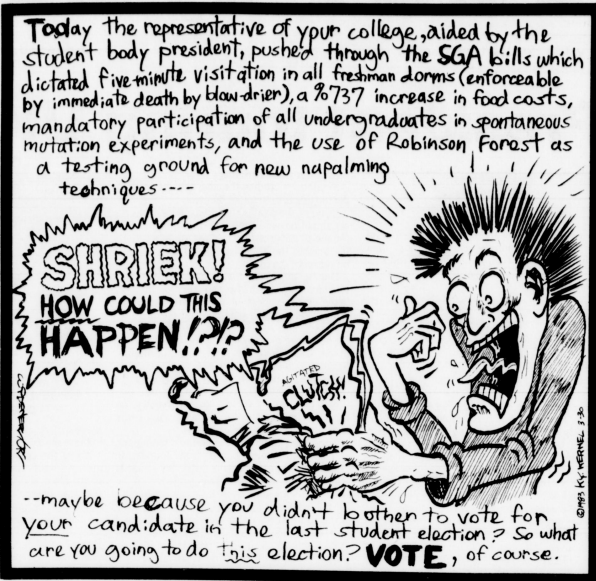

She also has pledged to promote communications between herself and other student leaders through regular meetings with residence hall council presidents, student advisory council presidents and others. And she has promised to take every issue concerning increases in students' costs to a referendum before making a decision.

While on the surface these proposals are commendable, they indicate an unfortunate conservatism reflective of the less desirable aspects of the administrative style of current President Jim Dinkle, one of her major supporters. A president, while responsive to student opinion, also must be a leader of student opinion. Hardcastle, who plans to delegate much of the responsibility of the presidency to others in the administrative branch and Senate, does not appear to be that kind of leader.

We also have reservations about her running mate, Jack Dulworth. Although he has served as chair of two very important Senate bodies, the Political Affairs Committee and the Committee on Committees, much of his activity as a senator-at-large has been as a spokesperson for Dinkle's initiatives. This has engendered among other senators charges that he is an opportunist, and they have also questioned his originality and sincerity.

Hardcastle/Dulworth, while a solid team, seem to lack the vision and direction needed to run a truly effective administration — one that would achieve long-term goals.

Which brings us to Bradford and Freudenberg. Their range of experience is considerable — Bradford, as SGA vice president, has had the opportunity to gain an intimate knowledge of the workings of the administration, and in his role he has also made val-able contacts with administrators throughout campus.

He has also proven his ability to make a good end of a difficult task, playing the primary role in the recent passage of liberalized dormitory regulations, which once seemed as far away as the dark side of the moon. And his work in the organization's annual affairs, such as the Fall Festival — a success despite the withdrawal of one of its major sponsors — has been outstanding.

Freudenberg also has gained valuable experience as an Arts & Sciences senator, a role to which he has been uncommonly dedicated. He sponsored nearly 30 percent of the bills offered to the Senate this year, and has demonstrated a knowledge of parliamentary procedure that earned him unanimous acclamation as acting Senate chair pro tem whenever Davenport was absent — an important consideration for an individual who, if elected, will serve as chair of the Senate.

Also, as a member of the University Senate, he was instrumental in resolving, in the students' favor, a conflict between students and faculty members over chemistry make-up exam policies, thus correcting a serious injustice.

Above all, Bradford and Freudenberg's platform shows a visionary bent long overdue for an organization that just two years ago had its budget more than quadrupled. They reflect, in a modest way, a positive movement in student government taking place throughout the country.

With pledges to provide an interest-free student loan service, a revised (perhaps computerized) book exchange, doubled funds for the Student Organization Assistance Committee and to pursue the set-up of a campus pub, they have put together a platform that emphasizes the role of SGA as a facilitator of consumer services and campus activities; in short, as a true student union.

It may be just wide-eyed dreaming, as Hardcastle indirectly charged during the debate, but this is a time for new ideas and alternatives. Bradford and Freudenberg, with their proven effectiveness and SGA's backing and influence, may be able to succeed where others have failed.

We encourage you to give them a try.

Correction

In yesterday's listings of the candidates for senatorial positions, the Kernel mistakenly identified Rob Sutherland, a candidate for senator-at-large. We regret the error and apologize for any inconvenience the mistake may have caused.

Students' rights

I wish to take this opportunity to urge all students to vote for Jeff Rice, Greg Crockett and Bob Easton for senators-at-large. In addition, I urge all College of Arts & Sciences students to vote for Phil Taylor.

I know of no other candidates for the Student Government Association who have worked as long or as hard for the rights of all students.

Some examples of their commitment to students would include the petition drive by Jeff, Bob and Phil which culminated in the student body gaining the right to vote on the health fee issue. Also, Greg was instrumental in his capacity as Kirsan Tower house council president in gaining a somewhat more "realistic" dormitory visitation policy.

If elected, all four will continue to vote to promote the rights of all students. They can and will do this by supporting semi-annual referendums on major issues.

Jeff, Greg, Bob and Phil need your vote so they can then vote to let you vote on issues of importance.

In closing, I know I want to have some say (i.e. a vote) on issues that will affect me... how about you?

Withdrawal

I am writing in regard to the upcoming Student Government Association elections for senator. Unfortunately, other obligations and responsibilities have forced me to withdraw my name from the ballot of College of Business & Economics senator.

I appreciate all my friends' support thus far, but I feel I can project a better campaign in the future. As students, we are privileged to have the right to vote for our governing student body. I urge you to exercise that right and vote among the many qualified individuals running for SGA positions. SGA needs your support in furthering its efforts to improve UK's campus.

Stressing issues

Student Government Association elections: The whole campus is seeing posters about the elections. We should have in mind, with the SGA elections, the right decision to make.

John Davenport and John Miller for president and vice president should be given some of your attention. Their campaign is stressing some of the issues we as students are concerned with.

They would like to see the UK Police begin a foot patrol. They also would like to initiate block watches for student apartment complexes. Wouldn't it be nice to have someone in SGA who was interested in your safety?

They are also interested in lobbying the General Assembly for more funding of our academic programs. They want to register students to vote and increase our lobbying effort.

These two young men have demonstrated good leadership. They are outspoken on the issues they believe in. They will listen to students' concerns and take action upon them.

I believe the right choice for president and vice president will be John Davenport and John Miller. If you look at the goals they would like to accomplish, I think you will agree.

Keen interest

As chair of the Off-Campus Student Board, it is my pleasure to endorse the candidacy of Cheryl Hardcastle for Student Government Association president and Jack Dulworth for SGA vice president.

After careful consideration, the Off-Campus Student Board voted to support Hardcastle and Dulworth because of their keen interest in the affairs and problems of off-campus students. They have also demonstrated leadership qualities during their terms as senators by their involvement in the Political Affairs Committee and other SGA committees. This makes them very qualified candidates.

We, the Off-Campus Student Board, strongly urge all off-campus students to vote for and support Cheryl Hardcastle and Jack Dulworth to give off-campus students a voice in SGA.

ISC concerns

Student Government Association presidential and vice presidential candidates Cheryl Hardcastle and Jack Dulworth's platform seems the most appropriate to meet UK students' needs.

Fighting for fee increases and seeking better communication between campus organizations are two vital issues for all students, especially international students.

Any sudden increase in tuition, housing or parking fees or anything else can be detrimental to international students in their pursuit of higher education. The SGA needs to show more aggression and concern to the students' interests against these continuous and unchecked increases by the administration.

Fighting these increases should take priority in any SGA administration platform at all times. For this reason, the International Student Council, a coalition of 11 international student organizations representative of all international students on campus, saw it appropriate to endorse Hardcastle and Dulworth over their opponents.

We are expecting a lot from Hardcastle and Dulworth next year. We know we will not be disappointed.

Diligent workers

I am writing on behalf of Cheryl Hardcastle and Jack Dulworth, our president and vice president of the Student Government Association. Their candidacy most impresses me, because they are setting realistic goals for their administration and not making outrageous, idle promises for next year.

As SGA president this year, I know from first-hand experience that Cheryl and Jack are the most responsible candidates to succeed my administration. Both have worked diligently for their fellow students since day one of our term in office.

On many occasions, they have unselfishly given of themselves to work with lobbying efforts, guest speakers, voter registration and other student organizations. It would be a travesty to lose their leadership and experiences in the SGA.

The president and vice president must be loyal and trusting of one another. Serving together as chair and vice chair of the Political Affairs Committee this year, Cheryl and Jack have worked exceedingly well with one another.

I ask for your support of Cheryl Hardcastle and Jack Dulworth for SGA president and vice president.

Qualified leader

I have known David Bradford for about a year now. When I first met David in Leadership 386 class, I could tell by his pose, attitude and knowledge that he was a qualified leader.

David currently serves as vice president of the Student Government Association. He works hard for the students. He has stuck with visitation policies against pressure from the administration to do likewise. He supports the completion of Phase III of the Seaton Center, so that the students will have a pool. UK is one of a handful of universities that does not have a pool for its students, as well as its athletes.

Above all, I praise David and Tim Freudenberg for their solution to financial aid from the coal severance tax.

As a student receiving financial aid, which has already been cut, and homecoming chair, I fully support David Bradford and Tim Freudenberg for SGA president and vice president.

Assured success

Regardless of the effectiveness of its members, an organization without quality leaders will never reach its potential. It is for this reason that I strongly endorse David Bradford and Tim Freudenberg, "the team with the superior track record," for president and vice president of the Student Government Association.

I believe the experience this team holds will undoubtedly lead the SGA in a positive, upward direction.

Both David and Tim have played an extremely active role in SGA during this past year. They have proven track record shows they are two dedicated, enthusiastic, hard-working individuals. Together, David and Tim will be able to effectively accomplish forward steps for the student body.

LTI support

As a graduate of the associate degree nursing program at the Lexington Technical Institute, and as a former LTI student senator, I urge all LTI students to vote for John Davenport and John Miller for Student Government Association president and vice president in the pending campus elections.

I served as student senator in 1981-82, and was impressed with Davenport's loyalty and dedication to representing his constituents. Davenport is a hard-working student rights advocate and commands the respect of his peers.

Unlike the other candidates for executive offices in SGA, the Davenport-Miller ticket has taken a strong stand on campus-wide issues and is proposing viable programs to meet the perceived students' needs.

Many LTI students feel alienated from the rest of the University's Lexington Campus because previous SGA administrations, including the present Dinkle-Bradford one, have glossed over, or completely ignored, the special needs and concerns of LTI students. I believe Davenport and Miller will work hand-in-hand with the newly-elected LTI senators to improve the situation.

Ballet's creator happy for help from friends

'Heathen' 18 months in the making

By JOHN GRIFFIN
Arts Editor

"I get by with a little help from my friends."
— John Lennon and Paul McCartney

Bobby Plunkett has been reminded of the importance of having good friends as his ballet "The Heathen" premieres tonight at the Center for the Arts.

The dance program, which has been one and one-half years in the planning, is the culmination of a group effort by Plunkett and his friends to realize his ambition to stage a work that reflects his emotions. "The production is what I feel," he said. "It just came out naturally."

"I didn't say this is a serious, classical piece of music because it's a ballet," he said. "It's a culmination of both. If you're working in art, you can't reject the past. So some of my influences have been traditional, some contemporary."

Plunkett began to compose the ballet over one and one-half years ago, while he was drummer for the new wave group, The Thrusters (later renamed The Red Interiors). "Me and Bradley (Picklesimer) worked in the Red Interiors. . . I wrote and produced a record for that group. Because of all that, I didn't work that much on it. Not until the Fall semester. Then I returned to the score and really began to work on it."

Picklesimer, one of Plunkett's best friends and founder of the defunct Club au Go Go, designed the costumes, hair styles and makeup for the production. "He's a big influence on my life," Plunkett said of Picklesimer. "I couldn't have picked a better person for the job. The types of costumes he has designed were influenced by burlesque. . . He's tried to make the characters look as inhuman as possible."

"It's dedicated to Henry Faulkner (the late Lexington artist)," he said. "He was friends with everyone."

"The Heathen" will be presented tonight at 8 in the Concert Hall of the Center for the Arts. It is free and open to the public.

Joan Hewitt performs in music junior Bobby Plunkett's ballet "The Heathen," which premieres tonight at 8 in the Center for the Arts.

'Dream Game' more than score indicated

The final score indicated nothing, absolutely nothing. Anybody who watched Saturday's historic game between Kentucky and Louisville (and that's just about everybody), realizes that the 80-88 Louisville win wasn't a bonafide 12 point margin.

Mickey
PATTERSON

What it showed was how quick the momentum can change in a basketball game between two excellent teams. The sign of a good team is one that seizes opportunity when it arises. The ability to do this has been a trademark of Denny Crum's teams ever since he came to Louisville. What the Cards did was capitalize on UK's mistakes and turn them into an 18-6 turnaround in the overtime period.

But for 40 minutes the two teams battled on even terms. It was a classic matchup between two contrasting teams. At times the Cardinals looked like they just stepped off the famous center court at Shawnee Park in downtown Louisville. Pressing an entire game, contesting every shot put up by the opposing team, grabbing an offensive rebound and flying down the court looking for a dunk. On defense every player is expected to guard anybody and everybody. Crashing the offensive boards like their very existence depended on it.

The Wildcats were the perfect antithesis to Louisville. UK prefers to run a structured offense; when they do run it's a controlled break designed to exploit the other team's failure to get back on defense. But it's not a constant pressure like Louisville's, and it's not every time down the floor. On defense, UK plays a tight man-to-man (like UL), but prefers to leave its big man around the basket for intimidation purposes. At Louisville everybody blocks shots.

Don't get me wrong — I'm not endorsing either system. Obviously, each has been remarkably successful for its respective program. While Louisville might look a bit chaotic at times, Crum knows what's going on (just look at his record). In the same vein, UK might look a bit boring at times — but it works. It's just a case of two coaches with different systems.

The game was a perfect showcase for the two team's different style of play. In the first half UK controlled the game. The Cats ran their offense to perfection. The infamous Louisville press, which left Metro conference foes quivering in fear all year long, posed no serious problem for UK at the beginning of the game. Kentucky kept the game at a reasonably slow pace, shot 62 percent and took a seven point lead into halftime.

In the second half, Louisville's press exacted a frightful toll on UK. The Wildcats could hardly run their offense when they couldn't get the ball past the half-court line, and, as I said before, the Cards took advantage of every mistake and turned it into a score. UK made a valiant comeback but fell short. Louisville had just a little bit more left at the end. It was a typical UL win.

The atmosphere in Stokely Center could've been a commercial for the NCAA. You know, what college sports are supposed to be and all that rot. It's a tribute to the fans of both schools that there were no incidents after the game. The "Dream Game" made the national news Friday night and if a fight would've occurred I could just see Dan Rather conjuring up images of ignorant, barefoot hillbillies fighting over a basketball game.

What happened was the fans of this state showed their true class, and in Tennessee at that.

After 24 years of not playing each other, the teams had a lot to live up to, and they accomplished that and more. The inevitable questions of whether it would become a regular happening began. At this point the real "game" began.

At a press conference held last Friday at Stokely, coaches and players from both teams were rather evasive about the prospect. "The only significant thing about it is it's a chance for us to go to the Final Four," Charles Hurt said. "The media and fans are trying to build it up, but it's just a chance for us to go to the Final Four."

"Basically Kentucky is just like any other team," UL center Charles Jones said. "Although they're a state school, we just have to play our game and not worry about the fans. It's just another step to the Final Four." The coaches continued this theme. Kentucky's Joe B. Hall cited "University policy" for not playing the Cards every year. Crum said maybe it was time for UK "to start carving into our (UL's) tradition."

Worthless rhetoric. It's always been that way and probably will stay that way.

It wasn't even worth the effort the players and coaches put into the game. The money generated by an annual home-and-home series would be phenomenal, but unfortunately neither school needs the money. National TV exposure would be a guarantee for every UK

UL game, and they would promote the two schools across the country.

But it's gotten to the point where UL is no longer in Kentucky's shadow. They don't need UK to establish the credibility of their basketball program — Darrell Griffith saw to that in 1980. Since UK is no longer the big kid on the block, an annual match-up becomes even less likely.

You've also probably heard about each school's Board of Trustees meeting to try and establish a regular contest. Fat chance. These two sanctimonious bodies have about as much chance of accomplishing this as Cliff Hagan does of becoming president of the Denny Crum fan club.

Above all though, the game took place — and UL won. Everybody survived it — there were no suicides, and UK's championship banners didn't disintegrate.

"It was a good game," UK center Melvin Turpin said. "Nobody was pushing or doing anything illegal, we just went at each other. It was fun."

Somewhere along the line, I get the impression that's what it's all about.

Greeks slate 10th 'Sing' tomorrow

Members of UK's Greek community will stretch their vocal cords and put on their dancing shoes tomorrow night for the 10th annual "Greek Sing."

Scheduled for 7 p.m. at Memorial Coliseum, the event will feature routines based on movie themes, Broadway musicals and other all-time musical favorites, all performed by UK Greeks.

Chi Omega sorority sponsors the program each year. Lori Piscano, a marketing junior and member of Chi Omega, chairs the event this year.

"I'm excited about this year's production," Piscano said. "Everyone has been preparing their acts since the beginning of the trips, which would be more affordable for students, and outdoor recreational activities as alternatives to excursions offered by the current travel committee.

Other moves toward committee reorganization include SA's unanimous vote to establish Student Activities Venues (SATV) as a committee. Bill Burke was appointed chair of the SATV committee until May 1, when next year's chair appointment will be made.

The newly-appointed members-at-large also are expected to broaden SAB's influence on campus by assuming roles as liaisons to various groups and organizations. Areas to be covered include: residence halls, by Scott Mustian; human relations (mainly dealing with off-campus students), by Nancy Reintedder; Student Government Association, by Linda Remington; publications, by Cecil Booth; and Greeks (Panhellene and Interfraternity Council), by Lisa Sant.

"The use of members-at-large has been used in the past but it usually dies down," Kennedy said. "For next year's board, we want to keep it active."

Jenny Dorsey, vice president-elect, believes the active use of the liaisons will "open up communication between groups and allow for a campus-wide input to all ideas from."

Dorsey also agrees that SAB's redirection to put student organizations together needs to start with better communication. "By starting our members-at-large on the right track early, they will be able to keep communication with the campus more open," Dorsey said.

Campus Crime

March 26 — Chi Omega sorority reported that unknown persons damaged a parking sign and overturned a flowerbox on the porch. No estimate of damage was filed.

An employee at the UK Medical Center reported harassing and obscene communications. The suspect is listed as a white male between 20 and 30 years old.

A student's motorcycle, valued at $800, was stolen from Shawnee town.

A car in the Haggin Hall parking lot was damaged. The owner reported finding the car's roof and trunk lid caved in. Also, the student said the driving lights had been damaged.

March 29 — An oval, valued at $350, was reported to have been stolen either Thursday night or Friday morning from Reynolds Building No. 2.

Nicaragua, Honduras scuffling in newest war

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Honduras claimed yesterday that its army intercepted Nicaraguan troops smuggling weapons to the leftist guerrillas in El Salvador. From the other side of Central America's newest war, Nicaragua charged that Honduran troops attacked two Nicaraguan border posts.

There were also reports of more sporadic fighting in northern Nicaragua between Nicaraguan troops and anti-Sandinista exiles based in Honduras. The exiles said they killed 20 Nicaraguans in an ambush.

A Honduran government spokesman told reporters security forces intercepted 12 Nicaraguan soldiers carrying a "large quantity" of weapons Saturday at Nacome, more than two-thirds of the way across the 70-mile neck of Honduran territory between Nicaragua and El Salvador.

"That is why we can say with certainty that Nicaragua is violating Honduran territory by sending small groups of soldiers and weapons to El Salvador to strengthen and supply the guerrillas in that country," the spokesman said.

There was no immediate comment from Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government, which has repeatedly denied charges by the United States and its allies in the Salvadoran government that the Sandinistas were funneling Soviet and Cuban weapons to the guerrillas.

The Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry charged that a 15-man Honduran army patrol attacked the border posts of El Suspiro and El Espino, in Chinandega province 81 miles northwest of Managua, with automatic weapons and mortar fire on Sunday. No casualties were reported.

The Nicaraguans said the cross-border firing was in support of Nicaraguan exiles who crossed the border from bases in Honduras to harass the Nicaraguan army in the northern part of the country.

There was no immediate reaction from the Honduran government.

Since the Nicaraguan government bars reporters from the combat zone, it was impossible to check the reports from the warring factions.
