Departments Are Criticized By Professors

Departments within the University's colleges were mildly criticized Wednesday for not planning and revamping courses to fit in with the general studies academic program.

The program, one of four components leading to a baccalaureate degree, was initiated two years ago as part of the overall academic plan. The plan puts all freshmen and sophomores in the college of Arts and Sciences and directs them to take year-long course sequences from eight different areas.

The criticism, voiced during the faculty club's Foci discussion, was raised by Dr. Robert Pranger, assistant professor of political science. Dr. Pranger said, "There has not been much departmental activity into reorganization for the general studies program."

'Department Responsibility'

Dr. Lewis Cochran, one of the key figures behind the development of the academic program, agreed with Dr. Pranger's criticism and noted that the responsibility for development of the general studies program lies with the departments.

Other criticism of the general studies program was offered by Dr. Michael Adelstein, assistant professor of English. Dr. Adelstein said the idea of course sequences traps students and commits them to continue in one field of study for one year, even though they may become disenchanted with the study after one semester.

Dr. Cochran, recently appointed dean of the Graduate School and vice president in charge of research, countered the criticism saying, "There was a feeling—right or wrong—that there is more merit in depth than in breadth."

'Nunn Has Pulled Away'

By DARRELL CHRISTIAN

Former Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler said Wednesday the tide of the current gubernatorial campaign has shifted to Republican nominee Louie B. Nunn.

"Mr. Nunn has pulled away in the last two or three weeks," Mr. Chandler said. "As I've observed the thing, people who have been Democrats all their lives are going to vote for Judge Nunn."

Mr. Chandler, who ran second in last May's primary to Democratic gubernatorial candidate Henry Ward, said the former highway commissioner "is desperate now. He's losing all the polls. He lost at Centre College, Western Kentucky University, Murray, Sue Bennett and in Woodford County."

"People, when they see him, are finding out he's dictatorial, arrogant and not well educated."

Mr. Ward's desperation, he said, is evident in his charges that Mr. Nunn has offered the political presidency in exchange for political support. Democratic headquarters said the alleged offer was made to Mr. Chandler, but the former governor said, "No word has been said to me about the UK Presidency by Judge Nunn or any of his associates."

Mr. Chandler endorsed Mr. Nunn two weeks ago, publicly switching his party allegiance for the first time. Since then he has traveled around the state speaking for Nunn and urging his followers to "put these people out," meaning the present Democratic administration.

"The overwhelming majority of people who supported me are now given to Judge Nunn," he said. "Mr. Ward is losing it all over the state. Some of the people in his own campaign might quit him toward the end. A lot of state employees are coming to see me now."

He said he doesn't believe Jefferson County Judge Marlow Cook, runner-up to Nunn in the GOP primary, would have had a better chance against the Democratic regime.

Timid Protester Plans A 'Demonstration' Here

By KERRY POWELL

Somebody says there's going to be a demonstration on campus today.

Who says? That's a secret. Where will it be? Another mystery.

It all started Wednesday with the distribution of green flyers addressed to "Hell Raisers." The hand-out promised a "torchlight demonstration" at Haggin field tonight and implored "dissatisfied" students to attend.

An accompanying leaflet, meant for Complex Tower A residents, hinted merrily of an approaching "riot." The authors explained they were provoked because the administration had rejected "our proposal for allowing women in your rooms."

It was signed, in typescript, "Your Representatives." A member of the Complex Government, however, avowed it is sponsoring no riot—not even a modest protest.

Crouch Speaks

Dick Crouch, Arts and Sciences sophomore, agreed to act as mouthpiece for the nameless organizer. But he was quick to insist he has no part in the scheme.

A friend—one of the chief protest planners—says the demonstration will not be at Haggin field after all, Crouch revealed. It will be at the Library. And there won't be any torches either.

What there will be, according to Crouch, is a "funeral for all UK students ideas that have died from suffocation by the regressive administration of this University." The service will come complete with spontaneous eulogies, he added.

But who's behind it? Crouch won't say. Some believe it's a self-styled South Campus Coordinating Committee. Others say The Rogue, an unofficial Complex newsletter. Some say the two are the same.

Anyway there's going to be a demonstration today. Somewhere. Maybe.

Protests Spread; Iowans Arrested

UPI-CPS Dispatches

IOWA CITY—More than 100 University of Iowa students and faculty members were arrested Wednesday in the course of a sit-in to stop Marine recruiting.

The demonstration, organized by Students for a Democratic Society and the Iowa City Draft Resistance Union, blocked the entrance to the Iowa Memorial Union where recruiting was being carried on for the Marine Corps. Occasional violence broke out during the morning as students and counter-demonstrators from off campus attacked the sit-in line. Some students going to interviews charged the human blockade and others crawled over it, stepping on demonstrators in the line.

A state senator became involved in the incident and was charged with disturbing the peace after being arrested by a student on a citizen's arrest.

Wayne State

In Detroit, from 25 to 50 students at Wayne State University tried to storm a building where a Marine Corps recruiter was interviewing potential enlistees.

The demonstrators stood in front of the building for nearly an hour shouting antiwar slogans. A campus policeman and others in the building prevented them from getting inside.

Several police cars arrived and the scuffle ended.

The group then marched to the president's office where they demanded to see him.

Indiana University students circulated a petition on the campus Wednesday apologizing to Secretary of State Dean Rusk for "the great discourtesy" shown by "small vocal minority" of students when he spoke there Tuesday.

"We love IU and we're afraid people are getting the wrong idea that it is full of bearded students," said Jayne Grote, president of the IU Union Board and an organizer of the petition. "They are just a small vocal minority."

"Most of us are very upset and embarrassed," Miss Grote said.

Michigan

In Ann Arbor about 200 students and 25 faculty members began a sit-in in the University of Michigan administration building to protest a military project for Thailand.

The demonstration was staged by the Voice Political Party, a campus branch of the Students for a Democratic Society.

In Philadelphia about 100 students held a sit-in in the University of Pennsylvania placement office, protesting recruiters from Dow Chemical Company and the CIA.

About 10 students forced their way into the office where the Dow recruiter was and held a sit-in. The recruiter continued to interview applicants. After about an hour he was asked to leave by the dean of men and did so.

When he left the demonstrators turned their attention to the CIA recruiter, who had kept his door locked. Some of the demonstrators finally got in when an applicant left. However, another demonstrator had found a switch box and shut off the lights in the two offices, so the recruiter left with the assistance of some campus guards.

that Mr. Ward's record as commissioner of conservation and highway commissioner wasn't as clean as he claims.

"If he were that honest, he wouldn't have to say so," Mr. Chandler said. "I like to quote Shakespeare: 'Methink he doth protest too much.'" He said Mr. Ward has admitted to a $10 million waste during his six years as highway commissioner.

He said Mr. Ward is tied to the present administration, which, he said, has increased taxes "three or four times the last eight years," put Kentucky in debt $1.5 billion and increased the state payroll 48 percent in the last eight years.

My forecast at the moment is that the race isn't close," Mr. Chandler concluded. "The total vote in the primary was low. And it was not only because of apathy, but also because of people who thought he (Ward) would win the primary and waited until the general election to vote against him."

Antique Fire Engine Is Campus Tradition

By CAROLYN DUNNAVAN
All sorts of strange vehicles can be found on a university campus. Take UK. There are souped-up hot rods, multi-colored Volkswagens, psychedelic painted bicycles and one bright red antique fire truck.

Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity is the owner of the 1931 Seagraves Pumper. The truck is a mechanical monster. It has 18 spark plugs. Its huge engine feeds the power to a chain drive, just like a bicycle. It's never any trouble to get started: just give the crank a couple of turns and the engine starts chugging.

The fire truck has a continual craving for special food—gas. It consumes about one gallon of gas for every mile it travels.

Owning a fire truck is a tradition among Pike chapters. In Kentucky, four out of the five Pike chapters own firetrucks. A related custom is owning a Dalmatian, traditionally the "fire station" dog. The chapter here is no exception. Whenever brothers take the truck for a ride, Pike IV, their Dalmatian, can be seen running along behind.

What can you do with a fire-truck? Jim Knight, a Pike fraternity member who loves to talk about the truck, says it has many uses. The Pikes ride around campus in it, take parents and friends for rides in it and even sleep in it on hot nights.

Pi Kappa Alpha's symbol of pride, this 1931 Seagraves Pumper, has been a University tradition for years.

Any Pike with a driver's license can drive the fire truck, but the main drivers are Steve McNeely, president of the fraternity, and George Robinson, a Pike from Lexington.

But there are exceptions. One night while riding in the truck, the Pikes were stopped by a Lexington policeman.

A traffic violation? No, the policeman just wanted to drive the truck.

The 1961 Pike pledge class bought the truck from the Berea Fire Dept. for $600. All the repairs, painting and maintenance on the truck are done by the Pikes themselves. During vacations and winter months when the weather is bad, the truck is kept on George Robinson's farm, a few miles outside of Lexington.

Eddington Issue Reappears

Controversy involving former anthropology professor Neil Eddington led Dr. William K. Plucknett Tuesday to urge the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors to examine the relationship of its Committee "A" and the President's Committee on Tenure and Privilege.

Dr. Plucknett was the chairman of Committee "A," the AAUP subgroup on faculty academic freedom, during the Eddington controversy last year.

"All feelings among AAUP members resulted from questions as to how far Committee "A" should have gone in the case," Dr. Plucknett said in a review of the committee's work for the fall meeting of AAUP.

Prof. Eddington's case came to light last November when an investigation of his Anthropology 100 class was begun by the department. Students complained about the nature of the course taught by the assistant professor, who at mid-term was failing 65 percent of his class.

The Anthropology Department subsequently said Prof. Eddington's contract would not be renewed at the end of the academic year.

Prof. Eddington went to the AAUP claiming his academic freedom had been violated. Dr. Plucknett said that Committee "A" spent more than 30 hours interviewing people in the case.

It was the unanimous opinion of the four-member committee that "there was reason to believe in three or four instances that Neil Eddington's academic freedom may have been violated," Dr. Plucknett said. Prof. Eddington was dismissed from his duties, nevertheless.

In further action, Dr. Plucknett said that, this summer, Committee "A" and Committee "S," dealing with student academic freedom, obtained a reversal of a University decision in the case of a part-time University medical student who was dismissed for misuse of University supplies.

The student was arrested in connection with the making and use of mescaline, a hallucinatory drug. Charges in the case were dismissed by police, Dr. Plucknett said.

Dr. Plucknett said that the student, in the last semester of his senior year, was reinstated and graduated this summer.

Henderson Will Direct Upcoming Fall Convocation

Dr. Hubert Henderson, director of the School of Fine Arts, has been named chairman of the UK Ceremonials and Cultural Activities Committee, which is directing arrangements for the Nov. 9 fall convocation.

Dr. Whitney Young Jr., graduate of Kentucky State College and executive director of the National Urban League, will be the speaker at the event set for 2:30 p.m. in Memorial Coliseum.

Four students serve on the Henderson committee. They are Betty Ann Carpenter, Kathryn Crayson, Steve Cook and Tom Padgett.

No Incident Report = No Incident?

An incident report has not been filed, therefore there must have been no incident.

This statement might have been made in Orwell's 1984. It would have been in context with that author's description of a big-brother-is-watching world.

But this no-incident because no-report statement was made in 1967, at the University, by a campus official.

With statements like this one being made by University officials, perhaps the eerie world of 1984 is upon us here and now, at least University police force-wise.

There was an incident. One sufficient to make University students react angrily. An incident of sufficient breadth to make University students run breathless into our newspaper offices. Outraged.

Students claim they were badgered by the badged minions of the University police force. The gendarmes say they just asked questions. One sided dialogue ensued. Conflicting statements appeared in the news story.

Who to believe?

The students.

And the source of the problem is deeper than the generation gap between students and cops on the beat.

It is the intelligence quotient gap.

Cops on the beat are unable to answer questions, certainly those posed by University students. Cops on the beat are ill advised to enter into dialogue with University students if they are unwilling or unable to answer student questions in rebuttal.

Ask not, if unwilling or unable to answer questions, should be the working maxim of the University police force.

Letters To The Editor

Girls in Dorms, U.S. Socialism, Instructor's Absence, The Rules

To The Editor Of The Kernel:

On Tuesday October 31, President John W. Oswald rejected a proposal from the Tower A Government which would have allowed girls to be present in the dorm rooms of the Tower on Friday and Saturday nights from 8:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.

This proposal was not a haphazard one, but one which was diligently worked out and considered by the members of the Tower A Government to be an asset to the "liberalness" of this institution. If this proposal would have been passed, the University would have joined the ranks of such universities as Ohio State, Tennessee, Vanderbilt, Virginia and the Ivy League which have all adopted similar proposals.

If the Tower A proposal would have been passed, then it would have become a policy of the University, and thus it would have become available for adoption by other dormitories. The proposal should not, however, be considered radical. It only grants the residents of Tower A both the rights and the privileges that are due to them.

Considering the fact that the university has repealed the in loco parentis clause and also considering that we lease our rooms from the university, the dormitories have become, in actuality, student hotels.

The student, because he is a paying tenant, should have the right to do anything he wants to in his room, as long as he does not damage any of the University's property and as long as he does not disturb his neighbors. By rejecting the Tower A proposal, President Oswald has not only committed both an unjust and an unlawful act but he has also repudiated the University's new policy concerning in loco parentis.

By rejecting the Tower A proposal, President Oswald has also rejected the liberal trends of this University. It would seem from what has happened, that the influence of such groups as The Women's Temperance Union, The Chastity Club, The Society for the Preservation of Old Maids and the National Association for the Advancement of Victorian Morality are more important to this University than the rights of students.

It is for this reason that I am suggesting to the judges of the homecoming displays that the Administration be awarded first prize for its magnificent adaptation of the theme "Mickey Mouse Club." Perhaps, the replacement of Mickey Mouse with Happy Chandler would not be such a drastic idea after all.

John Cooper
A&S Junior

To The Editor Of The Kernel:

How many students realize that they as well as their parents, in many cases, are being cheated when an instructor is absent from class? Some students cheer when this happens while a few realize the seriousness of it.

I consider these absences in violation of a simple contract between the University of Kentucky and myself.

Below are the requirements for a valid contract and how these apply to this situation:

1. Offer—The University offers me the opportunity for a higher education.
2. Acceptance—I accept this offer and enroll.
3. Consideration—I pay the required tuition.
4. Capacity of parties—The University and I both have the legal capacity to enter into a contract.
5. Legality of object—Education is certainly a legal object.

I think it's time students became more concerned with this situation. After all, if we get cheated out of money elsewhere we fight, why not now!

R. Brooks
Commerce Junior

To The Editor Of The Kernel:

Perhaps I am wrong, but it seems to me that the U.S. government has moved this nation toward a high state of socialism, which is just around the corner from communism. Some socialism may be good for the people, but where does it end? If the U.S. keeps developing toward socialism at the rate it has since 1960, then "big brother" may be watching you by 1984, just as the book entitled 1984 suggests.

Since socialism provides benefits for the American people, the government of the U.S. has more to say about what they can or cannot do. Are the services and benefits of socialism worth the sacrifice of rights and privileges? The American people seem to think they are.

It surprised me, when a proposal this year for "wire tapping" was brought before our Congress to be voted on. If wire tapping became part of our law, it would be permissible to use it against suspected American citizens for various acts they did which would make them suspicious characters. Hasn't every citizen either said or done something at one time or another which would make him a suspicious person? Therefore, every U.S. citizen would be a potential suspect and, if passed, wire tapping or "big brother's ear" would have its beginning.

Fortunately, the proposal for wire tapping did not pass the preliminary steps for it to become part of our law. But how could some of our Congressmen even consider such a proposal? Wire tapping is an invasion of privacy which is part of the U.S. constitution. Is this type of thinking part of American socialism? I thought this country was based upon capitalistic ideas, not socialistic or communistic ones.

The U.S. is spending billions of dollars and sacrificing young American lives in Vietnam to keep communism from spreading in the world. But yet this nation itself is apparently moving in the direction of communism. Are we fighting against communism or for it?

Calvin Woodward
Commerce Junior

To The Editor Of The Kernel:

I've read the Shakespearean quote and the quote from Proverbs and I enjoyed them very much. When I wrote "The Rules" and the reply to Miss Mueller, I was stating what seems to be wrong with the social atmosphere on campus. As the Bible says:
"He who pursues justice and kindness" will find life and honor."

Proverbs XXI, 21

I don't wish to argue because:
"The start of a strife is like the opening of a dam, therefore check a quarrel before it begins!"

Proverbs XVII, 14

So, Mr. Nash, let's not fight because:
"Quarrel not with a man without a cause, with one who has done you no harm."

Proverbs II, 30

Yes, wisdom grows with age but awareness of the truth comes when a man opens his eyes and sees.

Campaign '67:

EDITORS NOTE: Following is the first installment of a two-part series on Fayette County legislative candidates. Tomorrow's report will focus on Democratic hopefuls.

The five Fayette County Republicans running for state offices are somewhat divided over a possible UK speaker ban that both the main gubernatorial candidates have advocated.

Rep. Don Ball of the 55th District, the only Republican incumbent in the current race, and Craddy Johnson, a contender in the 54th District, both expressed opposition to a speaker ban.

"I think that by the time a person gets to college," Mr. Johnson said, "exposure does him more good than harm."

Similarly, Rep. Ball said, "I feel that a college student should be able to listen to any speaker."

Robert D. Flynn, senatorial candidate in the 13th District, and Robert Wooley of the 56th District, however, both favor a ban to some degree.

"I would bar any irresponsible speaker who speaks of violence or overthrow of the government," Mr. Wooley said. He included in these categories "people like H. Rap Brown (Negro Black Power militant) or known Communists."

Mr. Flynn said he feels anyone should have freedom of speech at universities "except when it's treason or (involves) inciting riots."

Mr. Wooley and Mr. Flynn both favor local control in deciding what speakers should be banned. Control, they say, might be exercised by the University administration and possibly a body of "responsible" students.

Johnnie Jackson, the fifth Republican candidate, running in the 53rd District, declined to make impromptu comment on any election topic.

He claimed he has been "too busy" campaigning for office to sit down and study issues. But he quickly added that he would carefully study all relevant issues if his campaign succeeds.

The Maine Chance controversy is another issue that has divided the candidates who expressed an opinion on the matter.

Mr. Johnson, brother of Fayette County Judge Joe Johnson who has been a vocal critic of UK's purchase, said "I think the University paid far too much money for agricultural purposes, but I'm not insinuating that it used illegal means."

"If the University needs a farm, it should get one at any price," Mr. Wooley said in explaining his position. "I feel, however that the University has made a very poor attempt—from a public relations standpoint—to sell its ideas for needing the farm."

Mr. Flynn said that he favored the purchase "if UK can afford it and if it is not going to put an extra burden on the taxpayers. But if it does, then I would be against buying the farm."

He explained that his main reason for running for office is that he feels taxes are too high and hopes to do something to stop further increases.

Will the Maine Chance controversy affect the University's budget request when it comes up before the state legislature this year?

Mr. Wooley feels that it will not, and Mr. Ball says "probably not." But Mr. Johnson takes a different view.

"I'm afraid it will," he said. "I don't think the stir that's been caused will help the University's image. People are going to look twice when UK requests a large amount of money."

What Happens To Charlie's Good Frosh?

By GUY MENDES
Kernel Sports Editor

Great oaks grow from little acorns, and in the same respect, great football teams grow from strong freshman squads.

As a rule, that is. But in the past few years, the rule hasn't been abided by at the University. Head football coach Charlie Bradshaw took over at UK in 1962 and since that time the freshman teams under his rule have combined a strong record of 16-6-1.

In the same period of time the varsity won-loss record has totalled 20-32-4.

In his first year Bradshaw said to give him a chance to recruit his own players (the previous coach had recruited most of the players he was confronted with) and he would produce a winner.

He got his own recruits and built a winner . . . at least at the Kitten level. The freshman teams of 1963 and 1964 were 4-0.

If the four-year progression of a player from his Kitten career to his senior year on the varsity goes as planned, members of the undefeated Kitten teams in '63 and '64 should have played on last year's varsity and some should still be around this year.

Yet, the record last year (3-6-1) was far from winning, and after losing the first six encounters this year, there is no chance for a profitable season.

One question that immediately comes to mind is "What happens to the good freshman teams, why don't they progress into good varsity teams?"

"The thing is," Bradshaw began, "the freshman teams are normally poorly organized. We constantly have to work them against the varsity because of their thinness. They end up being more mature than the other freshman teams they play, and they whip them physically."

Bradshaw said the players then move up to the sophomore level and are pushed into front line duty because, "we haven't any depth due to the innumerable losses we had in our first years." Bradshaw was referring to the large number of players who left the squad in '62 and '63. "Other schools don't have to use as many sophomores as we do; they usually red-shirt the sophs." (Red shirting denotes holding a player out of competition for a year to give him experience. When he returns, he still has three years of eligibility on the varsity.)

"Ole Miss won't have a true sophomore (one that hasn't been red-shirted) in their first 30 boys, as a rule. Georgia either. And we have 10 or 12 sophomores playing in the first two units.

"It's mentally and physically frustrating for sophomores to play against four and five-year seniors in situations they're not ready for."

This year's Kitten record (1-3) was the first losing one under Bradshaw. "They've had key injuries just as we have had," Bradshaw said, "plus the fact that the Cincinnati (9-6) and Tennessee (27-20) games could have gone either way."

Could It Be Coussey?

That's what a surprised member of the Green Hornets could be thinking as he is confronted with Charlie Earlywine of CSF who is making a Coussey-like pass in last night's intramural action.

Independents

Begin Play

Two nip-and tuck battles highlighted Intramural basketball Wednesday night. In the opening round of Independent League play The Christian Student Fellowship downed the Green Hornets 31-25 in overtime, while the Moreland Raiders squeezed by the Jets 39-38 on a last-second basket by Gary Foltz.

In other action in the Alumni Gym, the MMFIC swept past the Unknowns 35-21 and the Wesley Foundation crushed the Polaks 39-24. Billy Lile had 13 points for MMFIC and Danny Hales led the Wesley Foundation with 16.

Fraternity League action continues Thursday as the IM season gets into full swing.

Students Object To Merger

LOUISVILLE (AP) - The University of Louisville agreed Wednesday to take control of Kentucky Southern College, including its assets and debts.

The merger, effective immediately, was approved by an 18-3 vote of Louisville's trustees and eliminates the possibility the five-year-old college might have to close. It has had financial problems for several years.

The consolidation brought objections from one group of Kentucky Southern students led by Charles Mullins, who announced a drive to raise $1.5 million within one week.

"With this money," said Mullins, "the college could keep going on its own until federal grants become available." He said requests for contributions already have been sent to a number of prominent national businessmen and to a number of television stars.

Burhans Leaving?

Dr. Rollin S. Burhans, president of Kentucky Southern, said he probably will not remain at the 283-acre school which has 800 students.

Louisville officials said the college's program would continue without substantial change for the remainder of the academic year. They also said tuition will not be increased before next summer.

Kentucky Southern has been incurring yearly operating deficits of $500,000 to $600,000. It has debts of $4.5 million and pledges of enough money to pay off about $900,000 of that amount. That leaves a net debt of $3.6 million.

Homecoming Events Are Set

Al Hirt will appear on stage at 8 p.m. Friday at the Coliseum. Tickets are $2 in advance, $3 at the door.

To close "Boost the Wildcat Week" on Saturday, a Bar-B-Q will be held at the Intramural Field. Following the buffet, UK will play West Virginia at 2 p.m. The queen and her court will be presented at half-time and the winners of the display contest will be announced.

Students and alumni are invited to a reception at the Alumni House after the game. Saturday night the Marauders will be playing at the Student Center from 8 p.m. to 12 p.m. and Bert Mason will be singing in the Grille. The reign of the 1967 Homecoming Queen will end on Sunday with a reception in her honor, at Tower A on the 23rd floor lounge.

Colombia Workers Schedule Two Slide Shows This Week

Students with a yen for life South of the Border can get their appetites whetted from 2 to 6 p.m. Thursday and Friday at the YMCA South American Summer Workcamp.

University students who taught and worked on a Y-sponsored project in Bogota, Colombia, this summer will show slides of their stay there along with slides of previous groups' stays in both Colombia and Ecuador.

Next summer the Y plans to have 15 students spend eight weeks in Bogota. The students will continue construction of a neighborhood park begun this summer by a UK group. While the boys swung pick axes this summer, the girls tutored and led recreational programs with neighborhood children.

Cost of the trip is expected to be $445, according to Jon Dalton, adviser to the YMCA.

The workshop is open house held in room 245 of the Student Center.
