BLUE RIDGE

Today's issue of The Kernel has been designated as the Blue Ridge edition, featuring the annual Y. M. C. A. gathering held at Blue Ridge, North Carolina. The Kernel does this because it feels that recognition should be given to so important and influential an institution as this annual event.

The gathering at Blue Ridge aims toward the thorough development of youth. Classes are held in which boys are instructed in leadership and good citizenship. Boys from all over the country, most of them leaders in their local Y. M. C. A. organizations, attend the conference and take back with them new ideas as well as a new inspiration for work in their own communities. Along with the classes is given a varied program of recreational activities, designed to furnish the boys with the highest type of fun as well as with healthful exercise. A youth seldom returns from Blue Ridge without bringing back glowing accounts of the good times, the natural beauty of the place, the wealth of good fellowship, and all the other adjuncts of camp life.

Too much cannot be said of the work of the Y. M. C. A. Its activities fill a place in the life of the boys of this country that no other similar organization ever endeavors to reach. In crises, in the small towns, wherever organized, it fills the universal need of boys for fellowship and guidance. The gathering at Blue Ridge is perhaps its best known and most representative activity.

KERNEL QUESTIONNAIRE

That university students really are thinking about outstanding issues of the day and giving serious consideration to their solutions is shown by the results of the questionnaire published by The Kernel recently. Such questions as the necessity of the home as a social institution, marriage as an institution, companionship, marriage, divorce, and governmental problems were answered, in most cases positively, by a representative number of students.

Interesting to note is the fact that in almost every case of a majority on either side of a question it was a convincing one rather than a narrow one. In some cases the vote was almost equally divided, in every case there was a certain percentage undecided. Even in the latter instances, however, indication is made that the student is giving consideration to the problem and probably will pursue it until he has gained enough information to reach a definite conclusion.

Another fact worthy of note, one which leads to the conclusion that college influences are taking effect more than many students seem to feel that they do, is that more seniors than Juniors were interested in the questionnaire, more Juniors than sophomores, more sophomores than freshmen. This is as it should be, indicating that as the student advances in collegiate status his view is broadened and the field of his interests enlarges, making him more and more capable of coping with the problems which he will face later on as a citizen.

Just what is indicated by the fact that the number of men interested was five times that of the number of women is difficult to determine. It should present a challenge to college women to make themselves felt more positively in present-day issues.

Whatever the conclusions reached from the results, the value of the survey in itself is unquestionable. Whether the questions were answered, whether the answers were widely different, it may be asserted safely that thought has been stimulated on the questions treated by the publication of such a questionnaire.

WISHES

I am watching one single leaf
Shining in the night.
It is a part of a great tree;
But this one little leaf
Holds me as if by magic
It is still and cool and holds itself
So steadily there on the branch.
A light shines on it
And flickers eerily.
Now it moves in a slight breeze
And suddenly comes to life.
It quivers and trembles,
And makes me wish
That I, too, might be a leaf.
There it stays for five long months
With nothing to do but drift in the breeze.

As fate shall decree,
The sun shines on it, and the moon,
A breeze floats lazily over it.
But most of all I wish to be
A leaf in a howling thunderstorm.
To be tossed and jerked by the wind,
To feel the rain sinking,
Cooling and soothing.

And—
But why spend time in nonsensical thoughts?
There are people to greet,
And clothes to be worn—
Since I must do as custom dictates,
But I heartily wish I might be
A leaf.
To drift and float and dream.

"Made-to-measure" service for business

Whether the business is small or large—the corner grocery or the refrigerator factory—requirements for telephone service vary. So, to meet special conditions, Bell System men custom-fit the service to the subscriber. They worked out a telephone conference plan for a large manufacturer. Every Friday, at specified times, each district manager calls the home office, where telephone facilities are so arranged that the chief sales executives are on the line simultaneously. Problems are discussed, decisions given. In minutes, the executives cover the country. This plan lowered selling costs, raised efficiency, helped the user to increase profits 31% in a year's time. By making the telephone more useful, Bell System men contribute to the success of many industries.

"ELECTRIC BULLETS"

THE result of exhaustive wind-tunnel tests of conventional trolley car models revealed that at speeds of 70 and 80 miles per hour, 70 per cent of the total power was consumed in overcoming air resistance. Streamlining saves approximately 20 per cent of the power.

When the Philadelphia and Western Railway Company decided to replace its cars with faster and more efficient equipment, it chose "electric bullets"—new streamlined cars—each powered by 4 G-E 100-hp. motors. The cars, constructed of aluminum alloy, with tapered noses and tails, are much lighter in weight and capable of greater operating efficiency.

In developing transportation apparatus, college-trained General Electric engineers have conducted extensive tests to improve operating conditions. On land, on sea, and in the air, to-day's equipment is safer, swifter, more dependable, and more comfortable.

Here goes the last "sacred cow" in cigarette advertising!

INHALING has long been an "untouchable" subject taboo in the tobacco trade... a "sacred cow"! Why?... Because in every tobacco leaf - even the finest, the mildest - nature hides certain impurities which, when not removed, are unkind to delicate membranes!
