Guignol's First Play Of Year, 'The Women,' To Open Monday With 13 UK Students In Cast

Clare Booth Play Will Be 101st Theatre Production

Guignol's traditional many-colored curtain will rise at 8:30 Monday night in the little theater off Euclid avenue for "The Women," Guignol's 101st production. Written by Clare Booth, the play concerns the smart life of today's sophisticated sinnerhood.

Highlighting opening night will be a reception between acts in the theater lounge with Frank Fowler, director, and the Guignol staff as guests.

President and Mrs. Thomas P. Cooper will be guests of honor at the reception. In the receiving line will be Mr. Fowler, Dr. and Mrs. Cooper, Dr. and Mrs. Frank L. McVey and Dr. and Mrs. Raymond F. Main.

All reserved seats for the opening performance have been sold and seats for the other performances during the week are being taken rapidly.

According to the author, "The Women" is a "satirical play about a numerically small group of ladies native to the Park Avenue of America."

The show was praised by reviewers when it opened on Broadway two years ago. Its fresh lines made it one of the most successful stagings of that season. But to Heywood Brown, who seldom devotes space to general reviews, the play, as women in play, "degraded the whipsnapper." It was barred from Broadway.

'Hell Week' Is 'House Week' From Now On, Says Council

Acting on authority delegated by the Student Government association, a joint committee of Interfraternity and Panhellenic council members voted last night to abolish the term "hell week" and to lighten up restrictions on informal initiation practices.

The action taken was in the form of a compromise on a bill which had been introduced into, and tabled by the Student Legislature last spring, and reintroduced into that body last month.

The bill several weeks ago had been turned over to the specially-appointed joint committee for consideration and recommendations, on the grounds that having practices was a concern of campus Greek chapters only, and that therefore any action taken should be left to their representatives.

The committee also passed, by way of enforcement measures, provisions whereby chapters violating the new regulations would be subjected to a fine and the ultimate suspension of social privileges.

Text of the committee's recommendation follows: "1. The name 'hell week' is obnoxious in itself. 'Tins' it shall no longer be called such, but shall hereinafter be called 'house week.' "2. Nothing shall be done to injure or corrupt the neophyte's character—either his moral, his intellectual or his physical condition.

"3. There shall be no destruction or mutilation of either public or private property. "4. There shall be absolutely no public exhibition. Subsidiary to the above limitations: (a) a three-hour study period each day shall be provided for the freshmen during house-week; (b) all house-week activities shall be limited to the hour of two o'clock a. m. except for one night during the week and (c) each fraternity shall submit the dates for its house-week to the respective councils. "Penalties for infractions of the above limitations shall be: "1. For the first offense, a fine of $10.00 shall be made against the offending fraternity by the Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils, and payable to either treasurer. "2. For any other offense, all of the offending fraternity's social privileges shall be removed and suspended as such by the Dean of Men or the Dean of Women."

KENDALL FAILS TO GUARANTEE RETURN OF DUES

Admits Constitution Was Not Ratified, Dissolves Coop

Hastening to conclude its investigation of the former Student Cooperative association, the Student Standards committee adjourned yesterday's meeting when George Herndon, coop business manager, failed to attend to sign a membership-dues refund agreement prepared by the committee and which he refused to approve Wednesday night.

Kendall told the Kernel last night that "any coop member who is dissatisfied will have his membership dues refunded."

After continued hearings, the committee drew up and approved an agreement whereby Kendall was given the alternative of refunding to the students their membership fees in such cases as membership cards could be presented and when members declared they had not received Coop benefits or place himself open to the will of the Student Legislature with such recommendations the standards committee should determine expedient.

Kendall declined to sign the alternative contract Wednesday night, and said he would stand to the legislature. However, Ben Shulest, standards chairman, said Kendall informed him Thursday morning that he would sign the agreement provided the committee would wait until after election day for the refund. For this answer, Shulest said Kendall replied he was busy with the election.

Under terms of the agreement, Shulest said, Kendall was to furnish bond to the amount of membership funds in his hands to insure repayment of members dues. The investigation, which opened Monday, came in answer to student pressure and a petition asking for an inquiry into the organization and expenditures of the coop. Authority to conduct hearings was granted by the student legislature with approval of Acting President Thomas Poe Cooper.

Last night, Kendall declared the coop as dissolved, and added that Jimmy Morris, manager of the book store, has consented to help clear up the situation by agreeing to sell used books of coop members at a discount.

Kentucky Team Hopes To 'March Through Georgia'

By ROY STEINFORT Special To The Kernel

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 24.—The Wildcats are "taking this Georgia game seriously. Remembering vividly their last entrance into Georgia when they were beaten last season, 13 to 6, by a razzle-dazzle Georgia Tech tribe, Coach Kierwan and his 28 Kentuckians are determined to follow the example of Sherman and "March through Georgia" this trip.

They arrived here in L&N station at 6:30 p. m. on their way to face the University of Georgia Bulldogs in Athens tomorrow night.

The quiet Mr. Kierwan spent most of the ten-hour train ride alternating solving photo-cube puzzles and conferring with all the alumni of a political candidate, with his side-camps.

There has been little testosterone. Members of the squad sleep, played poker for matches and engaged in downing two heavy dining car dinners.

In order to keep them on their feet, the Cats will go from the station here to Georgia Tech's playing field for a short workout under the Kegles. They will return to the Georgian Terrace Hotel, eat a big steak dinner and go to bed. Tomorrow at 1 p. m. they are scheduled, arriving in Lexington at approximately 7:50.

Cat backfielders spent two hours this afternoon in skull practice with Coach Kierwan, Slawky, and Mosely.

Cats Played Closely This season has been followed closely this year by a plague of injuries, will enter tomorrow night's game in a more than usual state of readiness. Tomorrow at 1 p. m. they are scheduled, arriving in Lexington at approximately 7:50.

The Arrangement Seems Satisfactory

Since THE KERNEL was issued last, the Student Standards committee has admitted representatives of the paper to its several meetings, and has consented to let students sit in hereafter provided they are "orderly and keep silence."

This, we believe, is a satisfactory arrangement, and one which will benefit both the SGA and the general student body in the long run. As long as the meetings are open, and as long as the campus press is permitted to report (with discretion, of course) the salient facts of all SGA proceedings, there should be little danger of harmful rumors arising.

Then, too, it seems to us the arrangement is only just. By-law No. 10 of the Student Constitution states, "All meetings of the Student Legislature shall be open to anyone in the University," and since no mention is made of the contrary concerning admission to committee meetings, one can only conclude that this ruling applies as well to the Legislature's agencies.

Correcting Still Another Error Made Last May

Among the many minor changes which this changing world wrought during the past summer was a complete renovation of this writer's opinion of one Charles A. Lindbergh, aviator.

Back in May, before France fell and the British Lark party found its voice, we wrote:

"Almost overnight, Colonel Lindbergh has replaced President Roosevelt as the hero of this generation. We admire him for his coolness and for his courage at standing up in the face of hysteria to point out that the same first step in defense should be to ascertain what one is defending—and to determine them what we shall need to assure this defense and how we shall go about it."

We wish here and now to retract this statement, not so much from vacillation as from utter disillusionment. We thought at the time that Lindbergh was a cool head giving voice to a logical approach to the solving of the nation's dilemma. His speeches have since indicated that such is not the case. His, from all indications, is a mind warped by distrust of the common people, his words utterances similar to those of the Men of Vichy and the Cliveden Set, who mouthed Fascism in its infancy and have clothed and sheltered it now that it is a man and has become the European status-quo.

And, now that we are enabled to view the man in bitter reality not obscured by an emotional reaction against the "warmongers," we see how it is possible for him to make such statements with a perfectly straight face. Colonel Lindbergh, only recently returned from Europe, had there as friends the Duke of Windsor, Hermann Goerring, the assorted members of the Cliveden set, and Charles Bexau, "friend" of the French working class. It hardly can be a coincidence, then, that his words should give with them:

Perhaps, too, one cannot discount as a possible influence his wife, the daughter of a former partner of J. Pierpont Morgan, and author of a recent book entitled The Wave of the Future, thesis of which is that the present war is a world crusade by the "Forces of the Future" against the "Forces of the Past." The former, as presented by Mrs. Lindbergh, are boldly similar to Fascism's philosophy, the latter strangely reminiscent of the Declaration of Independence. The democratic ideal, she says, is finished, hence there is nothing left to do but accept the alternative, totalitarianism. These beliefs are only too similar to those expressed by her husband.

It is with sincere regret that we must come to such conclusions about Colonel Lindbergh and his very intelligent family. We can still recall days when we flew a model airplane labeled "Lindy," and were proud of the fact it was ours. And we thought—and still think—North To The Orient a good book.

And On The Seventh Day . . .

Nothing so disrupts the peaceful dignity of a forenoon Sabbath stroll as the reeling Sunday drunk, who makes his way along broad, sunlit thoroughfares, caressing buildings and fumbling in his pockets for matches that are never there.

There is always about this particular fauna of human derelict—a momentary flash of envy for someone who dares be so different, a certain inexplicable feeling of release at perceiving so brazen a contempt for convention. And yet, as soon as that lightning flare of caprice has passed on, and the mind focused on the thing's practicality, one realizes, as once did Carrie Nation and her late League of zealous, that such things must not be.

It was only last week that we saw one of those warmed-over revolvers of the night before, and as the pigeons brooded and the church bells tolled, we could not help thinking—with Shakespeare and Huxley—"Oh brave new world, to have such people in it."

The back is plain with a long 9-inch center vent. Natural tan leather buttons blend with the more prominent light tan in the jacket and the dark tan over-check.

• LESLIE has selected an 18-oz. imported hand woven HARRIS TWEED in light brown with a darker brown over check. He prefers the straight front coat slightly rounded at the bottom, slanted lower pockets with flaps and one breast pocket with flap. Both Leslie and Kitt prefer railroad stitching on pocket flaps and collars which is in keeping with both coat models.

COOP DISSOLVED

out at the end of this semester.

During the investigation, Kendall admitted that the coop constitution had never been ratified by the members, but denied that copies of the constitution were placed at coop registration tables with his approval. He further admitted that he had converted $74.85 from the coop funds to his own use as "self-appropriations."

He said that "over a 100 students" had purchased books through the coop with receipt of texts in most cases recorded. Records of workers employed in membership drive and amounts paid for services were produced by Kendall, although he failed to produce the coop's financial records, other than a financial statement of expenses and expenditures, upon request of the committee to do so.

In explaining the organization of the cooperative, he said that students assumed work voluntarily. About 402 members paid their membership dues, and when it appeared that cooperation was not forth coming from members and he had to do the work himself, Kendall said he converted the cooperative into a private enterprise.

Non-Credit Course In Band Offered

Prof. C. V. Maguire, director of the "Best Band in the South," announced the formation of a special band for students who wish an opportunity to play in a band but do not have the time or chance to be a member of the regular University band.

Aspirants will meet Tuesday from 4 to 5 p. m. in the Music Center. No credit will be received for this course, Director Maguire said.

Axis Discussed

Members of the Lexington Rotary club heard Professor Amy Vandenhoeft of the political science department of the University discuss "The Rome, Tokyo, Berlin Axis" at the club's weekly luncheon meeting Thursday at the Phoenix hotel.

wrenched his knee ten days ago in scrimmage.

"How" Combs and Claude Hammonds both backs, currently recovering from dislocated elbows, will also watch tomorrow's game from the bench. Combs' elbow has recovered sufficiently so he can play, but Coach Kirwan is holding him out until next week for the Alabama game. Hammonds may be ready too, but it is doubtful at present.

The Bulldogs, after absorbing a fair physical beating last week against Columbia have recovered to full strength.

Cats should Win

If performances so far this season mean anything, Kirwan's crew will hold a decisive edge—but the Vandy game indicated the same outcome and look what happened. Oglethorpe was the first Bulldog victim this season falling under a smothering 53-0 score. South Carolina, the second foe, was tripped 23-3. Mississippi, big, fast and powerful reversed the Georgians 28-14, and Columbia edged them out 19-13 last week in New York city.

For the Willoughby, 100-pound Cat guard, it will be just a ride home. He, a native of Winston, Ga., is the only Georgian on the Kentucky squad.

Wallace Bulle, in his first year at the Georgia helm, won four out of ten games and thus far he has broken even, winning two and dropping a like number. The team will leave Athens at 11:30 p. m. Friday night and arrive in Lexington at 6:50 p. m. Saturday night.

Local Lad Willoughby Hopes To Make It Bad For Georgia

By JOHN CARRICO

When Georgia's red-jerseyed line comes out of the huddle Friday and takes its stance opposite the Kentucky forward wall, they'll find a familiar face in fact, a Georgian fan, watching them determinedly. And in the mind behind this familiar face will be but one thought: "I'd rather beat Georgia than any one on the schedule."

For Georgia, who has given the sports world such notable figures as Ty Cobb and Rudy York, regrets the day that she sent the Willoughby to the "dark and bloody ground." Because like and his roommate, Bob Palmer, make the middle section of Kentucky's line harder to get through than the S. U. B. grill during convocation hour.

Three-year Veteran

He, a senior, has been on the varsity three years and has played against Georgia once. He was an important factor in Kentucky's conquest of the Bulldogs at Louisville last year. This will be both his debut and finale in Sanford Stadium at Athens and he hopes to make his "coming out" and "going in" party a complete success. Willoughby (christened Emmet), whose home town, Winston, Ga., is only a hundred miles from the home of the Bulldogs, does not limit his athletic ability solely to the gridiron. His six-foot, 190-pound frame fits as ably into right field for Coach Frank Messers in the spring as for Ab Kirwan's Wildcat line in the fall.

He, who is majoring in physical education and history, is quiet and soft-spoken off the field. His ready smile has become almost as familiar a landmark as the spire on Memorial Hall. But, come Friday, if some wisecracking Georgia lineman beats over and says, "Dr. Willoughby, I presume," he'd better say it quickly, for not unlike Dagwood, the "Temperamental Gentleman" from Georgia comes by awful fast.
