Shakertown Theme Is Planned For Sweater Session

A "Shakertown swing" for the regular bi-weekly sweater session from 4 p.m. today in the ballroom will highlight activity in the Union building this week.

Also on the Union's program for the next few days are the regular Modern Music concert and a party for Union Board members. The Union is planning a hobby show for December 15, 16, and 17, and a focus on the enjoyment of personnel work December 16.

There will be absolutely no dancing for the "Shakertown session." Roberts Parker, director of the dance, said yesterday "Men and women will walk up to the ballroom on opposite sides of the stairs. They will be separated from each other by a rope as they go to the door. But after they get in, it'll be hands off," Margaret Blackerby, chairman of the Union house committee, sponsor of the sweater sessions, said.

MAHINES TO PLAY
Dave Mahanes and his 10-piece band will play for the dance, which is informal and free to all students.

The theme of the dance is taken from the now abandoned Shakertown community on the Harrodsburg road at which members of opposite sexes separated themselves.

COMMITTEES
In addition to the "no-dance" sweater session, the Union will feature this afternoon the meetings of Duke Ellington and his orchestra at the weekly Modern Music.

MARGARET BLACKERBY is chairman of the Union's house committee, which will hold a "Shakertown swing" and a committee party today.

le concert from 8:30 to 4 p.m. in the music room.

Bill Penick, Kernel Music critic, will direct the program which schedules such records as "Take a Train," "Warm Valley," and "Gai from Joe's."

From 8 to 10 p.m. today in the Carnegie Music room and the Union house committee planning is entertaining all members of the Union board committees who have served at least two years.

Dancing and informal entertainment will be on the party program which is being planned by Mary Ann Farnach, member of the house

Bar Association Passes Anti-Strike Resolution

Copies To Be Sent To Senators, Columnist Pegler

The Student Bar association passed resolution Wednesday endorsing "any anti-strike legislation" which will eliminate strikes in defense industries, and sent copies of the resolution to Senators Barkley and Chandler and to columnist Westbrook Pegler.

After heated debate, the resolution, which was proposed by James Wine, senior law student, passed by a large majority.

"The resolution was brought to the attention of the bar association because we felt that an opinion on the issue from a Kentucky group would carry weight, since our state is one of those most affected in the present labor controversy," Wine said.

The resolution follows: "Whereas the peace and security of the United States is being threatened by strikes in the defense industries which are perpetuated by the selfish interests of a few labor leaders, and

Whereas the overwhelming desire of the public is that such strikes be eliminated during the emergency, and

Be it resolved by the Student Bar association of the University of Kentucky that it go record as endorsing any anti-strike legislation which will eliminate strikes in the defense industries for the duration of the emergency.

Be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be sent to the following persons: Hon. Allen W. Barkley and Hon. A. B. Chandler, United States Senators of the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

PHRASE OPPOSED
The "any defense legislation" phrase was opposed by E. Allan Roberts, Robert Boone and B. E. Howard in the voting on the resolution.

During debate, a bar association member said that members of the United Mine Workers union which was called on strike last week were given no voice in affairs of the union and received little or no benefit from the organization.

Many miners are opposed to the activities of the union but are afraid to state their opinions in the union meetings because of the fear of retribution for the group, he explained.

REFORM MOVEMENT
There is a movement on foot however, by which the individual union members may obtain reforms, he said. Many miners have tired of what they call the unions' high-handed methods.

Officers of the bar association, which is composed of the entire law school student body, are Charles Landrum, president; Marcus Reed, vice president; Helen Stephenson, secretary; and Unei Barrickman, treasurer.

Philharmonic Concert Sunday Called 'Delightful' By Critics

By WILYAH GRAVES
The University of Kentucky Philharmonic orchestra under the baton of Professor Lampert explained and illustrated the theme.

In the auditions for Symphony No. 5 in E Minor by Tchaikovsky, the French horn solo was with extreme ease and grace. Sadness and pathos that only Tchaikovsky can write in his music were expressed in this selection.

The novel "Parturient Mobile" by Strauss, concluding number on the program, featured special effects by the woodwind and percussion sections, a flowing melodic accompaniment by the harp.

Intermezzo from "Cavaliers Rustiques" by Mascagni was done with grace and simplicity as the first encore.

These lectures have been planned by the committee on the encouragement of scholarship and in addition to honoring certain scholars they are expected to be of real value to the students.

The four lecturers will be chosen from a list to be nominated by the University faculty.

Future Teachers To Meet Tomorrow
The Future Teachers of America will hold their semi-monthly meeting at 3 p.m. tomorrow in the University school auditorium, Anne Hatter, president, announced yesterday.

Open to all students who plan to teach after graduating the meeting will feature a musical program.

Here's The Staff From Reporter To Editor-In-Chief

By PATRICIA SNIDER
Don't ever worry that The Kernel won't come out on schedule. It won't matter if all the boys are drafted into active service and the girls are called upon to drive buses; there are enough professors on the campus with newspaper experience to make an entire staff.

No opinion expressed about their executive or reportorial ability. They will be hired according to the way that they held in their newspaper days.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF
Editor-in-chief of the professional staff will be Dr. Frank Lerond McVeey, president-emeritus of the University. He was an editorial writer of the New York Times and is the logical successor to Bob Ammons.

The news desk will be turned over to Dr. Neil Plummer, head of the journalism department. His experience in newspaper work was gained on The Kernel and the Lexington Herald. The work he has done in sports, news, police reports, and correspondence is good background for knowing just what might happen.

After the copy is passed over the news desk it is sent to the copy editor, but he is supposed to be all-wise about spelling, addresses, and initials. Prof. Victor Portmann of the Journalism department is the initial qualifier for this job; he worked on the copy desk of the Minneapolis Tribune in 1926.

There'll Always Be A Kernel—With Faculty Staff

Relations. Miss Kling was advertising manager for the Lexington Herald and at one time was in charge of advertising for a downtown department store.

Johnny Carrico's place as sports editor will be taken by Gerald Griffin, publicity man for the Athletic association, former professor in the journalism department, and sports correspondent for the Louisville Courier-Journal.

FASHION
Fashion will be presented by Dr. Margaret Ratliff of the psychology department, who was a fashion writer for Women's Wear in New York. In this capacity she will attend all football, basketball, tennis, and golf games to discover what styles and colors seem to be pleasing most to the spectators. Evening dresses will be studied on first nights at the Guignol and at dances and formal teas and receptions.

In order that The Kernel will not get out of contact with other colleges in the nation, Prof. Willis C. Tucker of the journalism department will be the IFA (Intercollegiate Press Association) man. He has been working on newspapers ever since he was 10 years old and one time as an Associated Press correspondent.

Student Government association news will be handled by a professor who covered three sessions of the Texas legislature in Austin for the State Journalist.

Edward Newbury of the psychology department, who also did work on police, fire, movie and Chamber of Commerce beats.

"That's newspaper censorship." The psychology department will also furnish the reporter to interview celebrities that come to the campus. Dr. J. B. Miner head of the department, interviewed William there in time to make our deadline. I kept the news under my hat but hung around the station, waiting for it to pull out. I didn't even get on until the train was moving away, then I made a dash for it and swung onto the last car. That was a scoop!"

He covered the railroad beat for a while, but it was rather hard to get any news. The president of the railroad owned a rival newspaper.

One of Dr. Miner's jobs was to edit a football column and a bicycle column. That was the day of the bicycling fads and century rides — those who bicycled 100 miles in one day.

"There is nowhere else that a young man can get so much experience in the same amount of time as a reporter for a newspaper," Dr. Miner said.

The rest of the reporting staff will be made up of Miss Marguerite McLaughlin of the journalism department and E. Suller, head of the Bureau of Public Relations.

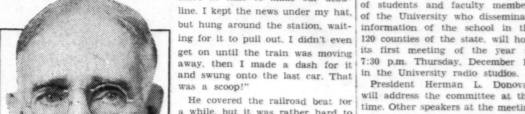

Miss Margie, as she is known on the campus, worked for several years on the Lexington Herald, including the time of the first World War. Suiting experience was on the Madison, Ind., Courier and the Indianapolis Star.

TYPESETTER
The typesetter for this paper will be Dr. Paul P. Boyd, dean of the arts and sciences college, who used to be printer's devil for a country newspaper in Arkansas. He set type in hand presses and job presses and helped fold the newspapers by hand.

"That was one time I wished the circulation was down to the zero mark," he sighed.

PROF. VICTOR PORTMANN He'd read copy...

Frankie And Johnnie: He Was His Man, But He Done Him Wrong

Vote For The Duck Salesman

VICE OF THE PEOPLE BY FRED HILL

Despite the fugitive Florida weather on-glances at a calendar and realizes that the days of the year 1941 are waning.

Which means to some people only another short session of non-long gone football.

And to others merely that New Year's Eve is approaching . . . a connotation we understand can't be valued too highly. Or else.

Then again to some through souls it brings to mind the necessity for picking a man of the year.

Already well up in the voting are such stalwarts as F. D. R., Hitler, Churchill, Lindbergh, John L. Lewis, and the American taxpayer.

The Vice Of The People's personal nomination, however, is none of these; rather it is the card that draws the illustrations for the Christmas cards.

With a dogged determination to give the buyers anything except that which is a reminder of Christmas, he has succeeded in selling sketches of soldiers, cigarettes, slippers, slinkish blondes.

All of which were bad enough.

But this year he hits a new high (or low), for his most popular offering according to the infallible Time magazine, is ducks.

Time, as pungent with up-to-date material as usual, gives credit for this year's Christmas best seller to one Watercolorist J. D. Knap (no relation to the Knapp you take in history).

Time fails here, however, in one important phase of their reporting. They do not give credit to said Mr. Knap for giving the public in previous years the Xmas pictures of soldiers, cigar ettes, slippers and slinkish blondes.

And of course he did. It is impossible that there could be in a United States more than one such mind . . . a mind capable of so well understanding the phantasias of these, our people.

To know that the American buyer will buy Christmas cards having to do with anything but Christmas . . . ah, we say, and that is real genius.

Having ducked quite into the depths of the subject, we now have little trouble in picturing this beautiful and touching scene:

Watercolorist Knap sits in the center of a huge banquet table in, say, the ball room of the Waldorf Astoria.

To his right and left sit all the celebrities of our land. Before him are a deluge of microphones and between the snapping of flash bulbs one can see row upon row of tables manned by men and women in white ryes and evening gowns.

Suddenly there is a sharp rap of a gavel. The audience stills and the illustrious Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who has come from Washington for the sole purpose of acting as master of ceremonies tonight, rises.

"My friends," he says, "I now have the honor of introducing to you 1941's Man of the Year, Watercolorist J. D. Knap. He has done something even my administration hasn't been able to do."

The president pauses; there is a breathless rush of hush. And then,

"Mr. Knap," he says, "has sold ducks to the gese!"

And then there is the one about Margie.

THE EDITOR'S CORNER

The Birth Of A Fluid Tongue

by Bob Ammons

It has been a source of no little embarrassment to us that, on the occasion of our few ventures into the world of society, we have always proven to be pretty much of a conversational stumblebum.

At times we have cast an envious eye on the smooth-talkers who could look into a girl's face and talk to her while they were dancing, while we had to say Hello, look over her shoulder, and trudge on until someone cut in.

It has been highly disconcerting for us to be caught up in a whirl of sparkling conversation and have nothing more original to contribute than a sheepish smile and some nitzy comment like "Did you go to the football game this afternoon?" when we already knew everyone had.

We seriously began to wonder if we were getting everything out of life that was due us.

Oh, ho, but we don't have to worry now! Just let the boys and girls handly their witticisms and flip answers then the neatly-turned phrase. No longer need we sit back and swallow.

Oh no indeed! We have read a book!

Our attention was attracted to the presence of such a book by an advertisement in a local newspaper.

It must have been the picture. There sat a girl and a man. Now, this is not unusual, but in this case the girl was beautiful and was dressed in a low-cut evening gown and the man was looking coolly off in another direction. The girl was wriggling her hankiechiefs.

This teased our imagination. Why was this man staring such a lovely girl? How could he be aloof with such charms so near?

Then we learned the awful truth, and our heart went out to the poor girl. She didn't know Effective Phrases. We knew exactly how she felt.

"Tongued-tied the minute she's alone with an attractive man," the ad said, and we knew just how she felt. "At times like this you must know bright conversation—starts like 'Wonderful party' . . . Doesn't the room look glamorous with these colored lights?"

"Easy to learn, but such simple friendly phrases certainly help you to get acquainted . . . and they may help the way to romance!"

"This," we said when we read it, "is just what we need."

So we sent off our ten cents (carefully wrapped) and received our book "Effective Phrases for All Occasions," and now we are ready to brave the most terrifying ordeal of conversation. We are positively brimming over with Effective Phrases we have memorized from the book.

From the lists printed in the pamphlet we have tucked away in our mind a wealth of things to say. If for instance, we should have to use a phrase with AND, we only have to recall page 12, and then we have our choice of some 250 to use. These are at our disposal helplessly and alone, feverish and delirious, wholly and absolutely, give and take, young and innocent.

If we are stumped for something to say using the word OR, we can remember the advice on page 13: "beast, bird, or fish means that anyone of the three will apply to the situation at hand, but not all three," and then we can choose between rich or poor, go or stay, printed, written, photographed, or reproduced, and several others.

And then, as if this treasure of phrases using with, through, to, toward, and other prepositions were not enough for ten cents (carefully wrapped) the editor has included a list of phrases for everyday words. Here we have an absolute Golconda lying fallow. Here is listed a sparkling universe of things to say.

Now we have on the tips of our tongue such scintillating tidbits of conversation as the seer and yellow leaf, fitting like a glove, pretty kettle of fish, plump as a partridge, fat as butter, once in a blue moon, sum total, one's salad days, and throwing into the shade.

If we should care to delve into the higher realms of expression, we can spot magnificent similes like run like a deer, flat as a pancake, broad as a barn door, white as snow, black as pitch, heavy as lead; or if we care to put the conversation on a slightly lower plane we can bring out some of the slang terms on page 23: in the doghouse, speak-ace (an illicit drinking place); kick the bucket (die); get someone's goat, make chin music (chat) or get a move on.

No, we don't have to worry anymore. The great vistas of companionship have opened before us, the sirens call of romance can now be heard.

For, we know Effective Phrases.

Clique Groans Again Under Election Strain

CAMPUS POLITICS By BOB AMMONS

First signs of the year came last week from the Constitutionalist party—known among the boys as the fraternity clique—as the always tetchy business of backing a "most popular man" came up and left behind it the usual trail of discontented clique members.

Although the clique, at a meeting early this fall, voted down a proposal to back a popular man candidate, members were summoned to a meeting last week by Milton Rice, party chairman of the ATO, who had up his sleeve, it is said, a plan to push through Jim Johnson, ATO, as the official candidate.

After the proposal for backing a candidate slipped through by a thin one-vote margin, the tables turned and A. J. "Pete" Spare, Triangle, received the nod.

DISPLEASURE
Since the official sanction of the clique in the past has meant almost automatic election (barring "spits"), this position is highly coveted. As a result, since several clique members who felt that they had "the natural candidate" were displeased, "The Sigma Six" threatened at one time to withdraw from the party and back Gus Petro, but this finally blew over.

Choice of Spare as the fraternity candidate showed, among other things, that the clique-within-the-clique—the coalition of a few big fraternities who in the past have garnered for themselves most of the official candidacies—is considerably weaker in its influence this year. Of the four major positions filled this year—party chairman, freshmen representatives, and popular man—not one has gone to a member of one of the Big Boys.

Naming Spare also indicated the continued waning of the Engineering college's bloc of votes, this week aimed at Carl Staker.

DISSATISFACTION
Especially in evidence as an aftermath of the "popular man" affair was the dissatisfaction with the method of election used. It is true that only 120 votes were cast and this seems like a paltry group for the election of such a position.

"The votes were counted and the election generally supervised this year by the Student Government Association, so there were no squawks of unfairness, except for the general discontent with the whole system. (See the two letters on this page.)"

"In the past, 'most popular man' elections" have almost invariably gone to a fraternity man, because this group is of course better able to attend the dance. This year, however, the combination of part of the engineering vote and the support of the football and basketball teams was able to boost Staker's total of 120 votes.

He is captain of Freshing Rifles of Democracy.

Contrary to not only the student, but also the world at large, and this in terms not merely of peace and war, but also the political, economic, and social factors which are of more immediate concern.

THE TWO DECADES
There are two decades that mark the prelude to the crisis of World War I, and World War II; one the decade of 1904 to 1914, the other from 1929 to 1939.

The Paris Peace Conference, the Versailles Treaty, and the League of Nations were the post-war conditioning factors for the present pre-war generation. At the present time, with the end of the post-war period and the renewal of hostilities, we have come to learn that the peace, after all, was only an illusion, a veil behind which the "status-quo" operated and maintained itself, and that all these left absolutely untouched and unaltered the manner in which nations confirmed to adhere to old values. The pursuit of economic and political profits through exclusive devotion to national interests, continued in the same old ways with reliance upon armed force (nationalism), the will to survive, fervent territorial possessions, and the natural resources necessary for the conduct of a successful war.

Hence in the course of European history, the basic political conduct of the great sovereign-states remained the same. It is the course, and duration not the period of peace that has altered, and materialistic, but all this is certainly not of our own making. For example, contrast the present pre-war generation with the pre-war generation of 1914 and its "Save the World for Democracy."

LACK OF CHALLENGE
During the reign of such comparative stability, growth and peace, there are always a few who emerge serious and critical of the era in which they were thrown. However, it may be said that the student of that day neither broke his back to get through college, nor to be a genius and to succeed afterward.

Further, to assign exclusive guilt for this war is to begin to lie. There is an active guilt and a passive guilt . . . granted that the active guilt is the Nazi; the passive guilt is upon the whole world of the Western Nations . . .

Beware This New Memory System-- It May Land You In The Bughouse

I WITNESS BY BOB BAKER

One Dr. E. R. Guthrie, a psychologist at the University of Washington, has run across the helpful means of aiding all the absent-minded who can never remember people's names. His method, which he says completely eliminates the string-around-the-finger technique, needs no equipment other than a healthy pair of lungs and a lack of timidity.

"As a means of remembering other people's names," he recommends, "Should the other person's name at the top of your lungs the moment you are introduced."

As a means to an end, we are quite certain that Dr. Guthrie's prescription is infallible but we are a bit wary of its practicality since people are enough on edge nowadays, and besides we are likely to be interned in a mental institution since even the conventionally sane are being doubted these days.

Take the case of Patrick Sullivan of New Orleans, sitting quietly in a movie theater, was mistaken for a despotic hunch and locked up despite his angry protests. If a person, sitting quietly in a movie house, can be suspected of terrorism, he arrested we wonder what would happen to the man who would start screaming the moment he was introduced. Something, why no doubt!

It may seem like a trivial matter in the midst of war and a Pacific Crisis and in the shadow of strikes and shutdowns but we feel that we must call your attention to the advertisement stuffing our magazines nowadays. These timid blitzer-kreigs are getting to be quite nuisance. We didn't mind them when they began to reproduce famous paintings and surrealist women to put their products across but we feel that they do have a kink coming now that they are making us rack our brains to under-

Can I Quote You On That

By MARYTHA DAVIS

Question: Do you think the American Isolation movement tied up with Germany? If so, to what extent?

Buddy Brown, A & S freshman—Sure! The longer Germany, can keep the United States out of war, the better chance Germany has of winning it.

Mary Ann Farbach, A & S junior—Yes, Germany wants to delay our aid to Russia and England. I think we should help the allies as much as possible without sending troops.

Ernie Hillenmeyer, Ag junior—No, I think the chief isolationists of this country are trying to use their good judgment and have "peace at any price."

Beth Caddy, A&S freshman—Some isolationists may have German connections but I think that most of them are just not far-sighted enough to see this emergency.

Miss Mithard, A & S freshman—Yes, I think Germany has control of all the isolationists in the United States.

Political, Commercial Election Of 'Popular Man' Complained

To the Editor of The Kernel: This is my first letter to the Kernel, but I am so disgusted with the election on this campus that I had to write you if any others felt the same as I.

Last Saturday night, at the Kentuckian dance, we elected the "most popular man" on the campus. I've nothing against the man myself. However, it really is laugh when we ponder the manner in which he was elected. To prove that my gripe is against campus politics and not rebellious to the man himself, I am writing this letter in the past tense, but there are still two days until the election takes place.

In the first place, a man had to have 18 Kentuckians sold as a sort of entrance fee for him. Then if you were a fraternity man and happened to be at the dance, you were called the "click" you might have been elected—that is, if enough of your backers went to the Kentuckian dance in order to vote for you.

This may seem a bit rambling, but isn't that a hell of a way to promote one of the most important elections at the University? Why not let everyone vote as in a regular election instead of making it so commercial?

As for the "click" trying to decide who will be the most popular man? Well, every good pledge will adhere strictly to what he has been told and vote for a "man he has probably never seen. Of course, we'll have a very good thing to have a most popular man that half the student body doesn't know."

Why not make the man who sells those H'een Kentuckians the "most popular man" in next year's campaign and let it go at that.

The general opinion seems to be that a more universal type of balloting could have been used. Congratulations to Carl Staker and Pete Spare, regardless of the scarcity of votes.

ADVANCE SALE FOR FORMAL TO OPEN MONDAY

Moffitt Will Play At Christmas Ball December 13

Advance sale for the second annual Christmas formal, to be sponsored by the Union dance committee, will begin Monday, it was announced yesterday.

DeK Moffitt and his orchestra, now at the Beverly Hills country club and the Schubert theater in Cincinnati, will play for the dance which is scheduled for 9 to 12 p.m. Saturday, December 13.

Admission to the dance is 75 cents, couple or stag, during the advance sale, and a dollar at the door. Tickets will be on sale Monday at fraternities and sorority houses, the dormitories, and the Union Infirmary.

Although the petitions circulated by the Union dance committee to determine student reaction to scheduling a name band for a spring dance set have not been turned in, the reception has been excellent.

Earlier, Bill Penick, president of the Union board, announced that he would schedule the dance series with a name band if 500 students signed the petitions now circulating in fraternity houses and men's dormitories.

Signers of the petition agree to pay a maximum of $5 for such a set of dances. They will be given preference in the distribution of tickets if the set is obtained.

Sports Editor Almost Sees Scoreless All-Star Game

By JOHNNY CARRICO

Yes, we saw the All-Star game, but previous little of it! We know that the game ended in a scoreless tie for the third time in the four-year series. We know that it was largely a defensive game that was played between the 30-yard markers. Yes, we saw it in flashes, thanks to the interruptions of some associates.

We had a special booth over the press box and the vantage point was swell. However, as in the booth were Roy Steinfort, athletic publicity director; Harold Winn, kernel sports writer; Marvin Akers, basketball star; and John Ed Pearce, whom Kernel columnist. It was the activities of these question gentlemen that prevented an attempt at a capable coverage of the game.

Early in the first quarter, the West drove down to the East-23rd line, but Dick Danzarin of Owensboro fumbled and Harry Wheeler of Ashland recovered. This was the strongest threat made by the Westerners. Our view of the Western ball-carriers who led this surge was clouded by the hulking body of Steinfort, who was leaning in front of us to argue violently with Pearce.

The East made their only threat in the third stanza when they reached the West 20. Two first downs on passes put the Eastern All-Stars on the West 22. Odell Bryley of Corbin picked up two yards on a reverse (so Akers informed me) but Charley McCollum of Richmond lost eight when he was snared by Gene Banta of Paducah. Two incomplete passes gave the ball to the West.

At this point Akers was claiming that Winn was stepping on his injured ankle. Steinfort was draped across our front view, talking to friends in the next booth, and Pearce was trying to look superior to everyone else. So we didn't get much out of it.

We did manage to notice the good defensive playing of Frank Dexter of Danville and Tom Bales of Pikeville. Dexter was a play-backer who sneared numerous West offensive backs. Other defensive stars for the East were Wheeler and Bill Thomas of Henry Clay.

The Western defensive standouts were Banta, Ed Gray of Mayfield, Jack Thompson and George Miller of St. X. Banta made life miserable for the Eastern backs. Winn became so raucous in his applause for the Western squad that Akers and Pearce threatened to pitch him headlong onto Stoll field.

Outside of that we know nothing about the game that was sponsored by Okeita of the Shrine for the benefit of crippled children. If you want to know more, ask any of the 8000 people who saw it. We had to have a private booth that was shared by four other persons.
