

Fig. 127 Double Cottage, Midlothian, 1796. Some stone-faced double front with corrugated half-gabled thatched roof. Although designs of this type were produced and adopted, they appear to have had little effect on the country built stock. The single front plan being more generally adopted even towards the end of the nineteenth century. (Revised, 1880, from Robertson 1796, facing 100)