Students Want Standard Grade Gauge

O. K., Joe. So you failed a course last term. So what? You're taking your initial strokes in the swim of a new quarter, so you voice any complaints now.

Unsatisfactory departmental grading systems formed the basis for predominant complaints by students, a recent campus survey shows.

A student complained that one department took an average of all grades from all previous meetings in one course to determine the final letter grade for individuals taking that subject.

According to professors in the department to which the student referred, tests are objective. Specific answers must be given to the specific questions. Of course, there are slight variations in the lectures of different professors.

No average is taken in all sections of a course to determine the final grades for individual students, department heads state. However, there usually is a distribution of the grades for any course, including all sections of that course.

Another student complained bitterly that too much cheating on the part of classmates was responsible for the mark-downs for those who had really made some effort in courses.

is actually done. There is much talk of the furtive glance at another's test paper, but one student is not generally so confident in another's ability, he says.

Standardization of methods for grading is the thing that seems to be most in demand. Many students have stated that the grades "satisfactory" and "unsatisfactory" would meet this demand.

Another faculty member agreed with this policy for grading. However, he believed that a third factor would be involved and that that factor would be the grade "above average."

Investigate Rumors

Tempers flared recently when three women were dismissed from Patt hall because of their grades. Those who heard of the dismissal questioned the justification for such action, because they know other women who have not made their standings for two consecutive quarters.

Those who are angry have failed to learn the proper definitions for the terms "standing" and "passing grade." They have failed also to investigate the situation which has arisen.

In an institution where the system is so arranged that students may remain as long as they manage to pass twelve quarter hours and is even more lenient in a few cases where there are extenuating circumstances, little just criticism can be offered.

We act too quickly on impulse. An angry student should go to the source of his seeming grievance. There he probably will find the solution to nearly any problem which affronts him.

While we're on the subject of love, the most interesting thing to date is that of Norman Klein (ZEP) and Rita Greenwald (SDT). Norman received his pin and rushed right over to Jewell hall to give it to Rita without ever taking it out of the box.

Another almost historical pinning is that of Frank Hood, (Lamb-da Chi) who has been engaged to Louise Castel all winter and has recently given her his pin. (He was just initiated).

SI Vaughn (DDD) is still telling tales about her trek to New York City between quarters, as is Madge Johns (KKO).

Chuck Gorman (KA) squired French movie actress Maud Lamme through the big town while up for the tourney. He met her in Paris right after VE Day.

"Hook" Hockensmith (DTD) is rumored to be in a marrying mood. He was one of the chief "stander engineers" on the erection of the Golden Horseshoe.

Jim Ed Abel (Sig Ep) as the tale teller sets, is planning to head down the aisle in autumn with KAT Louise Jewell.

We've heard that... When a lady says no... She means maybe... She means yes... But when a lady says yes... She's no lady... We want to know what makes fall.

Three Staffs Assist Kernel

Thirty-two senior students in the Department of Journalism's "Influence of the Press" class will participate actively in the publication of the next nine editions of The Kernel, beginning with today's issue, according to a plan devised by Dr. Niel Plummer, head of the department.

Divided into three staffs of approximately 11 members each, the seniors have been assigned specific duties for the remainder of the quarter under the guidance of the regular executives of The Kernel.

The plan is devised to give senior students an opportunity to gain working experience in editing a newspaper and to broaden the service of The Kernel, Dr. Plummer said.

"Each edition is assigned to a particular staff which will be assisted by its successor, and the work of all will be criticized by the third or non-working staff," according to Dr. Plummer, who explained that "the active staff will work directly under the supervision of Kernel executives who will instruct, advise, and decide upon critical points."

Staff "A," assigned to today's issue, is composed of the following members:

Charles W. Harbaugh, editor; Garnett Gayle, managing editor, and Joann Gorham, news editor. Reporters are Jack Adams, Frances Anderson, Prentiss Beatty, Marjorie Blaisdell, Lewis Bonham, Samuel Brents, Martha Evans, and Joe Hancock.

Staff "B," which will be in charge of the April 11 edition, will be composed of the following:

Requiem Audience Thrilled By Inspired Interpretation

By J. J. Adams

An enthusiastic audience acclaimed the performance of Johannes Brahms' "Requiem Mass" Sunday afternoon and night in Memorial hall by the combined University mixed choir and symphony orchestra.

The "Requiem," presented for the first time on the University campus, seemed to inspire the performers into a smooth and sincere presentation. Under the capable direction of Dr. Alexander Capurso, head of the music department, and assisted by Miss Mildred S. Lewis and Arno Kiviniemi, music instructor, the choir, orchestra and soloists did a splendid job in presenting this very solemn and religious choral masterpiece. The tenor soloist who was apparent at the afternoon concert had disappeared when the choir and instrumentalists reassembled for the evening performance, and under Conductor Capurso's direction, the music and words seemed inspired and attained thrilling climaxes.

Many persons were unable to attend the afternoon performance, due to the limited seating capacity, and the auditorium was filled for the second time in the evening.

Brahms first presented his Requiem in Vienna in 1867. It is a literal translation from the Bible, in seven parts or movements, with the third and sixth parts combining a baritone solo and the fifth part, a soprano solo. The composer was only 33 years old when he completed this work, although it is said that he was ten years in finishing it.

Jean Kessler, the soprano soloist, revealed a wide range and power and ample tonal qualities in her performance. Robert Kuhlman handled the difficult baritone roles with intensity and clear diction. Vlem Sokol, the concert master, led the violinists brilliantly and dramatically.

Upon completion of the final and seventh movement the audience gave a warm and appreciative ovation to the choir, the orchestra, the soloists, the director, and his assistants. This marked the finale of the winter concerts, but a series of spring events has been arranged, which began with a violin recital last night, by Mr. Sokol. On April 16, a concert will be presented by the University band under the direction of Frank J. Prindl. On April 24, a program will be given by the University symphony orchestra, directed by Dr. Capurso. On Sunday, April 20, Mr. Kiviniemi, tenor, will be heard in a recital.

Publication Lists Commerce Students Who Seek Positions

Dr. E. E. Carter, head of the Commerce College's Employment association, has announced that the "Bargains in Brains" publication is expected to be out early next week.

"Bargains in Brains" is a commerce publication that aims to find positions for commerce majors and graduates. Published annually, it includes pictures of senior commerce and economics majors with a sketch of each individual.

The sketch covers all past employment, listing the name of the employer, the special ability or major of the student, his educational qualifications, club memberships and other affiliations, and a complete physical description.

The particular type of employment desired by the student is given so that the prospective employer may easily associate his needs with the student.

The 110 students included in the 1947 "Bargains in Brains" represent 40 different types of business occupations.

Dr. Carter stated that at present the demand is greatest for accountants, secretaries and workers in merchandising and marketing. "This year we have placed students in an area extending from Nashville to Cleveland," Dr. Carter said.

MUSING with Melton

By Baxter Melton, Kernel Sports Editor

Stoll field and surrounding areas present a busy scene these days. Over 100 riders are working out on the practice field, several track candidates are doing stints on the cinder paths, and almost 100 baseball aspirants are tossing the ball around on the nearby intramural field.

No super sign is needed to reveal that Kentucky is beginning its first real post-war effort in spring sports. If anything, an added emphasis is being placed on warm-weather athletics this year.

The focus of attention that centers around football in the fall and basketball in the winter months too often causes a lack of interest in other sports. This situation is particularly true here in Kentucky. The result has been average teams in these different activities, a natural aftermath.

Baseball has never played an important role in UK athletics so any college around the state. This is one of the biggest reasons why the Bluegrass state is not too well represented in the major leagues today. Many professional prospects are picked from collegiate mines. The East and Mid-West feed most of the diamond talent to organized baseball. In these areas the game of hickory and horseshoe enjoys much more all-around enthusiasm. Nothing is better than the work put into it, the accompanying interest and sideline chatter.

Intramural Deadline Extended For Entries

By O. C. Halvard

The deadline date for registration in intramural boxing and wrestling has been extended until 5 o'clock today. Bill McCubbin, intramural director, said the additional time was allowed in hopes that more contestants would sign-up in this first session of the two sports before the war.

In addition to individual prizes which will be awarded to the winner and runner-up in each weight division, a large trophy will be presented to the organization or fraternity receiving the most points in the two sports. Five points will be given for the winner and three for the runner-up in each division, with one point for the winner of each bout except the championship bout.

Preliminary fights in wrestling will be held Tuesday night at 7 o'clock in Alumni gym, and the opening rounds of the boxing will be held Wednesday night, as seven. The finals in each weight division will be held next Friday night. An admission fee of $25 per person will be charged for each night's fights.

Groups may enter as many persons in the two sports as they desire. Points will also be awarded towards the intramural over-all participation trophy. All contestants must obtain a health card from the intramural office and receive a physical check-up at the infirmary before they will be allowed to fight. Weight groups are divided into ten pound divisions, and competition is slim, so far in all groups. Registration fee is $25.

Kentucky Cue Team Third In National Tournament

Winfield Leathers—Kentucky's cue team was 12 points shy of its bid for the Gene Tunney trophy in the Collegiate National championship tournament, but its 394-point total was good enough to take the show position in a field of ten.

While Michigan's members were pocketing 406 balls of a possible 500 with hair-splitting accuracy to take the winner's laurels, the Minnesota Gophers were poking them in from all angles to cut down a half-time deficit of 10 tallies and narrow the victor's margin to only three points.

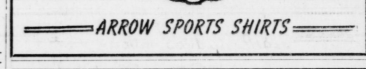

The ten teams comprising the tourney list were the winner and runner-up of each section and all it seems, to pick up the loose ends. Precision in plays was given an extra boost during the bad weather by blackboard drills and talks in the gym. Most conference schools have already completed spring rehearsals, and no one is more aware of the fact than Kentucky's coaching staff.

Each member of the team will receive a key emblematic of participation in the National tourney presented by the Billiards Association of America, a co-sponsor of the tourney with the Association of College Unions.
