A UNIVERSITY IS A PLACE; IT IS A SPIRIT . . . VIII

The Executive Committee of the University of Kentucky Alumni Association, speaking in one voice for all alumni and friends of the University, wishes to express its deep regret at the resignation of President Frank G. Dickey. Recognizing his greatness in all fields, we would leave to others the words of praise for every endeavor other than his relations with the alumni and particularly with the Alumni Association. The term of his administration has been the period of the greatest advance in the history of the Alumni Association in participation, giving, growth and understanding by its members. None of this would have been possible without the genuine interest, the deep understanding, the gentle leadership and the complete love of Frank Dickey. It was his firm belief that a great university must be generous in assistance to its alumni and ask from its alumni greatness in return. As an alumnus, he leaves us a tradition of personal greatness that we must pledge ourselves to follow.

Creativity in College Teaching

By PAUL CROWDUS

UK Public Relations Department

BURGEONING enrollment of students and the continuing effort of virtually all educational institutions to upgrade quality of instruction provide assurance that the next decade will bring sweeping change to the college teaching profession.

The seed for at least a part of the anticipated change may well have been sown recently at the University of Kentucky.

It was there that 20 young professors from Southern universities, each recommended by his dean for teaching competence and willingness to experiment, met to explore methods for stimulating more creativity among college students. The outcome is at this point impossible to assess, but UK faculty members who participated in the unique conference—first of its kind held in the southeast and perhaps in the entire United States—have reason to believe that it eventually may have far-reaching impact throughout their profession.

Here's the way Dr. Douglas W. Schwartz, the young and energetic anthropology professor who served as conference director, puts it: "In my opinion, at least 75 per cent of those who attended will no longer be able to go into their classrooms without being newly aware of the many factors which affect student learning and creativity."

What happened during the two-week session to produce this effect? First, the visiting teachers, along with six top flight consultants and the four UK staff members, retired to Carnahan House, the University conference center whose secluded facilities offered an atmosphere favorable to contemplation and productivity.

There they remained in a state of near isolation for the entire two weeks, hashing over informally, and sometimes heatedly, such topics as how to define and recognize creativity, personality traits and interests of creative individuals, creativity in the college teaching situation, qualities of the good teacher, and the process of creative learning.

GRANTS from the Carnegie Corporation and the Southern Regional Education Board enabled UK sponsors to obtain the services of six of the nation's foremost authorities in creativity research. They came to Lexington from Harvard, Yale, California, Chicago, Ohio State, and the Institute for Advanced Studies in the Behavioral Sciences.

Why were they called in? Dr. Schwartz explains it this way:

"One of the major objectives of college teaching is the development of creativity in students. But this objective presupposes that the teacher understands the elements of creativity, knows how best to promote it, and is skilled in the use of suitable means for determining the degree of success his techniques have provided.

"An examination of college teaching, on the other hand, leads to several conclusions. Although a considerable amount of research is in progress and has been carried out on creativity, the results of this work usually are not known to college teachers. Most college teachers have had little, if any, direct and significant preparation for teaching, particularly in reference to producing creativity.

"Since they are unaware of the research and have had no preparation in procedures, the extent to which creativity is being transmitted is unknown. From these observations it would follow that experimentation in the field of creativity and college teaching is needed to test those research findings that have already emerged, to build new knowledge among college teachers, and to develop more appropriate procedures for teaching and its evaluation."

PERHAPS because the men attending the conference represented such a wide variety of teaching fields, the conference did not produce a clearly defined method by which the professors, upon returning to their classrooms, will attempt to implement their findings.

Asked if his own teaching methods had changed as a result of the conference, Dr. Schwartz was quick to reply that they had. With the new semester barely under way at the time he was interviewed, he was unable to gauge results of the change but he believes they soon will be felt.

It is Dr. Schwartz's opinion that most college professors teach the way that they were taught. "I know that I have always done so," he says, explaining that his initial interest in a creative-teaching seminar was merely that of finding for himself whether recent research held the promise of newer and better teaching methods.

Because a conference of this type was, to his knowledge, available at no other place, he and a group of interested colleagues found themselves last spring mapping plans for one at UK. Other University staff members who had an equal role in planning and staging the events were Dr. A. D. Albright, executive vice president; Dr. Ernest McDaniel, director of the Testing Service, and Dr. J. W. Patterson, assistant professor of speech.

They and Dr. Leonard Ravitz, associate professor of education who attended the conference as a participant, now are serving as a team for evaluating the Carnahan House sessions.

IN the final analysis, says Dr. Schwartz, the conference's future influence on college teaching is likely to depend upon the core of support which each of the 20 professors is able to enlist on his own campus. He feels that the sustained interest of the UK participants indicates the conference did have strong initial influence, and that one lasting result could be the continuing evaluation of objectives and methods of college learning.

President Dickey Resigns; Will Direct Southern Association of Colleges

DR. Frank G. Dickey, fifth president of the University, has submitted his resignation effective next July 1 and will become director of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools which has its headquarters in Atlanta. The association is the accrediting agency for Southern colleges and high schools and his position is a new one created in a recent reorganization.

The resignation was submitted at the quarterly meeting of the Board of Trustees last September. At this meeting Governor Combs and Dr. Ralph J. Angelucci, Chairman of the board's executive committee, expressed deep regret following the announcement and also expressed to President Dickey the appreciation of the University and of the board for the outstanding contributions he has made to the institution during his six years as top administrative officer.

Dr. Dickey said he would be leaving the University in June with a "great deal of sadness". He has had a distinguished academic career and was the youngest president in UK's history. At the age of 32 he was appointed dean of the College of Education and was at that time the nation's youngest dean of a major university college. He was graduated from Transylvania College with highest honors and received his master's and doctoral degrees from the University.

During his term of office, the University has undergone tremendous growth. Academic achievement has been emphasized and the University has risen to a high ranking position among Southern colleges and universities. A $31,383,000 building program was started during his administration and the University now has a record enrollment. Off-campus centers have been expanded and the $27,000,000 Medical Center is now in operation.

PLANS for the selection of a new president have been announced by Governor Combs who named Dr. Angelucci as chairman of the screening committee which will consist of three other members of the Board of Trustees to be appointed by the governor plus four faculty members chosen by the University Faculty Council.

The four faculty members who will serve are: Dr. Thomas Clark, Prof. Paul Oberst, Dr. Stephen Diachun and Dr. Ralph Weaver.

At the time the KENTUCKY ALUMNUS went to press the governor had not appointed the three other members from the board who will serve on the screening committee.

Hall of Distinguished Alumni to Be Established in New Center

The University's first "Hall of Distinguished Alumni" will be established in the new Alumni House according to James A. Sutherland, President of the Alumni Association.

Purpose of the project is to honor outstanding former students who have brought credit to the University and state through academic or other achievements.

The first group of distinguished alumni will be selected in January and their portraits and biographies will be placed in a room set aside for that purpose in the new alumni building now being constructed at the corner of Rose Street and Euclid Avenue.

All alumni who have been governors of any state, United States senators, members of the Cabinet, and winners of Pulitzer and Nobel prizes will be included automatically.

Others who will be automatically admitted are college and university presidents whose institutions are accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

UK alumni and citizens of Kentucky may nominate others who either left school or were graduated at least 20 years ago. Other qualifications include a minimum of two years undergraduate work or an earned undergraduate or graduate degree at UK. The initial selection of 50 such distinguished alumni will be augmented each year with the selection of no more than five additional ones.

Alumni are invited to fill out the attached form and send it direct to the alumni office.

Top-Ranking High School Seniors To Be Honored

The top-ranking high school senior in each Kentucky high school will receive the newly established Alumni Association award for academic achievement at his or her high school graduation exercises.

The first annual awards will be made at the 1963 commencements. Recipients will be recommended by their high school principals.

In announcing the project, Judge James A. Sutherland, president of the Alumni Association, said "The alumni of the University want to express their appreciation and their pride in those young Kentuckians who achieve success in their scholastic program."

DR. CARL CABE, associate professor of economics in the College of Commerce, has been named state commissioner of labor.

New Book Written By Lexington Alumna

Mrs. Owen Lee (REBECCA SMITH, '16), Lexington, former head of the English Department at Texas Christian University, is the author of a new book, "Mary Austin Holley: A Biography" published this month by the University of Texas Press. Mrs. Holley was the wife of Dr. Horace Holley, first president of Transylvania University, and a cousin of Stephen F. Austin, founder of the first Texas colony. After her husband's death, Mrs. Holley moved to Texas and, as a writer, she helped attract support for Austin's colony and, later, for the annexation of Texas. The panorama of her life, described in vivid detail by Mrs. Lee, transports the reader to the tempestuous early years of the American Republic. The varied experiences of Mary Austin Holley and her "intuition for important people" bring the reader into the company of many of America's great and accomplished who lived from the late eighteenth century to the late 1840's.

A distinguished alumna of the University, Mrs. Lee is the recipient of numerous academic honors, a member of the Texas Institute of Letters, and is the author or co-author of several other books.

The Department of Radio, Television and Films will provide production, engineering and administrative facilities to the newly established Kentucky Educational Television Authority. Governor Combs has committed a million dollars in state capital improvement funds for the TV network. According to present plans, the state's educational TV facilities will consist of 11 ultra-high-frequency channels located in Lexington, Louisville, Hazard, Ashland, Bowling Green, Covington, Madisonville, Morehead, Murray, Pikeville, and Somerset.

JAMES W. WINE, '40, a native of Pikeville, has been named ambassador to the Republic of the Ivory Coast by President Kennedy. For the past 18 months he has served as Ambassador to Luxembourg.

The UK Library has acquired the private library of the late Jens Christian Bay, noted Illinois book collector and bibliographer. Especially outstanding in Western Americana, history of science, folklore, midwestern literature, and Danish literature, the collection makes the UK Library one of the nation's leading centers for research in all of these fields. Dr. Bay, a native of Denmark, spent his adult years in the United States and was librarian of the John Crerar Library in Chicago.

Of the 227 graduates turned out this year by the College of Engineering, 47 per cent have accepted engineering posts paying $550 or more per month. Some 1962 graduates are drawing well over $600 per month according to college officials. There are indications now that job opportunities for young engineers will be even better next year.

University Affairs

Blazer Hall Dedicated

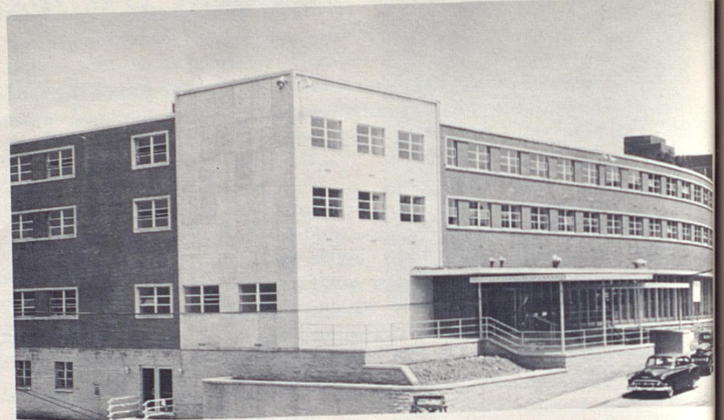

The newest and finest residence hall for women at the University of Kentucky was dedicated on October 14 to Mrs. Georgia M. Blazer, of Ashland, University benefactor and the only woman ever to serve as a member of the University's Board of Trustees.

Mrs. Blazer, wife of Paul G. Blazer, former president and chairman of the board of Ashland Oil and Refining Company, served the University as a board member for 22 years and she and her husband both have been staunch supporters of many of the University's most distinguished programs.

The new residence unit for women, which opened this fall, houses 185 women students who voluntarily subjected themselves to strict rules of study and quiet.

In an effort to encourage intensified academic achievement, new and different rules have been set up for the new hall. No phonographs will be permitted in rooms. Room doors must be kept closed to discourage visiting in the corridors. Quiet hours will be observed in the residence hall except for an hour at lunch time and from 4:30 to 7:00 p.m. daily.

President Frank G. Dickey presided at the dedicatory exercises on Sunday, October 14, and the Rev. Dudley Barksdale, chaplain of the University's Canterbury House, gave the invocation. E. B. Farris, the University's chief engineer, introduced those most concerned with the construction and decoration of Blazer Hall and Gay Klinglesmith, Louisville student and Blazer Hall resident, spoke for the women in Blazer Hall.

BLAZER HALL

Dr. Doris Seward, dean of women, expressed her appreciation, not only for the building but for its purpose and Mrs. Blazer responded by expressing her pleasure and appreciation to the University and the Board of Trustees for the hall having been named in her honor.

President Dickey gave Mrs. Blazer a gold key to Blazer Hall, following which her two granddaughters, daughters of Paul G. Blazer, Jr., UK '47, of Ashland, participated in the setting of the cornerstone.

The program was following by a reception and tour of the building.

UK Expecting 80 Pct. Hike In Enrollment

Enrollment at the University of Kentucky during the next eight years is expected to increase 80 per cent at the sophomore level and 100 per cent at the junior, senior and graduate levels.

That estimate is made by Dr. A. D. Albright, UK's executive vice president, who says that freshman enrollment will increase during the same period by only 40 per cent.

This trend already is evident, Dr. Albright declares, noting that most of this year's enrollment increase was found in the sophomore, junior and senior classes.

The continuing surge in the size of the student body is giving new direction to many phases of University planning.

Graduate programs will have to be strengthened, research expanded, large numbers of highly qualified faculty members obtained, and graduate students encouraged to do more independent study.

To illustrate the magnitude of the problem, it is estimated that at least 300 additional faculty members will be needed at the University by 1955.

UK Press Announces Fall Publications

The fall and winter announcements of the UK Press mark an important landmark for the Press. Eleven titles are planned compared with five for the same period last year. More significant, however, is the fact that ten of the eleven works have been written or edited by UK faculty members.

Books and monographs included are:

"John J. Crittenden: The Struggle for the Union," by A. D. Kirwan.

"Green Mount: A Virginia Plantation Family During the Civil War," edited by Clement Eaton

"Toward an Augustan Poetic: Edmund Waller's Reform of English Poetry," by Alexander Ward Alison (U. Mich.)

"Perpetuities Law in Action: Kentucky Case Law and the 1960 Reform Act," by Jesse Dukeminier, Jr.

"Senatorial Politics and Foreign Policy," by Malcolm Jewell

"Social Deviancy and Adolescent Personality," by John C. Ball

"The Lithographs of Ralston Crawford," by Richard B. Freeman

"Medical Behavioral Science: A Bibliography of Cultural Anthropology, Sociology, and Social Psychology in Medicine," by Marion Pearsall

"Pricing Decisions in Small Business," by Warren Haynes

"Accounting in Small Business Decisions," by James L. Gibson, Arlington State College, and W. Warren Haynes.

"Nine Seventeenth-Century Organ Transcriptions from the Operas of Lully," by Almonte C. Howell, Jr.

For further information write Mr. Bruce Denbo, Director, The University Press, Journalism Bldg., University of Kentucky, Lexington, Ky.

Dr. Seay Named AG College Dean

Dr. William A. Seay, '42, was appointed Dean of the College of Agriculture by the Board of Trustees this past September. He will also serve as Director of the Experiment Station and Director of the Extension Service.

A native of Charleston, Mo., he received his Master's degree from UK in 1948 and his doctoral degree from the University of Wisconsin in 1950. He joined the staff of the College of Agriculture in 1953 as associate professor in the agronomy department and has served in various other capacities. In 1961 he was named acting dean of the college.

In recommending his appointment to the board, President Dickey said that Dr. Seay had proven his ability to handle difficult problems of an administrative nature. He has had training in teaching and research and is familiar with every program of the College of Agriculture and Home Economics. He also stated that the College of Agriculture and Home Economics perhaps more than any other segment of a university such as ours reaches into every area of the state and region.

A distinguished alumnus of the University, Dr. Seay has also published more than 20 professional papers and has served on numerous civic and professional committees. A donor to the Alumni Century Fund, he is married to the former Lyda Short, '42, and they have three children.

Alumni Make Bequests To University And Alumni Association

Dr. Clarence DeWeese, former student and a Lexington physician for 40 years, died August 14th. His will provides for the eventual creation of a foundation in his name to help finance the education of young engineers. The foundation will be set up at the termination of a trust set up for his wife, Mrs. Jannie Smith DeWeese. Students benefiting from the trust are to be selected by a committee made up of University personnel. They must be residents of Kentucky and unable to support themselves in whole or in part. Dr. DeWeese created the fund because of his friendship and regard for Dean Daniel V. Terrell, emeritus dean of engineering.

Miss Bessie Horine, '30, a retired Lexington teacher, died August 14. Her entire $16,000 estate was left to the University.

Miss Pearl R. Hinesley, '09, city librarian at Roanoke, Va. for over 30 years, died September 2 at her home. She opened the first city library in 1921 and was well known for her support of groups interested in study. A portion of her estate has been given to the Scholarship Fund of the UK Alumni Association.

U.K. FUND GETS CHECK FROM AFRICA—Gov. Bert Combs (left), chairman of the University of Kentucky "25" Alumni Fund, receives $100 check, mailed by John du P. Oosthuizen, a 1912 U.K. graduate, from Capetown, South Africa. Handing Combs the contribution to the fund and letter from the contributor is Julian Rafter, legal aide in the Governor's office. Oosthuizen wrote that this year is the 50th anniversary of his graduation from U.K. He is director of companies for United Tobacco Companies (South), Ltd., Capetown. He lives on an estate, "Martello" near that city. Miss Helen King, director of the U.K. Alumni Association, said Oosthuizen had also made a $50 contribution to that organization.

DR. WILLIAM R. WILLARD, dean of the College of Medicine, has been selected by President Kennedy to head a 12-member Health Resources Advisory Committee. The committee will aid the federal government in emergency plans for allocation of national health resources and preparedness assignments of federal agencies.

UK students who borrow money to finance their education are, as a group, recording better classroom marks than their more affluent colleagues. A recent survey by Ordie Davis, secretary of the UK Student Loan Committee, disclosed that 303 borrowers have an overall grade point average of 2.7 equivalent to a letter grade of B-minus.

Since 1940 a total of 266 students have attended the UK College of Agriculture and Home Economics under scholarships awarded by the Sears Foundation. Goal of the Foundation's assistance program is to help outstanding students develop their potential for leadership in fields related to agriculture.

Alumni Club Notes

UK Students Attend Washington Seminar

The Student Congress of the University initiated a pilot project this past summer whereby selected students worked in various agencies of the federal government in Washington. Twelve UK students held responsible positions in The Pentagon, the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, and the Post Office Department. In addition to learning the operations of these various departments, the students also held meetings with former Senator Clements, Senator John Sherman Cooper, and Senator Thruston B. Morton.

President Kennedy held a White House Seminar to which the students were invited along with 8,000 other college students throughout the nation.

They were also the guests of the Washington UK Alumni Club for a luncheon meeting held in August. Miss Dianne McKaig, President, worked tirelessly to assist these students in finding summer jobs and assisted them in coordinating their activities. The Washington Seminar sessions were held once or twice a week. These sessions gave the students an opportunity to meet and discuss current events with government officials, business and labor leaders, and members of the press.

Mr. Paul Porter, prominent Washington attorney and an alumnus of the University, entertained the students and Pierre Salinger, press secretary, was host for a seminar session.

In commenting on the results of the program, Dave Redding, one of the students participating, said, "The summer was tremendously beneficial to us educationally, culturally, and socially. It broadened our horizons and gave depth to our concepts of service with the federal government."

Kentucky Basketball Outlook — 1962-63

By KEN KUHN
UK Sports Publicity Director

Boiled down to essentials, the outlook for Kentucky basketball in the coming season has to be classed as better than it was a year ago but it's going to take some doing for the '63 Wildcats to better the way that the '62 season turned out.

Last season's Kentuckians were supposed to be in for a long winter. Instead, the Ruppmen came out of nowhere to post the biggest surprise in collegiate basketball—surging to third place in the national polls, an amazing 23-3 record and hard-fought elimination in their bid for an unprecedented fifth NCAA title.

That proud record will be hard to come by again, almost all the experts agree. But master-builder Rupp—for whom most schools would trade an eight-foot center—has some ingredients that make him confident about the '63 campaign without presuming to predict the won-lost mark.

In contrast to a year ago, the Baron will have a cross section of his power returning. Two starters—All SEC guard Larry Pursiful and forward Carroll Burchett—will be missing along with five other lettermen, but three regulars (center Cotton Nash, forward Roy Roberts and guard Scotty Baesler) are due to return. Also in the fold will be letterman Ted Deeken, a reserve forward, and a host of sophs led by two top-flight prospects in 6-6½ center John Adams and 6-6 forward Don Rolfes.

Possibly the biggest problem (if it is one) will be where to play Nash, the Bayou Bomber who was tapped for All-American honors as a sophomore last season and paced the Southeastern Conference in scoring with a 23.4 average. Coach Rupp would like nothing better than to move his versatile ace to guard in order to make the fullest possible deployment of height that has been a plaguing weakness for the last two seasons. Nash, who operated mostly at forward in a sensational 1961-62 campaign, is a dependable ball handler blessed with surprising speed and agility plus a variety of shots that would allow his placement at guard.

Rounding out the lineup that Rupp is toying with would be 6-4 Roy Roberts, one of the nation's finest defensive men, at forward along with 6-6 frosh scoring leader Rolfes (21.1), Adams (6-6½) in the pivot, and Capt.-elect Baesler (5-11¼) teaming with Nash at guard.

If this starting combo with highly desirable overall height doesn't seem to work quite right, the nation's winningest cage mentor has a few other experiments in mind that would floor a unit generally following the pattern of traditional Rupp teams of the past with "little men" in the guard posts. Smallest of the "midgets" who might be tapped for action in such a situation is 5-10 soph Randy Embry. Although he posted only an 8.7 scoring average as a yearling, Embry saw action in only half the frosh games due to injury. He is regarded as a terrific outside shot and a great team man.

Not to be sold short in any juggling over a starting lineup and sure to see key action are juniors Deeken (6-3½ forward) and Charles Ishmael (6-4 guard); and sophs Terry Mobley (6-1¼ guard) and Sam Harper (6-2½ guard-forward) among others.

Aside from the personnel switching that Rupp must accomplish to field another representative team, the Baron enters his 33rd year at the Kentucky helm with the prospect of possibly the greatest competition in history from within the SEC bailiwick. Just about every one of the loop outfits are looking for good seasons and make no bones about their aims to knock out Kentucky and Rupp—who have occupied the throne room a disheartening 20 times since 1933. In addition, the Ruppmen will be called upon to cope with one of the strongest non-league lineups of foes in many a year. All told, the Wildcat card has opposition representing seven major conferences and top independent teams from the South, Midwest and Northwest.
