Western students upset by recommendations

By JAY BLANTON
Executive Editor
and THOMAS J. SULLIVAN
News Editor

BOWLING GREEN — A Western Kentucky University subcommittee is looking into President Kern Alexander's recommendations for more faculty involvement in the university's award-winning student newspaper and yearbook.

The subcommittee was formed last Tuesday when Alexander told an ad hoc committee reviewing student publications that faculty editors should be in charge of the student newspaper, the College Heights Herald, and yearbook, the Talisman.

The subcommittee will make its report in two weeks.

Although stopping short of saying that the president's actions stem from the paper's coverage, several involved with the Herald think that the paper's tense relationship with the president is related to the recommendations.

Carla Harris, editor of the Herald, said she "didn't want to second guess the president" and his recommendations, but "our aggressive coverage of the university... has some relation to this."

The paper, which is editorially independent, has covered Alexander's pending divorce and the controversy over establishing a community college in Glasgow.

However, Howard Bailey, dean of student life at WKU, said implications of Alexander being biased by

"The thing that bothers me the most (is that) President Alexander has such little knowledge about what goes on over here now."

Carla Harris, editor

coverage of his administration are wrong.

"It's bush league," said Bailey, who served on the ad hoc committee and is serving on the subcommittee.

"It's a smut campaign."

Alexander formed the ad hoc committee last fall to review the Office of Student Publications — which is in charge of the Herald and Talisman — and its place in the University structure.

The committee recommended minor changes to the president, including renaming the publications office, Student Publications and adding more members to the publications advisory committee. But Alexander had additional recommendations that he wants to be implemented by next semester.

Specifically, Alexander recommended that more faculty and administrators be named to the publications committee, which would be responsible for naming faculty editors who would then select student

The publications office, under the president's recommendations, would be placed under the Office of Academic Affairs. Publications currently reports to the dean of Potter College.

In addition, Alexander recommended that students receive academic credit for working on the newspaper.

Alexander told the Herald last week that his recommendations are not an attempt to control the newspaper, but to provide a "stronger organization."

"It couldn't limit their independence if we're getting more people involved," Alexander told the Herald.

The Kernel could not reach Alexander for comment last night.

Those involved with the Herald insist that the organization is strong enough, and that Alexander's recommendations are detrimental to the paper.

Harris said that the ad hoc committee's recommendations for minor changes basically were telling the president that "if it ain't broke don't fix it."

Alexander's recommendations show a "definite lack of understanding" of the student newspaper, Harris said.

Married students at UK face many unique problems

By LISA BURKE
Contributing Writer

Marriage. The mere thought of it terrifies some, but most of us will take the plunge sooner or later. Most will wait until they graduate, but for some, matrimony and college life go hand in hand.

The registrar's office reports that 251 of the 22,004 students enrolled at UK for the Fall 1987 semester are married, 621 stated they were single and about 21,000 did not respond to the question.

According to Gregory Brock, chairman of the family studies department, many differences exist between married and unmarried students.

"They tend to be older, so they may not have a lot in common with other students. They have a lot of things going on in their lives," said Brock.

Brock said the biggest problem for married students is staying close because college tends to change people, their views and sometimes their values.

"There's a good likelihood they'll grow apart," he said. "It's difficult for a married couple to keep a shared set of values." He said that communication is the key to maintaining a good relationship; it is vital that a married couple spend time together discussing things that are important to them.

Unfortunately, time is a rare commodity for many married students. Debbie Lemmon, a special education senior, has been married for 2½ years. She is a full-time UK student and works three different jobs.

"There's always something else to be done instead of homework," said Lemmon. But rent must be paid and Lemmon says they have to budget carefully.

Lack of money is one of those problems that plagues both married and single students. But married students often feel additional pressure. Often, the other couples they associate with are not in school, and may have more money. This can cause depression, said Brock.

If the couple has children it presents an even bigger problem. Affordable day-care can be hard to find.

Angela Taylor, a senior, has been married six years and has a 2-year-old son. Taylor's mother-in-law watches the child while Taylor attends night classes.

During the day while her husband is at work, Taylor takes care of her son so study time is hard to find.

"He's 2, and trying to study during the day is hard. I have to put him to sleep before I can study," she said.

Gregory Brock, family studies

Between doing the laundry, grocery shopping, cooking, cleaning, entertaining and, perhaps, working outside the home, married couples in school may have less time to devote to their relationship than couples not in school.

But not all married students find time management a problem. Julie Wright, a senior, has been married 3½ years. Her husband, Phil, is an engineer and she said this semester is the first time she has not had to work outside the home.

"My husband is very supportive," said Wright. "He does all the housework."

Wright said she feels strange being a married student among so many single students. Often, when she sits in a class for the first time,

Ashland Oil environmental record dirty

Associated Press

ASHLAND — Ashland Oil Inc.'s record on environmental protection is marred by more than $2 million in fines in Kentucky, where one official said the company is only now beginning to improve its performance.

More than $1.7 million of those penalties have been levied against Ashland's largest refinery, located in Caltletsburg, according to a report published in yesterday's edition of The (Louisville) Courier-Journal. The newspaper began investigating Ashland's environmental record following the January collapse of an Ashland tank near Pittsburgh that sent 750,000 gallons of fuel oil into two rivers.

The fines include the largest ever paid to state environmental officials, the largest fine for water-pollution violations in the Southeast, and what at the time was the largest fine nationally for putting too much lead in gasoline.

That record speaks for itself, said Jim Wilburn, deputy director of air, pesticides and toxic materials in the federal Environmental Protection Agency's Atlanta office.

"They've had problems with practically all the environmental areas we have," Wilburn said of the Caltletsburg refinery.

Ashland has a good environmental record at some sites in its operations, which stretch from California to Nigeria.

The company, which has annual sales of more than $7 billion, has complied fully with environmental regulations at many sites. Outside Kentucky, officials describe Ashland as generally mindful of its responsibilities and occasionally a leader in dealing with potential pollution.

In Kentucky, officials describe a new commitment to prevent unnecessary pollution and remedy existing problems.

"We've been substantially pleased" with Ashland's record in recent months, said Charles Martin, deputy secretary of the state Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet.

Ashland is the nation's 54th-largest industrial company and the largest corporation based in Kentucky. It is the 11th-largest oil company and the largest independent refinery — meaning that it buys, rather than drills for, most of its crude oil.

The company has acknowledged past problems and Ashland officials now say they have been working hard to keep extremely complex facilities in step with changing environmental rules.

"To a certain extent, the image is based on what has happened in the past. We recognize that," said Bruce Churton, an executive assistant for Ashland Petroleum Co., the firm's largest division. "We're working very hard on solving the problems, being in compliance, and the image will take care of itself."

On the basis of penalties, however, Ashland is not the nation's worst polluter. Chevron paid $6 million in fines for air pollution in 1985 and $1.5 million for water pollution in January. Mobil paid $2 million for water pollution in 1982.

Ashland's Caltletsburg refinery has been criticized recently by residents of the eastern Kentucky town and those in neighboring Kenova, W. Va.

Residents say emissions from the plant are making them ill and have also complained about property damage due to dust.

The state-record $250,000 fine last summer resolved 130 violations of air pollution regulations over four years at the refinery. The federal government's $762,500 fine for water pollution involved dozens of instances in which Ashland poured as much as 114 times the allowed amount of a pollutant into the Big Sandy River.

The Jan. 2 tank collapse near Pittsburgh sent fuel oil into the Monongahela and Ohio rivers and threatened water supplies in four states. It displayed a remarkable series of failures and disregard for environmental safeguards, officials say. For example, Ashland had reconstructed a 40-year-old tank and apparently ignored a report of defective welds before cutting the tank apart at different points and reassembling it.

Early part of his term new experience for gov.

By MARK R. CHELLIGREN
Associated Press

FRANKFORT — A governor may be right, a governor may be wrong. But a governor should never be in doubt. A crisis of confidence in a governor leads inexorably to a crisis of leadership, the euphemism political scientists and pundits use to describe a politician who could no longer get elected dog catcher.

Gov. Wallace Wilkinson has never suffered one of these crises, but it is becoming increasingly apparent he is going through some on-the-job training in government that has upset his equilibrium just a bit.

The distress is understandable. Though Wilkinson has been around politics for a few years, his cam-ampaign for governor was the first time he sought public office.

And his experience has been in business, most notably the kinds of businesses where individual initiative counts for almost everything.

This business of governing, particularly in such an unruly state as Kentucky, is something else again. Compromise is just the beginning. Much time must be spent massaging wounded egos and making new allies, if not friends.

Kentucky's governor must also

Candidates to face off in debates this week

Staff reports

Students will get a chance to hear how the candidates for the Student Government Association executive branch stand on the issues this week in two debates sponsored by the Kentucky Kernel and Omicron Delta Kappa.

Vice president candidates Ken Mattingly and Leah McCain will discuss the issues at 8:30 Tuesday night in 105 Classroom Building.

Mattingly, an English senior from Springfield, Ky., is a senator at large and current president pro tem of the SGA senate. He is running with presidential candidate Susan Bridges.

McCain, a social work junior from Owensboro, is a first-term senator at large and is running with David Botkins.

At 8:30 Wednesday night in 118 Classroom Building, the three presidential candidates will talk about their platforms.

Bridges, who is currently senior vice president, is a mathematics junior from Lexington; Botkins, a two-term senator at large, is a graduate student from Ashland; and James Rose, who is running alone, is a two-term senator at large and business senior from Shelbyville.

Each candidate will have a five-minute opening statement. The candidates will then answer a series of questions asked by three panelists from the Kernel. Each candidate will be allowed a three-minute closing statement.

CAMPUS CALENDAR

Information on this calendar of events is collected and coordinated through the Student Center Activities Office, 203/204 Student Center, University of Kentucky. The information is published as supplied by the on-campus sponsor, with editorial clarity of expression. For student organizations or University departments to make entries on the calendar, a Campus Calendar form must be filled out and returned to the Student Activities Office.
 Deadline: Forms will be accepted no later than the Monday preceding the publication date.

'March Madness' can drive you mad

I'm saturated! In the period of one week I've watched 13 live basketball games — nine college and four high school.

And who knows how many games I have seen on TV. It's what they call March Madness. A basketball junkie's dream.

It's tournament time. First there's the conference races and the league tournaments. Then, for the lucky not so few, it's on to the national tournaments.

Basketball fans have as many games to watch as the Pope has bishops; the president has congressmen; and John "Wad" Holmes had ... well maybe not that many.

There have already been over a hundred opening tip-offs, as many final buzzers; and too many TV time-outs to count.

There's the NIT, the NAIA, the NCAA and the NCBWA (the Nobody Cares But We'll Play It Anyway).

There have been hundreds of slam dunks, thousands of jumpers and millions of fast breaks — and that's only counting Loyola Marymount.

CBS is televising the late games live if your roundball palate hasn't been satisfied by the afternoon games.

And if you can't stay awake, ESPN begins with the tape-delayed showing of the previous night's games around 8 a.m. Then the live coverage begins around noon.

In 1974, only 23 hours of the NCAA tournament were televised. But no longer is there this cruelty to hoops fans.

Now you can see close to 23 hours in one day. No chance of starving from lack of hoops.

There have already been the great matchups and the greatest upsets. And there's more to come. Much more.

Richmond knocked off Indiana. Murray State knocked off North Carolina State. Rhode Island knocked off Syracuse.

Georgetown squeaked past LSU then was dropped by Temple. And as the teams advance, the matchups become greater, the upsets become tougher.

Late surge lifts UK past Terps, 90-81

By TODD JONES
Sports Editor

CINCINNATI — Maryland guard Keith Gatlin ripped a three-point bomb, and a nervous buzz spread through the blue-clad Riverfront Coliseum crowd of 16,562.

Just 3:08 remained yesterday and the favored Kentucky Wildcats found themselves tied with the pesky Terrapins at 76.

"Everyone was still on pins and needles because it was anybody's game at that point," Maryland coach Bob Wade said.

Such are the times that try men's souls. Or, make them peer deep into their souls and try harder. Kentucky did just that. And because the Cats did not hide, the Terrapins went home.

"We knew there was going to be no tomorrow," UK forward Winston Bennett said.

"It was or die time," guard Ed Davender said. "Experience helps. We've been in that situation so much."

It showed. Kentucky held the ship together and outscored Maryland 14-5 down the stretch to claim a 90-81 NCAA Tournament victory.

The ninth consecutive win improved the Cats to 27-5 and propelled them into the Sweet 16. It marks the fifth regional appearance for UK in the past six years and the 22nd in the storied history of Kentucky basketball.

Maryland ended its season at 18-16. The Kentucky victory sets up a battle of Wildcats in the Southeast semifinals Thursday at Birmingham, Ala. Villanova earned the right to meet UK by erasing a seven-point deficit in the final 100 seconds to upset Illinois, 66-63.

Unlike Illinois, Kentucky did not collapse at crunch time. Bennett made sure of that.

In the final three minutes, Bennett hit the go-ahead bucket, grabbed three rebounds, added a slam dunk and made the game-turning steal.

Bennett's heroics were needed because Maryland would not roll over and die. UK took a 76-70 lead with 3:58 to play when Davender drilled a leaper from 10 feet.

Tejaron McCoy pulled the Terrapins within three with his third three-pointer of the day. After a Rex Chapman turnover, Gatlin nailed his trey and the worried murmur spread through the Coliseum. Time-out UK.

"I thought we were getting a little fatigued and we wanted to regroup," Kentucky coach Eddie Sutton said.

"They ran a screen for Lewis and I was kind of lost out there," Bennett said. "I knew I'd be the one if trouble if he scored so I tried to make up for it with hustle."

"I felt I got the ball clean. I'm not going to tell you I fouled him," Wade said. He thought the no-foul call was foul.

"We were ready to tie the game but then there was that controversial play," he said.

If the pivotal play was indeed controversial, none of the Wildcats were expressing sympathy.

"There's a lot of those in any ballgame," Sutton said. "That's why you need a few lucky breaks and calls to stay in this tournament."

Chapman made it UK's game to lose after Bennett's steal. The sophomore guard buried a jumper from the side to put the Cats up 90-76.

Kentucky held on by cashing in eight of eight free throws. Davender hit the final six.

Davender and Chapman again led the way with 23 points apiece. In two games in Cincinnati, the duo combined for 99 points.

In the first half, it didn't seem like the dynamic guard play would be the story for Kentucky. Chapman waded through a horrendous shooting half. He hit just one of six from the field and one of six from the free throw line.

"I really didn't feel like I was in the game," Chapman said. "I was frustrating. I got my head down at halftime."

A pep talk from Davender got Chapman's head up and his shot falling down.

Maryland's Tony Massenburg (25) and Keith Gatlin (13) battle for a rebound in yesterday's Southeast regional game. Manuel had 13 points in the 90-81 Wildcat victory.

UK, U of L vie for No. 1 in Southeast

AP and Staff reports
A "Dream Game" of unimaginable proportions is brewing in the Southeast regional.

With Louisville's 97-76 win over Young University Saturday and UK's 90-81 win over Maryland yesterday, there's a chance that the two Kentucky powers may face off for the Regional crown.

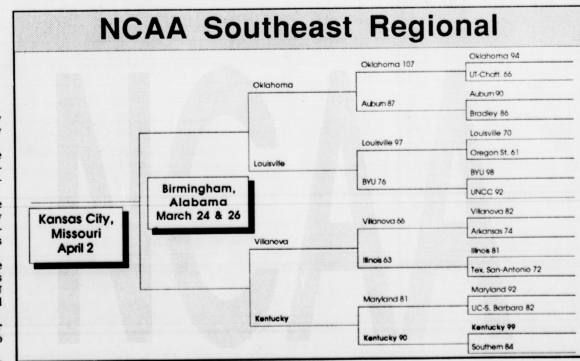

But first Louisville, which downed Oregon State, 70-61, in the tournament's first round, must get past No. 4 Oklahoma and UK must eliminate Villanova.

"Defense." Auburn coach Sonny Smith said. "That's the way they beat us."

The Sooners' pressure forced the Tigers into 25 turnovers and contributed to Auburn's 34 percent shooting.

Despite a commanding 57-39 edge in rebounding, Auburn couldn't stop the Sooners, who topped the 100-point mark for the 19th time this season.

Louisville, the Metro Conference champion, run-and-gunned its way past a 12-2 deficit against BYU and used a 10-0 burst in the final 2:34 to build a 51-42 halftime lead.

downed Texas San-Antonio 81-72 to advance.

UK prevailed in a close one against Maryland. The Cats widened the gap in the game's closing minutes to record a closer-than-tad score 90-81 over the Terps.

Making it to the final sixteen in the Midwest region were Purdue, who downed Memphis State, and Kansas State, who got past DePaul.

Kansas outlasted upstart Murray State and Vanderbilt recorded a second-round win over Pittsburgh in overtime to also advance.

Indiana and Georgia Tech en route to the final sixteen.

They will be joined by Rhode Island, who downed Syracuse, and Atlantic Coast Conference tournament champion Duke.

Cats defeat LSU, snap losing streak

Staff reports

Infielder Vince Castaldo's two-out two-run double in the top of the 11th inning gave UK a 3-1 win over LSU yesterday and snapped a six-game losing streak.

The Wildcats rose to 8-8 overall and LSU fell to 15-4 with the win, the final game of a three-game series.

UK broke the six-inning scoring drought for both teams in the top of the seventh. Center fielder Chris Estep reached on an infield single when he beat out a grounder to short.

UK first baseman John Marshall drove in the game's first run in the seventh inning when he doubled to left center to score Estep. Marshall was cut down trying to stretch his hit into a triple.

LSU tied the score in its half of the seventh on a lead-off double and a two-out single.

UK starter Tom Deller pitched no-hit ball for the first six innings until LSU third baseman Rich Basquez singled to right field.

Deller yielded three hits and one run in six and two-thirds innings. The junior right-hander struck out four.

Bat Cats lose Coleman

suffered a fractured bone in the middle finger of his pitching hand when hit by a line drive off the bat of Oklahoma St. shortstop Monty Fariss in the sixth inning of a 4-0 win over the Cats.

"The sun sets right over the stadium behind home plate," UK coach Keith Madison said. "Matt said he never saw the ball until it hit him."

Coleman, who was 10-2 and a second-team All-Southeastern Conference selection last season, may miss the rest of the year, Madison said.

The UK team lost two games to Oklahoma St. over the break. UK also was defeated by Oral Roberts and Stephen F. Foster University.

Women's tennis team wins 4

The UK women's tennis team went on the road for four matches over spring break and came back with four wins.

The eighth-ranked UK team, now 10-4 on the season, downed Texas A&M 8-1, Trinity 5-4, Southern Methodist University 5-4 and Texas Christian 8-1.

SMU is the nation's seventh-ranked team and beat UK last year at home, 5-4.

The women's team will return home next Saturday and will face unranked Ole Miss at UK's Boone Center at 11 a.m.

Men's team heads west

The ninth-ranked UK men's tennis team, which did not play over the break, will travel to California and will play No. 8 UCLA today.

The men's team, led by All-Americans Greg Van Emburgh and Rich Benson, will then take on No. 5 Pepperdine at Malibu.

Pepperdine is led by the nation's two top-ranked singles players in Robby Weiss and Andrew Sznajder.

Golfers compete at Tampa

The UK men's golf team competed in the Pepsi-Budweiser USF Classic at Tampa, Fla., this weekend.

The UK squad shot a 16-over-par 304 in yesterday's final round and finished eighth among the 14 schools competing.

The Cats finished one stroke back of sixth-place South Florida and Memphis State, who each fired 911 for the three-day event.

The University of Virginia won the tournament with a three-day total of 891. Finishing second was Kansas.

CLAY OWEN/Kentucky Staff

UK catcher Robbie Buchanan celebrates with teammates after a game at Shively Field earlier this spring. The Wildcats will return home March 25 for a 4 p.m. game against Youngstown State.

Study might tell value of state's minable coal

Associated Press

A three-year study to learn what percentage of eastern Kentucky's 55 billion tons of coal can be mined also could help determine the value of such coal, according to a Kentucky Geological Survey official. Jim Cobb, the project's director, says the federally-funded survey would not determine the economic feasibility of mining the coal. Companies that mine coal will have to make those judgments based on production costs, coal prices and other factors, he said. The value of unmined coal surfaced again March 3 when Kentucky's Supreme Court ruled that it must be taxed at the same rate as other real estate. The General Assembly is considering a bill that would require the Revenue Cabinet to handle the assessment.

A state Legislative Research Commission study assessed the value of unmined coal at 16 cents a ton, while a study by Kentuckians for the Commonwealth, which favors the tax, assessed the value of unmined coal at 50 cents a ton. Assessing the value at the lower level would save the coal industry millions of dollars annually. Cobb said that once the state and local governments know how much coal is left, they can plan strategies for attracting other industries. "We've already mined out the best of the best," Cobb said. "We're mining the worst of the best. Soon we'll be mining the best of the worst." "The key question is, do we have at least one generation — 20 years of high-level, cost-effective mining left," he said. "We need to know at least a generation in advance when it will become too costly to produce, so we can prepare for the economic changes that will result." About 10 billion tons of coal has been mined in Kentucky since the turn of the century, Cobb said. In addition to the 55 billion tons left in eastern Kentucky, there are 38 billion tons in western Kentucky, he said. Cobb said he was confident that the Kentucky Geological Survey would receive a federal grant to set up a study of western Kentucky coal reserves. A $655,000 grant from the U.S. Geological Survey will pay for the first three years of the study of eastern Kentucky coal reserves.

After the federal money runs out, Cobb said, the Kentucky Geological Survey will continue to refine its estimate of unmined coal tonnage. He said that process could take up to 12 additional years. Determining the amount of minable coal actually began with a 20-year study of Kentucky's geology, Cobb said. That study determined where the state's coalfields were located. That was followed by an eight-year, $2 million study that was completed by the Kentucky Geological Survey in 1983. That study determined the amount of unmined coal in Kentucky. Cobb said the thousands of maps produced in the eight-year study would be combined with computer information from various state agencies to determine how much of the coal can be mined. A pilot study of some Pike County coal reserves has indicated that about two-thirds of it cannot be mined, he said. But determining the value of unmined coal will be difficult, he said.

The study's information could be used by mining companies in exploring for unmined coal, Cobb said.

"We've already mined out the best of the best. We're mining the worst of the best. Soon we'll be mining the best of the worst."

project director

Clinton wants Super Tuesday split

Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, ARK. — Some of Gov. Bill Clinton's enthusiasm for the Super Tuesday 20-state contest held on March 8 has apparently abated. Instead of such a large-scale Super Tuesday, Clinton suggested smaller seven- or eight-state primary elections, separated by enough time for candidates to really go into the states and get to know the people and the issues. A lot of the campaigning leading up to the March 8 voting, the governor said in his weekly radio address on Saturday, consisted of airport news conferences and television advertising. Thus, Clinton said, well-funded candidates benefited unfairly. He said, though, that Super Tuesday accomplished some goals that had been his reasons for supporting the massive regional effort, including bringing candidates to the South and giving the region more influence in the nominating process.

Sandinistas preparing for peace talks

By BRYNA BRENNAN
Associated Press

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — The Sandinista government yesterday protested attacks on Sandinista targets by Honduran forces and prepared for its first direct cease-fire talks with Contra rebels.

Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, the mediator in previous talks and an observer to today's discussions, expressed a hint of pessimism about their outcome.

"I see the situation as quite complicated," he said during yesterday's homily. "It is very difficult to reconcile two things that are completely opposite."

The negotiations were scheduled for the southern border post of Sapoá, 50 miles south of the capital near the Costa Rican border.

The Honduran bombings Thursday and Saturday along the isolated northern border were aimed at retaliating for an alleged Sandinista troop incursion last week into Honduras to chase Contra rebels. There were no reported casualties in the air attacks.

"The Nicaraguan troops are now in Nicaraguan territory in the border area," Deputy Foreign Minister Victor Hugo Tinoco said at a news conference yesterday, suggesting that the army had crossed the border. "We can't retreat from the border area, because we can't abandon our right to defend our national territory."

He denied reports that the Sandinista troops remained inside the Honduran territory, calling them a lie by the Reagan administration "to obtain more money for the Contras."

The rebels have been fighting the government since November of 1981 in a conflict that has killed more than 40,000 people. The cease-fire talks are included in a regional peace plan signed in August by the presidents of Nicaragua, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Costa Rica. The pact calls for amnesty, democratic reforms and an end to support for insurgencies.

Tinoco said today's talks will center on finding a way for the rebels to lay down their arms.

The government delegation will be headed by the nation's top military leader, Gen. Humberto Ortega, brother of President Daniel Ortega.

The Contras say the talks should include political issues. Their top delegate will be the rebel's leading political leader, Adolfo Calero.

The Sandinista newspaper Barriada repeated its call yesterday for Nicaraguans to maintain a state of alert in the face of Honduran bombs and American troops.

"The way the Honduran government borrows Yankee planes to provoke an incident could serve as a pretext for a direct invasion," the paper said in an editorial.

•Married students

she looks around to see how many other students are married. "You feel like you're 10 years older," she said.

But along with the problems married students have, there are also rewards. Some married students mentioned emotional support as one of the advantages of being married. Not having to worry about dating was another.

The Early Childhood Laboratory is one of several services that assist married students. It is located in the basement of Erikson Hall and is open to all children of UK students, faculty and the community.

The laboratory has an infant/toddler day-care program and various pre-school programs. An evening program is also available for students who take night classes. The evening program is open Monday through Thursday from 5:30 to 9:30.

Kim Townley, director of the Early Childhood Laboratory, said they were serving about 100 families at this time, and that all the programs offered are educational. For more information on the various programs and fees, students can call 257-1220.

Another service offered to UK students is personal counseling. This service is offered free of charge by the Counseling Center located at 301 Frazer Hall. A spokeswoman for the center said they often work with married couples. To make an appointment, students can call 257-5701.

Married students say they are often asked whether they feel as though they are missing out on college life. But students interviewed say they are not missing out on anything, but getting more out of it. "Married students seem to be more serious," said Wright. And having a stable relationship can be a definite asset.

Kean to meet with Bush in New Jersey

Associated Press

TRENTON, N.J. — Gov. Thomas Kean scheduled a meeting for today with Vice President George Bush for the Republican presidential nomination, prompting speculation that an endorsement could be in the offing.

The meeting was arranged at the request of Bush's campaign, said Carl Golden, spokesman for Kean. Golden would not comment on whether Kean would endorse Bush.

Joseph "Bo" Sullivan, the chairman of a New Jersey fund-raising group backing Bush, said it was unlikely Bush would meet with Kean in the heat of the primary campaign unless the governor was prepared to back his presidential campaign.

"The time is ripe for everyone to make an endorsement. I don't see how anyone can beat Bush at this point," Sullivan said.

Kean has remained uncommitted to any of the candidates in the presidential primary.

At least 5 injured in spring break disturbance

Associated Press

PORT ARANSAS, Texas — A disturbance erupted late Saturday among more than 1,000 students on spring break, leaving at least three people with stab wounds and two police officers with injuries, authorities said.

"It's an all-out riot," said Anthony Lloyd, a Coast Guard spokesman in Port Aransas. "They are setting cars on fire. People are hurt on the beach."

The disturbance began when a motorist hit a girl on the beach at this popular Gulf Coast spot and tried to leave the scene, said Corpus Christi Department of Public Safety officer A.G. Michniak.

"There was a hit-and-run accident on the beach that injured one," Michniak said. "The crowd stopped the car, took out the occupants and tipped it over and burned it."

"They stomped the car, broke all the glass out of it and flipped it over," said Tom Frazier, 22, a student at the University of Texas.

At least eight people were arrested, Michniak said.

More than 100 law enforcement officers from South Texas and the Coast Guard, using two helicopters and tear gas, responded to the disturbance, the Corpus Christi Caller Times reported.

Michniak estimated the crowd on the beach at about 3,000, while Lloyd put it at about 1,000. Lloyd said most of the students appeared to be high-school age.

Law enforcement officials in Port Aransas said ambulances were unable to get through the crowd to assist the injured.

"There are injuries, but we're unable to pull them out," said a Port Aransas police dispatcher, who did not wish to be identified.

Paul Guerra of Port Aransas said he witnessed a stabbing as he left the beach.

"I left," Guerra said. "I hate to say it, but I was afraid for my life."

Michniak said the DPS received the first call at 11:35 p.m. and declared the disturbance under control at 2:40 a.m. Sunday.

learn how to deal with a General Assembly that, if not independent, is certainly fractious.

Wilkinson is not used to doing those things and is certainly not used to doing them in public. Furthermore, he is not accustomed to losing.

He has had both experiences recently, and his reactions have varied.

In a period of just a few weeks, Wilkinson has resorted to most of the dodges that politicians use when things aren't going their way.

First, Wilkinson blamed the news media. This one is the easiest and can be accomplished by denying the report entirely, claiming an event or comment was taken out of context or charging that the news organization is out to get you.

Some of the nation's most memorable leaders used all of the above. Former President Richard Nixon comes to mind.

Another dodge is also a Nixon favorite. He used it to put the proper spin on the Vietnam War. The practice is simply to declare victory and go home.

Budget Director Kevin Hable demonstrated that method of dealing with political defeat when the House Appropriations and Revenue Committee junked a sizeable chunk of the initiatives Wilkinson sought in the budget.

Hable explained the budget still emphasized education, economic development and human services, the same priorities set by Wilkinson.

Last week, Wilkinson found himself in another unpleasant situation. By all accounts, the governor has decided to spend a good deal of his political capital to get a constitutional amendment on the ballot that would let him succeed himself.

For whatever reason, Wilkinson also wants that amendment "clean," so that it raises no other issues than succession for the state officers.

Members of the state Senate don't share that feeling and want to make sure that if succession gets on the ballot, so does a scheme to let legislators serve longer terms.

Rumors flew about a breakfast meeting between Wilkinson and legislative leaders where the subject was discussed.

There were reports that Wilkinson promised political retribution if Senate President John "Eck" Rose didn't cooperate. There were even whispers that Wilkinson cussed during a later telephone call to Rose.

A subdued Wilkinson denied the reports, but the damage was clearly done.

Former Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. faced a similar scandal during his first session of the General Assembly after he reportedly used bad words in reference to a particular state senator.

Brown chided reporters for raising the subject in public. It was, he said, just "man talk."

Maybe Wilkinson could use that one, too.

Mellencamp lifts crowd to its feet

By ERIK REECE
Arts Editor

When John Cougar Mellencamp arrived at Rupp Arena last Friday night, he left behind his sermons and came packing his dancing shoes.

The audience had apparently arrived in the same state of mind. On his way home from his national tour, Mellencamp was practically in his backyard in Rupp Arena. He didn't disappoint friends and family (including Mellencamp's mother) who had "crossed the Ohio" to see the troubadour who has brought their small-town pleasures to life. From the initial guitar rally, Mellencamp brought his audience to its feet and kept it there. There were no moments of slower reminiscing and acoustic strumming as on the Scarecrow tour of two years ago.

Storytelling aside, Mellencamp sustained 2½ hours of visceral emotion. He ran his songs through two driving sets before returning shoeless for the encores that turned an electric concert into a '60s sock hop.

Mellencamp delivered spiced-up versions of every song from his current The Lonesome Jubilee album before plucking some choice cuts from former albums.

"Rain on the Scarecrow" was introduced as a song "for people who care to think about such things." From the response, one would think 18,000 people care to think about such things, at least while slightly inebriated. Mellencamp also incorporated nuggets of priceless, timeless songs from the '60s such as an impromptu version of Van Morrison's "Brown Eyed Girl," which Mellencamp said the band had never played before live. A medley that began with "Hand to Hold on To," followed with Sam Cooke's "Chain Gang" (the crowd provided the background grunts) and Morrison's "Gloria."

The last song and the third encore was a surprising version of Dylan's "Like a Rolling Stone." Never mind that one of Mellencamp's backup singers forgot the words of her solo, the nearly fail-proof song was light-hearted and fun.

Political conscience plagues reggae singer, Ziggy Marley

By HILLEL ITALIE
Associated Press

NEW YORK — At the age of 19, reggae artist Ziggy Marley has seen enough of the world to know he wants to change it.

"I am not blind," Marley says. "Even in Jamaica, injustice happened. It happened all over the world. It means something all over the world."

On the Melody Makers' new album, "Conscious Party," Marley sings of oppression, bigotry and hope for a better world.

For anyone who follows reggae music, Marley's political consciousness should come as no surprise. The late Bob Marley, Ziggy's father, was reggae's most celebrated artist and famous for such protest songs as "Get Up, Stand Up" and "I Shot the Sheriff."

But while acknowledging the legacy of his father, Ziggy Marley is determined to establish his own identity. "I want to be fulfilled myself rather than try to follow exactly in my father's footsteps."

Marley was born on October 17, 1968, in Trenchtown, an impoverished section of Kingston in Jamaica. When he was 11, he formed the Melody Makers along with his brother, Stevie, and sisters, Cedella and Sharon.

The Melody Makers' first song, "Children Playing in the Streets," was written by their father. In 1985, they released their first album, "Play the Game Right," which received a Grammy nomination for best reggae record. In 1986, they released the album "Hey World."

"We're brothers and sisters," Marley said. "Doing music was part of being a family."

"Hey World" contained such overtly political songs as the anti-apartheid "666," and on the new album, he continues to confront injustice with songs such as "Tomorrow People," the first single to be released.

"Tomorrow People, think of your past," he sings, attacking those who think only of the future and their indifference to humanity.

"The original idea was from robots, like the movie 'Robocop' — people becoming androids," Marley said. "Scientists are making dangerous things."

Although "Conscious Party" is only Marley's third album, he is already attracting the attention of some of the music industry's most highly acclaimed artists. Talking Heads members Chris Frantz and Tina Weymouth produced the record and Rolling Stones guitarist Keith

"I am not blind. Even in Jamaica, injustice happened. It happened all over the world. It means something all over the world."

Ziggy Marley,
reggae artist

Richards plays on the song "Lee and Molly."

The Melody Makers started touring in 1975 and have appeared at shows with Stevie Wonder, The Clash, Jimmy Cliff and the late Peter Tosh. They performed at Reggae Sunsplash last August in Jamaica. Marley has a worldwide tour scheduled to begin in April.

Welcome back UK; don't let weather kill studying time

Spring has sprung. Sure, it's a cliché statement but then again so is spring and all the things that come with it.

We've provided a list below of some of these things to look out for the last couple months of the semester. But to keep you from confusing them with their sound-alike counterparts, we've added some definitions.

For example:
Spring fever — the inevitable infatuations that find their way into the hearts and minds of every young college student. Not to be confused with King Fever — the inevitable rerun of the Elvis Presley movie about spring break that no one can seem to remember the name of.

Baseball — the pride of American sports. Not to be confused with Wally Ball — the game that the legislature and Gov. Wallace Wilkinson are playing with the state budget.

Spring Cleaning — the annual practice of cleaning the homestead of annoying winter dust. Not to be confused with Springsteening — the practice of hunting for tickets to the Bruce Springsteen concert this spring.

Tanning — the practice of utilizing the sun's rays to darken our skin. Not to be confused with Fanning — what you'll be doing the first week of spring weather while waiting for your landlord to come and switch the heater off and turn the air conditioner on.

The Final Four — what most Kentuckians would like to see UK win. Not to be confused with Albert Gore — a presidential candidate who would probably love to be on the team.

Butterflies — the gorgeous insects that emerge from cocoons. Not to be confused with Blood-shot eyes — the inevitable result of cramming for finals because you were too busy lying out in the sun when you should have been studying.

Don't make the mistake of letting the weather get the best of you this spring. Make this semester a productive one both academically and personally. Sure, enjoy the sunshine, but make sure that you remember why you're here in the first place.

How to do it

Columnist offers advice to SGA presidential contenders

In the real world, those seeking public office usually enlist the help of political consultants. The help for these political know-it-alls rivals that of a ticket to a sold-out NCAA game, hence causing the cost of campaigns to skyrocket.

The benefit from having consultants in your campaign can often make the difference on election day, as Kentucky Gov. Wallace Wilkinson can attest to.

However, candidates for the UK Student Government Association are limited as to how much they may spend on their campaigns. Aside from violating freedom of speech, the rule is supposed to ensure that races will not become popularity contests. It doesn't.

So since the three presidential candidates cannot afford to ally themselves with a consultant, they would all do well to continue reading this space in order to find out what they have to do to get the most votes on the March 30-31 elections.

Candidates for SGA vice president also might want to take note since the position serves no purpose other than preparation to run for president the subsequent year.

It has been suggested by some that the sole reason David Botkins has hung around SGA an extra year is so he could run for president. Botkins is perhaps the best known person among his SGA colleagues and he is also one of the more disliked.

The public administration graduate student has done an excellent job of surrounding himself with controversial issues and media coverage. Consequently, he has caused people to feel very strongly about him one way or the other.

C.A. Duane BONIFER

The biggest challenge Botkins faces is winning the support from the greek community, which sort of floods the polls each year.

Asking Senator at Large Leah McCain to be his running mate, Botkins had hoped to tap the support from the greeks, but when Senator at Large James Rose entered the race, Botkins' strategy backfired.

Many of those who support McCain wholeheartedly are at best committed lukewarmly toward Botkins, which might contribute to an odd split ticket being elected.

Add to the bad publicity Botkins received from the bickering with President Cyndi Weaver over the student lobbying effort and things become much more bleak for him.

There's a little more than a week until the election for Botkins to reverse his negative rating. He has enough committed supporters to help him, but unless they get to work in a hurry, Botkins will have the dubious honor of writing the SGA diary on how to fall from being a front-runner to a distant third-place candidate.

Senior Vice President Susan Bridges is perhaps one of the nicest candidates ever to seek SGA office — at least that is what many of her supporters say. The energetic mathematics junior is involved with more projects on this campus than space provides, and as a result, she has been able to step outside the greek community and generate broad campuswide support.

Critics charge that Bridges is inept when handling administrators and other University officials because she is too quick to agree and back down from her position. Bridges has become more aggressive since she came into office in May, but she still has much to prove before she is considered an advocate for student rights.

If the SGA elections remain little more than a glorified popularity contest, Bridges' chances of winning are extremely good. But if by some strange occurrence, substance becomes a part of the campaign, her inability to articulate the issues will be a liability.

Bridges' campaign aides will also need to convince students that Bridges is not just another blond sorority girl running for SGA, but that might require an image-maker not available to this campaign.

A supporter of one of Bridges' opponents made the comment that she will make an excellent math teacher one day. Yes, and she will also make a pretty good president.

It appeared for some time that the select group of students who vote in each spring SGA election would be faced with two opposite candidates until a small group of student leaders, many of whom were greek, persuaded James Rose into running for president.

Rose said many times he was not going to run for president, but at the last moment his conscience persuaded him to change direction.

The irony of Rose's lone campaign for president has been that while he has talked about how he is running to unite all the factions of the campus, a majority of his supporters come from the greek community.

But if Rose is to come from nowhere and win the presidency, he has to keep the race a greek-versus-non-greek issue. There simply is not enough time for him to make major contacts among independents.

If this election is similar to past elections, which there is little reason to suggest it will not be, then Rose need not worry. A majority of the voters will be greeks and the race will be a battle between Bridges and Rose, with Botkins playing the role of spoiler.

Rose can hope to benefit by that scenario in two ways: If he has the support he claims within the greek community and Botkins drains enough of the independent support from Bridges, then he should come away with a plurality of the vote.

Rose has also not aligned himself with a candidate for vice president. Although that presents a risk it could pay off handsome dividends.

The one group of students who could decide the next president are those at the Lexington Community College. LCC has made a good deal of noise this year, in particular LCC Senator Chris Essid, who is a strong supporter of Botkins.

LCC has been ignored by both Rose and Bridges and if Essid can mobilize half of the students he claims he can, another independent might be elected president.

Black History Month well done

I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate the Office of Minority Affairs on a job well done during Black History Month. Each and every program was very meaningful as well as inspirational. In being a black student and the University of Kentucky, I know how easy it is to lose your identity, but programs sponsored by the Minority Affairs Center gave me something to be proud of again.

George Brown, Jr. is a biology sophomore.

Minority Affairs applauded

I would like to commend the Minority Affairs Department for its February program during Black History Month. The events were uplifting and motivating. The singing of the Harlem Boys Choir and UK Black Voices as well as the African wear fashion show and Joe Louis exhibit showcase to talented blacks. The speeches by Coretta Scott King and Jesse Jackson gave special meaning to all those wanting racial harmony. Keep up the good work.

Kevin Cooke is an electrical engineering freshman.

Columnist hits home

As I was reading the Kernel on Thursday, March 16, I came across Mike Ekman's column. It really hit home because I also spent last spring break with my grandparents at their winter home in Florida.

However, I was not embarrassed to tell my friends where I was going. I even invited a friend to go along with me. Like Mike, I did not have the funds to go and stay with a bunch of friends at Daytona or anywhere else for that matter. So I packed my bags joyously and flew down with a friend.

I had the best time of my life! We went shopping, out to eat, visited some tourist attractions, laid out on the beach, went fishing and did a lot of other great things together.

My grandparents are very special to me and I will regret when they are gone forever. So for now I will enjoy their company while I can. After an experience like that, many realize that Grandma and Grandpa are real people who have feelings, likes and dislikes, and most importantly they love you very much and want to share their time with you. Guess what, Mike? I had such a good time I thought I would go again this year and take my mom with me!

Elizabeth C. Moore is a spanish sophomore.

Botkins cares about LCC

David Botkins is the only SGA presidential candidate who has come to me and stated what he can do for LCC. There have been a lot of times when the other two candidates (Susan Bridges and James Rose) could have talked to me about what they have planned for LCC, but they must not have been as important enough.

Botkins has promised to have the first UKSGA meeting at LCC, to stay informed and involved in LCC activities, and last but by no means least, to listen to the LCC students' needs and wants.

BLOOM COUNTY

by Berke Breathed

At LCC, we have 3,000 plus students and all are able to vote. The voting percentages have been so low in the past that we do not even receive a voting machine. Let's let the campus know how strong of a voting power we can be.

What we have to realize is that about 2,500 votes wins the election. So I first urge you to vote. While you are voting, remember that David Botkins has the best interest in LCC and is the only presidential candidate that seems to think we can make a difference.

Chris Essid is an LCC student and LCC senator in SGA.

Bridges and Mattingly best

As the Student Government Association elections approach, the field of sincere candidates for the Executive Offices has grown. Two candidates, however, stand out as the best choices for these elected positions.

Susan Bridges and Ken Mattingly provide an opportunity for the students to elect diverse representation, responsible leadership and creative enthusiasm. Susan possesses the leadership abilities to efficiently and effectively head up the Student Government, and to represent the students well to the Administration. She is dynamic and energetic, eager to look for solutions to campus problems as her work to set up the escort service for campus safety demonstrated, and she is always willing to take the time to listen to all students. She is by far the superior candidate for president.

Ken Mattingly has proven his leadership and knowledge of senate procedure this year as senate pro tem. He is organized and an effective administrator, and is at ease in working to get things done. His experience and levelheadedness make him the obvious choice for this office.

As a student government senator at large for the last three years, I have seen the effects of poor student representation. I urge each student to look carefully at the experience of each of the candidates for office and select to support the proven, responsible, effective leadership in Susan Bridges for president and Ken Mattingly for vice president.

Linda Bridwell is a graduate student in civil engineering and an SGA senator at large.

Opposition plan strike to try ousting Noriega

By REID G. MILLER
Associated Press

PANAMA CITY, Panama — Opposition leaders urged Panamanians to observe a nationwide strike today in hopes of paralyzing the country and providing the final push to oust Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

The indefinite work stoppage was called after Noriega rejected a Washington plan for his removal as "unacceptable, illogical and anti-Panamanian."

Noriega reportedly told William Walker, a deputy assistant secretary of state, that he wanted to remain in Panama and take part in the formation of a transitional government.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, appearing yesterday on NBC's "Meet the Press," said Noriega "can't expect to have any say in the transition."

"He can't expect any indictments to be quashed," Shultz added, referring to drug trafficking indictments against Noriega. "It's out of the question."

Aurelio Barria, head of an opposition coalition that called for today's strike, also rejected Noriega's apparent desire to play a continuing role in Panama's government.

"We don't have anything to negotiate with him except his departure — the day and the flight number," Barria said.

But Maj. Augusto Villalaz, who had been one of Noriega's personal pilots before defecting last week, said Noriega had loyalists and Cuban arms to keep him in power.

Villalaz told ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley" yesterday that he had flown three shipments of arms to Panama from Cuba and that Noriega planned to import 500,000 pounds of weapons.

Shultz said Noriega "should settle quickly before the opportunity that is there before him to go to Spain should disappear."

Spain's prime minister, Felipe Gonzalez, reiterated Saturday his country's willingness to offer Noriega asylum.

Walker and Michael Kovak, a State Department legal officer, were said to have offered Noriega freedom from extradition if he sought asylum in a third country. They met with the general and his high command on Friday.

The general's press office said he and his high command "are prepared to hold all necessary conversations to resolve the Panamanian problem, but without any type of conditions and always with the talks taking into account national interests."

In Roman Catholic churches throughout the nation yesterday, priests read a statement from the Episcopal Conference of Bishops "calling on all Panamanians to pray for Panama ... in this time of crisis."

The statement by Archbishop Marcelo G. McGrath and his bishops said it should be "understood that authority and command must be exercised for the good of all and not for personal benefit."

The planned strike comes with the nation's banks, some major industries and many smaller shops and stores already closed, either by wilful strikes or by a critical cash shortage.

The government was unable to meet a $33 million payroll for about 130,000 public employees last week. Most got only $75 of their semi-monthly wages.

Discontent with the economic situation erupted in violent public demonstrations last Wednesday after dissident officers failed to remove Noriega as head of the Defense Forces in an abortive coup.

Cuomo says he plans to take bigger role in presidential race

Associated Press

ALBANY, N.Y. — With the New York presidential primary less than a month away, Gov. Mario Cuomo indicated yesterday that he has plans for a more active advisory role in the Democratic presidential campaign.

Cuomo said he had asked his most trusted political adviser, son Andrew Cuomo, to begin consulting with all the Democratic presidential candidates.

"Up until a week ago, he was getting calls from everybody, but he told them all that he wasn't involved," said the governor. "I have asked him in the last week or so to start taking calls from the candidates and help us by letting us know what he thinks of their campaigns in New York."

The New York primary is April 19. Cuomo's comments came on the eve of a meeting with Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr. But Cuomo said he would give Gore the same message he has given to all the other candidates — "that he's not endorsing anyone yet."

Meanwhile, yesterday's New York Daily News reported that Andrew Cuomo might be on the verge of joining the Gore camp.

"Andrew is not leaning toward anybody," said his father when asked about that.

EXCITEMENT IS FOR THE BIRDS.

Soar above treetops. Skim over rivers. Fly through the night. It's all in a day's work for an Army helicopter pilot.

To learn to drive 10,000 pounds of bird in the air, first you'll need to qualify. You need a high school diploma, and preferably two years or more of college, in addition to completing Army Basic Training. Then, you're on to flight school.

When you complete your flight training, you'll have the wings of an Army pilot. And you thought only birds got to wear wings.

Jackson took Texas, chair says

Associated Press

DALLAS — Jesse Jackson has solidified his presidential bid in Texas and should have about as many delegates as Michael Dukakis when Democrats hold their state convention this spring in Houston, the Texas Democratic Party chairman said yesterday.

Although Dukakis earned more delegates in Super Tuesday's primary voting in Texas, Jackson appeared to have gathered more at-large delegates in Saturday's 270 county and senatorial district conventions across the state.

Those conventions determine the allocation of 64 at-large delegates to the national convention, but statewide results of Saturday's meetings were not tallied.

With just over half of the 5,288 delegates accounted for, Jackson had 41 percent and Dukakis, governor of Massachusetts, 36 percent. Uncommitted delegates were running 10 percent, Tennessee Sen. Al Gore had 2 percent, Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt had 3 percent, and Illinois Sen. Paul Simon had 1 percent. Former Colorado Sen. Gary Hart had one delegate, from a district in Houston.

"I would just guess the state convention will be composed of one-third Jackson, one-third Dukakis and about a third of the people either Gore, Gephardt or uncommitted," said state Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle.

State Democrats meet for their convention June 9-11 in Houston, where they will choose delegates to the national convention.

On Saturday, Republicans met in senatorial district and county conventions. Many counties reported a record GOP turnout at the meetings.

Although Vice President George Bush won all 111 national delegates to the convention, the GOP battles were over delegates who will eventually write the party's platform and rules.

A Pat Robertson-controlled convention in Nueces County adjourned when their allotted time ran out and reconvened in a church a short time later. Backers of Bush tried to block the move to the church, but were voted down.

"That place was full of religious fanatics," said Nueces County Bush delegate Steve Cobb. "They voted down everyone who voted against reconvening in the church out of concern for separation of church and state."

In the 9th senatorial district of Dallas, Jackson carried the day by winning 153 delegates to only two for Dukakis.

•Paper faces changes

The paper's adviser, Bob Adams, said Alexander has a misconception about what the adviser of the paper does.

Adams said the president's recommendations reflect a perception that the adviser is in control of the paper's content.

But that is not the case, Adams said. "I don't think (Alexander) understands the role of the student newspaper."

Although relations with the president were "pretty rocky" when Alexander came to Western two years ago, Harris said things had been improving.

Now, Harris said, "there's a good opportunity for them to become tense again."

Tense feelings have become commonplace throughout the Herald offices since Alexander's recommendations last week.

Television stations from Nashville and Bowling Green, reporters from The (Louisville) Courier-Journal, the Lexington Herald-Leader and the Atlanta Constitution have all converged on the small Herald offices to cover the story.

And members of the college paper are taking action even before the subcommittee files a report.

Last Thursday the school's chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, Society of Professional Journalists, unanimously adopted a proposal to bring in a "fact-finding" task force to investigate the paper's relations with the administration.

The task force, composed of out-of-state journalists, will review all the stories written about Alexander in the Herald and will report to the national chapter, said SDX President Jackie Hutcherson. The report will then be made available for publication.

"Anytime (you) get a national organization behind you it helps,"

Those upset over the president's recommendations are not confined to Herald offices, however.

The university's faculty senate last week had the first reading of a resolution which recommends that the newspaper remain in the hands of students.

Fred Murphy, chairman of the faculty senate, said the resolution will be voted on in April.

Jo Ann Huff Albers, head of the journalism department, said that although there is some cause for concern, there has been a lot of overreacting on the part of the media.

"They are drawing the worst possible cases, the worst extremes," Albers said. "The students are going to look at the worst possible situations... they're humans and they're budding journalists."

Albers, who is head of the subcommittee evaluating Alexander's recommendations, said that people misunderstood the president when he used the words "faculty editor."

"The president is not insistent that the term faculty editor be used," she said. "He didn't understand how people would react to that (title)—faculty editor."

But Albers said that if she believed any prior restraint was going on, she would quit.

"If I thought there was a likelihood that someone might walk into the Herald office from the president's office and say you should do a story on this... that would be totally unacceptable to me," Albers said.

In general, Bailey said that the president's recommendations were good.

"I think they are very positive recommendations," Bailey said. "I volunteered to sit on the subcommittee because I think (there could be)... some refining of these."

Adams, though, said the president is tinkering with a paper that has long tradition at Western.

"This newspaper has a lot of love," Adams said. "It's not just a thing that people do to pass the time of day."

Bush, Jackson, Dukakis out in front in Wisconsin

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Vice President George Bush held a strong lead among Republican voters here, while Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and Jesse Jackson were ahead of other Democrats in the Wisconsin presidential primary race, according to a newspaper's public opinion poll published yesterday.

The Milwaukee Journal said it questioned 782 Wisconsin residents who said they were fairly certain to vote in the April 5 primary. The poll, conducted Wednesday and Thursday, asked the respondents which candidate they would choose in the open primary, which does not require voters to state party preference.

Among Democrats, 38 percent chose Dukakis and 30 percent supported Jackson. Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt had 11 percent, Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois also had 11 percent, and Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr. had 10 percent. The margin of error was 5 percentage points, the survey said.

Among Republicans, 69 percent supported Bush.
