Shannon Exposes Propaganda At Press Convention Banquet

Nearly 300 high school students, their journalism advisers, The Editorial staff, and members of the Journalism department participated in the annual convention of the Kentucky High School Press association Friday and Saturday on the campus.

Major speaker at the convention's dinner Friday night in the Union Bluegrass room was Dr. Jasper Shannon, associate professor of political science. Fred B. Wachs, general manager of the Herald-Leader, acted as toastmaster.

Speaking on the subject, "Propaganda in the World Today," Doctor Shannon said: "Propaganda is the most over-propagandized thing in the world today."

"We have ascribed too much to propaganda. Propaganda is not necessarily false. Propaganda is not necessarily bad; it is not necessarily successful."

"Propaganda is the art of persuasion," the speaker continued. "It is to see how man is persuaded, to understand propaganda, we must get to the nature of man. Our democratic institutions are founded upon the belief that man is essentially rational. The propagandist, on the other hand, bases his appeal upon the belief that man is also, if not primarily emotional."

"The propagandist also utilizes the force of the spoken word. Indian pow-wows were similar to our pep rallies and political conventions which today appeal primarily to the emotions."

"We have a numerical democracy. We count the heads instead of what is in the heads," the political scientist commented.

Citing the appeals to which the propagandist appeals, Doctor Shannon named: 1) fear, as seen in the present emphasis on the "Red menace," and the "Pope will get you if you don't watch out" campaign to defeat Al Smith in 1928, and the present effort to scare people of John L. Lewis.

2) appeal to affection. You are all familiar with "my friends," he declared.

3) sex. Doctor Shannon mentioned advertisements and the appeal to protect women from invaders. Also stated was Hitler's promise to get wives for his warriors.

4) sympathy. The poor-little-Poland attitude fostered at present was cited.

5) ego. "The propagandist is a lover, a wooer, a suitor of the people," the speaker averred.

6) mastery complex. Be a winner, get on the winning side, the propagandist tells his victims, according to Doctor Shannon.

7) hate. They have killed, murdered, plundered, says the propagandist, attempting to arouse hatred.

Listed as propaganda devices by Doctor Shannon were: 1) name-calling, 2) slogans, as "make the

Calling 'Em Wild

By JOE CREASON

Gad-zooks, Alphonse, can it be that I'm growing into a softie?

Perhaps so, but that East-West all-star charity football game Saturday on Stoll field, even to this thoughtless sports writer, was more than just a grid battle, more than mere sports event. A little bit of America's spirit was revealed.

So that countless numbers of crippled legs might be given a fighting chance to walk, the cream of Kentucky's 1939 high school crop, 44 pairs of strong legs battled through 60 minutes of sparking, bruising, fighting football to a dog-fall that was tied through to a hangman's noose at 7-7.

Every cent contributed by the disappointing crowd of 7,500 customers above actual expenses will be turned over to the Lexington unit of Shriners Hospitals for Crippled Children by Oletha Tempin, sponsors of the game, second of its kind ever held in the state. Last year the two hand-picked teams fought to a score-less draw.

Watching the game through the specs of partiality, I couldn't help but compare what I saw to what at that very minute might have been happening on a dozen different European fronts. For example, in America the autumn air is filled with footballs and not screaming shells, and drives are referred to as touchdowns.

The American Way

Unselfish charity is the clearest insight into the American spirit and it's as native as the buffalo nickle. Just the thought of the usefulness of the sponsors and participants of Saturday's game makes a single, as clearly defined as if a rabbit were underneath my shirt, running up and down my spine.

Statistically, the West had it over the East like paper on a wall, rolling up 220 yards from scrimmage and 13 first downs, while surrendering but 73 yards and 6 first downs.

Led by Billy Freeman of Louisville Manual, who rolled through the line like an ambulance through a red light, the Westerners threatened in the opening two minutes of play by driving 58 yards to the East's 15 but their only scoring play was uncovered early in the second period when Freeman cut over tackle, reversed sharply to the left and scored standing up with a portable wall of blockers surrounding him. . . . Except for its one touchdown upheaval, the East was as sedate as a school maroon, never again seriously bidding for a marker.

Promising college prospects were as common as back fence cats. . . . Aside from Freeman, who carried a light load of 146 pounds, and who caught the crowds fancy with his crooked-stride running, Elmo Compton and Charles Kuhn, Louisville Male, Gene Byers, Paducah, Austin Roberts, Henderson, George Spiegel, Manual and Bill Griffin, Mayfield, from the West, looked ready for big-time plucking. . . . Although more or less overshadowed by his more brilliant team mates, Compton, who at 181 pounds is built like a brick smoke-house, showed up as a wonderful pass receiving half-back and was tougher on defense than a 25 cent steak.

Stars In The East

Meanwhile, East of the border fans were bubbling like happy laces over the exploits of James Cummins, Corbin; Charles Bailey Lindner; Tom Erving, Catlettsburg; and Charles Ebin, Ashland. Ebin, a 6-2, 10 pound end, was easily the East's line standout, being in on practically every play and showing special ability at rolling the passers up like pie crust when they drifted back for a shot. . . .

Although he didn't exactly ignite any fireworks Saturday with his playing, Griffin, a 6-5, 290 pound end, by all rights should blossom into a swell player if, and when he is transplanted into some college orchard. . . .

In the closing seconds of play and with the leather resting on the East's 38 yard line, the West quarterback went into a trance and instead of gambling for victory with passes, called for line plays inside the tackle area. . . . Finally, with 15 seconds to play, Compton's attempted field goal from the 22 was a shade wide to the left.

JIM KING LEADS BLUE SCORING PARADE

Led by Jim King, who burned the hemp with 18 points, Kentucky's Wildcat basketball team, with every man contributing to the total, rolled over the Berea College Mountaineers by a score of 74-24 Saturday night in Alumni gym.

Once the high-pressure Wildcat offense began to roll, the out-classed, but game Mountaineers found trying to halt the avalanche as futile as yelling "whoa" at a tornado. A crowd of 3,000, that stuffed the inadequate Alumni band-box like a Christmas stocking, was on hand to see Kentucky open its season.

King, making his first appearance with the varsity, relieved Marston Clugish at center with 4 minutes of the first half to play and set the scoring pace with 7 field goals and 4 foul shots. Next in order came Clugish and Lee Huber, each with 10 points scored in the first half. Stewart, tiny forward, was practically the entire Berea offense.

Four times, after scoring midway of the second period, the Westerners drove past the East's 20 yard stripe only to find the touchdown drop weak as warm milk.

On the other hand, the East cashed in on one of its two scoring chances to deadlock the all-star game for the second year in succession.

Despite ideal football weather, a meagre crowd of 7,500 saw the game which Oletha Tempin backed for the benefit of Shriners hospital for crippled children.

The West's touchdown climax came a 47 yard march and was produced by Billy Freeman of Louisville Manual with a 30 yard dash through a gaping hole at right tackle. Elmo Compton, Louisville Male halfback, kicked the extra point. Early in the third period the East pushed 64 yards to score when Tom Erving of Catlettsburg slashed 2 yards over tackle. Charles Ebin, Ashland end, knotted the count with a perfect place kick.

Weak Scoring Punch Costs West Team Victory

Unable to produce a scoring punch from within the opposition's 20 yard line, a heavier and favored Western all-star team was held to a 7-7 tie by a determined Eastern team in the second annual high school charity football game Saturday afternoon on Stoll field.

Four times, after scoring midway of the second period, the Westerners drove past the East's 20 yard stripe only to find the touchdown drop weak as warm milk.
