Matthews Granted Authority To Push Suit Against UK

By BOB COOPER
The Associated Press

A state court gave permission Thursday for the attorney general to sue to void the sale of Maine Chance Farm to the University of Kentucky Research Foundation.

However, there remained some doubt—because of the pending change in state administration—of whether the case will reach trial stage.

Fayette Circuit Judge L. T. Grant overruled motions to dismiss the suit filed by Atty. Gen. Robert Matthews, on behalf of UK, to void the sale.

Defendants had argued that Matthews had no right to represent the University without its permission. Judge Grant said Mr. Matthews had that right.

Mr. Matthews, however, ends his term of office Jan. 1, when John B. Breckinridge becomes attorney general. It is unlikely that the case could come to trial before that time.

Breckinridge Undecided

Mr. Breckinridge said, "As a matter of practice, I feel that an attorney general should pursue those cases that are pending when he takes office.

"However, it is his prerogative to throw out any cases that he feels are not in the state's best interest. I have not studied this particular case and will have to make a decision when I take office."

Mr. Breckinridge said Judge Grant's ruling was an important matter, however, in deciding "whether the attorney general could sue to undertake to protect the interests of the state in this matter."

The attorney general-elect also said he felt this case might be argued in a written form—briefs by lawyers rather than an actual trial on the matter.

"There is no difference between the two sides on the facts of the case, such as that in the $30 million action in federal court," he said.

'It Gives The Voters A Choice'

McCarthy Off And Running

AP, CPS Dispatches
NEW YORK—Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy's decision to challenge President Johnson in four presidential primaries could polarize the movements of dissident Democrats already under way in a number of states to block the renomination of the President next year.

Like Sen. McCarthy, they oppose Mr. Johnson's policies in Vietnam.

The Minnesota senator said he will be a contender in the elections in Wisconsin, California, Oregon and Nebraska. He said he will decide within two weeks whether to enter the primaries in New Hampshire and Massachusetts.

There is already a group calling itself "Concerned Wisconsin Democrats," headed by Don Peterson, chairman of the 10th District. He said of Sen. McCarthy's announcement:

Offers A Choice

"It gives the voters of Wisconsin and the United States a clear choice regarding the war in Vietnam. Sen. McCarthy will articulate this issue and help reunite a country divided over a war they have yet to comprehend."

Political observers in California said Sen. McCarthy is virtually certain to have the backing of the California Democratic Council, a 14-year-old organization with an estimated 33,000 members. The group voted recently to oppose Mr. Johnson in the California primary by entering a slate of "peace" delegates. It had named no specific candidate for the presidency.

In New Hampshire, the President's supporters are trying to turn back what appears to be a growing revolt against his Vietnam policies. A top Democrat, who asked not to be identified, said a recent poll indicated that Mr. Johnson would not do well in New Hampshire.

Efforts to promote Sen. McCarthy's candidacy started before his announcement. David Hoeh, a Dartmouth College administrator and faculty member is heading the movement.

Kennedy Organization

New Hampshire is among the states where anti-Johnson Democrats have organized to place the name of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy of New York before the voters next year. The state's primary, first in the nation, is scheduled for March 12. Sen. Kennedy has consistently disavowed all such movements.

Massachusetts Democrats said they would be in a difficult position if McCarthy decides to enter the primary there.

Should he win, Massachusetts delegates to the Democratic National Convention would have to vote for him on the first ballot. Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill expressed the belief that the President would have a hard fight to beat Sen. McCarthy in the primary.

Other Democratic sources in Massachusetts said Sen. McCarthy has a good chance of winning there "unless the Vietnam war is ended one way or another before next April."

Oregon Organizing

A McCarthy for President Committee was organized in Oregon Nov. 13. About 150 persons attended the meeting and elected Joe Allman, assistant professor of political science at the University of Oregon, as chairman. The state Democratic chairman, Edward Fadeley of Eugene, said such activity is healthy. Mr. Fadeley said, "No man owns the presidency. He must earn the nomination."

One of the national co-chairmen of the Citizens for Kennedy is '68 is Charles O. Porter, a two-term congressman from Oregon. Rep. Porter was defeated in 1960 and has since failed to win the Democratic nomination to the House.

Rep. Porter said his organization would back Sen. McCarthy in the Oregon primary and then hope to win for Sen. Kennedy at the nominating convention.

Among the reasons Sen. McCarthy gave for becoming a candidate were a "growing evidence of a deepening moral crisis in America and the 'sense of alienation'" he has found on college campuses around the country.

Graduate Deferments Are Being Scrutinized

WASHINGTON (CPS)—Within the next few weeks, the White House is expected to resolve two important questions that are not taken care of under present draft laws.

One of them is the question of who among the draft-eligible males should be drafted first.

The second is the question of what kinds of graduate study will enable students to get graduate deferments.

Although it is reported that the President and his advisers are studying a variety of proposals relating to these two questions, the basic issues involved are relatively simple.

In the matter of who should be drafted first, the basic decision will be between taking the oldest draft-eligible males first and setting up some kind of procedure for taking a cross-section of age groups.

Presidential Power

According to the 1967 law, the President may designate any age group as the "prime age group"—the one, that is, from which draftees will be chosen first. Although the President has designated 19-year-olds as the group, it has also been suggested that students who have been deferred should be put into the draft pool as if they were 19 when their deferments expire. Under the "oldest first" ruling, these students would then be high in the order of call.

According to John Morse, director of the Commission on Fed-

VP Johnson Clarifies Recruiter Policy

In a statement released Friday by Robert L. Johnson, vice-president in charge of student affairs, University policy toward military recruiters on campus was clarified.

Mr. Johnson's statement said that military recruiters would not be prohibited from recruiting on campus and emphasized the University's tolerance of the "right to dissent." Following is Mr. Johnson's statement:

"Recent statements by Lt. General L. C. Hershey, Director of the United States Selective Service System, regarding Selective Service reclassification, have prompted the request that the University of Kentucky consider withdrawing permission for military information teams to visit our campus.

"In reviewing General Hershey's statement, we find that any potential reclassification of students engaged in antiwar protests must be the result of 'illegal activity which interferes with recruiting, or causes refusal of duty in the military and naval forces . . . ."

"After considerable discussion and evaluation among the administrative officers of the University and the University Senate Council, it is the University's position to continue permitting military information teams on our campus. It is our policy that any student should have an opportunity to interview any recruiter representing a legitimate field of interest to him; thus, a student interested in a military career should have the same opportunity as those students interested in other careers.

"At this time, some of our students believe that their engaging in peaceful demonstrations or protests will jeopardize their deferment classification, but we doubt that any Draft Board would penalize or punish by reclassification any student who is involved only in a peaceful and legal protest that does not interfere with the recruiting process.

"The University of Kentucky is committed to and upholds the right to dissent, and peaceful picketing will be permitted so long as it does not directly inhibit the carrying out of an activity on University property."

Basketball Ticket Vote Set Monday

A student referendum on basketball seating will be held Monday.

Much criticism, mostly from students, has been leveled at the basketball seating arrangements. All 4,800 seats allocated for the first three home games were taken by students in five hours Nov. 27.

Student Government will sponsor the referendum as a result of a bill passed in Thursday night's SG session. SG President Cook said even if students vote for a change in the seating procedure, an alteration could not take place until next semester.

Students will be asked to vote on two questions:

1. Do you favor the present system of obtaining tickets for University of Kentucky basketball games?

2. Do you favor the previously used system of obtaining tickets for University of Kentucky basketball games?

The previous system used, left unexplained in the second question and unclear to students who have never attended the University before, refers to presenting

Drama: 'Royal Gambit' Provocative

By LARRY AULD
Royal Gambit, now being presented at the Guignol Theatre through Sunday evening provides for its audience a thought-provoking and at times dramatically exciting evening of theater. Written by Hermann Gressieker, it won the Gerhart Hauptman award in Berlin, and opened to generally enthusiastic reviews off-Broadway in 1959.

Gressieker's play is a good choice for a college audience because of the intellectual stimulation it provides. The action revolves about Henry VIII and his six wives; yet it is obvious from the start that the characters are not confined to the historical period in which the people they portray actually lived. As the play progresses, the audience is taken from the Renaissance all the way to the twentieth century, as Henry continues on his humanistic journey away from God. The long journey, however, as Katarina of Aragon points out, has only led him back to God. At the end of the last act, Katarina voices the hope that the end of Henry's "modern age" may be in sight; indeed, if man is to survive, the end of the Godless humanistic philosophy that lead to the present chaos, must come. She says, "... that age is now near its end. A new one approaches. It must be different or there'll never be another for the creatures of this earth."

The cast, assigned the difficult task of portraying flesh and blood people as well as symbols, was uniformly excellent. Robert Cooke, as Henry, ran the gamut from young, proud, arrogant manhood, to old, but undefeated senility, with the utmost vigor and sincerity. His performance was a winning one. Each of the wives were, in their own right, superb. Bekki Jo Schneider, as Katarina, who represented Henry's spirit, portrayed the dignified and secure queen with grace. Samantha Doane, as the bewitching, beautiful and tragic Anne Boleyn, brought a quiet, knowing intensity to the role. Nonie Arnold, a new face in the Guignol was excellent as the plain Jane Seymour, and Susan Cardwell as the Widow Parr along with Johanna Fears as the dumpy Anna of Cleves were equally outstanding. Elizabeth Hoagland, as the truly tragic Kathryn Howard, provided the evening's most electrifying and dramatically intense scene when she told Henry of her past indiscretions at the notorious Norfolk castle.

The production was slightly marred by some technical difficulties in the first two acts, but for such a difficult show technically, this is forgivable on opening night. Raymond Smith's set design and lighting showed off the actors, and made them look extremely good. Costuming by Joseph Flauto was magnificent.

TODAY AND TOMORROW

Announcements for University groups will be published two weeks before the event and once the afternoon of the event. The deadline is 11 a.m. the day prior to the first publication.

Today

The annual Christmas pageant, "Hanging of the Greens," will be presented at 10:45 p.m. in Memorial Hall. Admission is free.

The Department of Psychology will present Dr. Jack Richardson, professor of psychology at SUNY at Binghamton at 3:45 p.m. in 213 Kastle Hall. Dr. Richardson will speak on "Positive Transfer and the Duration of Implicit Verbal Responses in Paired-Associate Learning."

Christmas tree decorating will be the order of the day at 4 p.m. in the Great Hall of the Student Center. Everyone is invited to help trim a tree and put up lights provided by the Student Center Board.

The Newman Center will host a "GIF" Party from 8 p.m. until midnight. Come as you are.

Tomorrow

The Block and Bridge Club will hold its Little International Livestock Showmanship contest at noon at the Beef Show barn on Coldstream Farm, Newtown Pike.

Coming Up

Theta Sigma Phi will meet at the Journalism Building at 7 p.m. Monday. Guest speakers will be members of the City Society. Members are asked to bring their $2.50 semester dues.

Students may sign up in the Student Center game room for the Chess Tournament beginning Dec. 5.

The Sixth Annual Concrete Conference will be held at Carnahan House Dec. 1-2.

College Life, sponsored by the Campus Crusade for Christ, will meet at 9 p.m. Sunday at the Lambda Chi Alpha house.

An open forum entitled "Alternative" will be held at 2 p.m. Sunday in 245 Student Center to discuss the problems of housing, education, employment, and response. Four speakers from Boston College will begin the discussion.

U.S. Fears Idle War Machine?

Berry: Pacifism Necessary

By VICKY SHULMAN
The United States is falsely assuming that what is best for it is always best for the world, a University English professor said Thursday.

Speaking against the Vietnam war at the YWCA-sponsored faculty-student lunch, novelist Wendell Berry said the three major crises of our time—war, civil rights and conservation—are interrelated. War, he said, is a natural enemy of civil rights and a waste of lands and their natural resources.

"Violent emotion tends to the use of the greatest power available," Mr. Berry told the audience of 11. He predicted future use of nuclear weapons because, he said, men have yet to succeed in creating powerful weapons without eventually using them.

He said pacifism is both justified and necessary on moral and practical grounds. Although such a stand is unpopular and against human nature, it must be taken, he said.

U.S. 'Not Perfect'

Mr. Berry believes the U.S. is wrong in claiming it is a peace-loving country and that others are warmongers. "We are not always right and everyone else wrong," Mr. Berry said. No war has ever advanced the cause of peace, he added.

The UK writer asserts one of the greatest obstacles to opposition of militaristic tradition is an enormous monetary investment. The U.S. does not want to see its war machine idle, he accused.

All that dissenters have been able to do so far is speak out in public, write letters, sign petitions and conduct demonstrations, Mr. Berry said. These methods are inadequate, but keep the issue alive, he continued.

In an ensuing discussion the question of the alleged intrinsic evil of communism was raised. The audience responses indicated many believe it a "scare word."

'Tired' Kentucky Southern President Will Retire Soon

LOUISVILLE, (AP)—Dr. Rollin S. Burhans announced Thursday that he's "tired" and is stepping down as president of Kentucky Southern College.

Dr. Burhans, the only president of the 5-year-old school which called off a merger Wednesday with the University of Louisville, said he will retire soon.

He said that would be when the college can hire "a top-flight business manager, a top-flight dean of students and a top-flight president."

Urine-In suggested?

Prior to the start of each season Coach Adolph Rupp, basketball coach of the century, invites the members of press, radio, and television "and The Kernel," to a dinner.

The banquet's purpose is to christen the new season, and provides Rupp with a forum where he can impress upon the members of the mass media that if nothing good can be said about either himself or the team, then nothing should be said.

Many such pseudo-events are staged for the benefit of the press and the mass media. Usually such banquets are hail-fellow well-met blowouts.

Last night, however, Coach Adolph Rupp, whose genius is unquestioned on the basketball floor, and man of stellar accomplishments that he is, pontificated in an area where he is not infallible, freedom of the press and constitutional law.

Coach Rupp announced that no member of the mass media will be permitted into the UK dressing room or training room following a game. He further said that the press will not be permitted to talk to the team players without his prior approval.

When asked how such a policy could apply to a student newspaper, since the announced Rupp policy would prevent students at the University, from speaking to fellow students, he replied:

"The Kernel fell flat on its face with that Tallent editorial last year. I don't want comments from my boys in the paper."

(Tallent, dismissed from the squad last year for "disciplinary reasons" was the subject of a Kernel editorial which sought to affirm Tallent's rights as a student at the University and also sought to prevent the cancellation of his scholarship).

Though Assistant Coach Harry Lancaster attempted to explain that what Rupp was saying was "the boys will not be permitted to answer questions from the press," Rupp went on to say:

"... (urinate) on the first amendment."

These events have thus far remained unreported in the mass media, particularly Rupp's comment about the first amendment.

Present at the banquet were members of the AP, UPI, The Lexington Herald, Leader, and members of the local radio and television stations. They lifted not a word in defense of freedom of the press and its lifeblood, the first amendment of the Constitution.

Does their silence tacitly bespeak agreement with news manipulation?

Rupp can, it appears, bar the press from the dressing room and training room. This works a hardship on the commercial press. It is news manipulation. It severely hampers those few remaining members of the mass media who insist on access to the ascertainable facts in lieu of handouts from news sources.

Rupp can, and apparently has, used coercion and threat of reprisal, to prevent his team players from answering media questions. To speak to the press for publication or to remain silent should be the independently arrived at decision of each student athlete.

Such individual rights can not be coerced away.

Is the Kernel sports editor, who played freshman basketball last season for UK, thereby making associations and friendships with present team members, supposed to cease to speak to people who sit beside him in classrooms of the University?

Freedoms will erode if there is not firm, vigorous resistance to attempts to coerce away individual rights and liberties.

The press can speak freely to whom it chooses. All men can and must be permitted to decide for themselves whether to speak in return. No student athlete's right to free speech should be coerced or intimidated away.

Apparently the members of a student newspaper are the only remaining members of the mass media who stubbornly resist intrusions on the freedom of the press and the rights of individuals.

For this reason, if no other, the coach was correct in singling out The Kernel from the rest of the mass media.

University Soapbox

By DONALD BURKHOLDER
DAVID ELKINTON
PETER SINCLAIR

Several members of the UK academic community, both students and faculty, protest against the participation of the U.S. military forces in a war that is inconsistent with American ideals of freedom and democracy.

This war has imposed a cruel toll upon American young men: 14,630 had been killed and 91,081 had been wounded between January, 1961, and November, 1967, according to official U.S. estimates.

Today we are spending at least 4 million dollars an hour and are employing about 500,000 American young men in a tragic conflict for which our officials have presented no clear, consistent, satisfactory purpose.

Recently four young Americans felt constrained to register their protest by deserting from the U.S. Navy and finding asylum in the Soviet Union. Many "adult" Americans, including fathers of at least two of these boys, smugly seek demeaning motives for the action of these youths rather than posing answers to their questions.

We refuse to sit on our hands apathetically and safely while our country's youth must face the decision either of accepting the social and economic consequences of rejecting military service or of submitting themselves to an institution that orders them to kill "enemy" soldiers, to drop napalm on "unfriendly" villages, and to demolish villages and cities of North Vietnam, even though the Senator Mansfield Report asserts that "only about 400 North Vietnamese soldiers were . . . in the South" when the leaders of the U.S. democracy initiated this bombing.

We must address ourselves to the issues posed in the following statement by a group of veterans, young American veterans, of the Vietnam war: "We believe that this 'conflict' in which our country is now engaged in Vietnam is wrong, unjustified and contrary to the principles of self-determination on which this nation was founded . . . We believe that our policy in Vietnam supports tyranny and denies democracy. We believe this because of our experiences in Vietnam."

Because we believe that many U.S. officials have not been entirely honest about the tragedy of Vietnam and because we believe that prospective recruits for military service in Vietnam should demand answers to difficult questions before they commit themselves to an institution that demands absolute obedience, we have planned a variety of activities in conjunction with the visit of the Marine Corps recruiters to the Student Center Monday, December 5, through Friday, December 8.

We invite all interested persons, regardless of their opinions, to come and participate in the dialogue.

Specifically, we plan (1) oral readings by various persons, (2) open forums (Hyde Park style) with several faculty members tentatively scheduled to lead discussions on Tuesday, (3) general discussion throughout the week to encourage communication among students, faculty members, and Marine Corps recruiters, and (4) draft counseling from 1 to 5 p.m. in the Student Center.

We urge the participation of those who wonder—or know—why our leaders believe that the security of the most powerful nation of all time is threatened by an underdeveloped rural country, why we have been told that our central purpose is to help people to choose their own government even though we fail both to sign and to support effectively the Geneva Accord of 1954, and why 250 men were sacrificed on Hill 875 last week.

Letters to the Editor:

To The Editor Of The Kernel:

Thanks for printing everything that comes over those hot UPI wires. I am certain the students of this campus were happy to hear that Dr. Sylvia Herz ("psychologist-sociologist") has discovered that "sex is easily attainable, available . . ." but perhaps many were as disappointed as I was to be assured that it (sex, of course) is now "taken for granted . . . has lost its yesterday spirit . . ." and "the use of drugs . . . has relegated sex to second place."

It is gratifying to learn, however, that sociology has developed these theories from factual evidence showing a positive correlation between the use of drugs and "second place" sex: "Of those tested, in all cases where a student had experimented with drugs, he, self admittedly, had also participated in the sexual act at some time."

Although I am not trained in the mysteries of sociological theory-construction, I would like to contribute some additional data to the commodious portmanteau of sociological fact: of those questioned, in all cases where a student had experimented with sex, he, self admittedly, had also participated in church services at some time.

I will leave the construction of a suitable hypothesis from these findings to those who have been formally trained in the new science.

Steve Boesen

To The Editor Of The Kernel:

I, along with many others, would like to know something about the University's new system of allocating student tickets for the home basketball games. Why was this new system instituted? What are the benefits of this system supposed to be?

I fail to see the reasoning for distributing the tickets in advance. The old system of giving the student his ticket as he passed through the gate and presented his I.D. card seemed to work perfectly last year. There were seldom any major hang-ups with that system, whereas several objections to the new system seemed to be clearly evident. Having to get the tickets in blocks of two or three games seems to be the major problem. If a student took a date to the ball game and found out that he could not stand her (or she him), he would then be stuck for two more games. A solution to this would be not to go to the next two games, but then this would bring up another problem, that of empty seats.

When there are students who were unable to get tickets, empty seats seem to be a tremendous waste. Under the old system of distribution such a thing as an empty seat just did not exist. There always were, and still are, more students wanting to see the games than there are tickets for them. Since every student pays some part of his fee to cover getting into University sporting events, empty seats seem to be the biggest hang-up of all.

The advance distribution of tickets for the football games seemed to work well enough, but the same set up for basketball games is a true injustice to the UK student. Someone in a position to do so should review this situation and alter it as quickly as possible, preferably before the next block of tickets goes up for distribution.

Edward Diehl
Soph., Business and Economics

To The Editor Of The Kernel:

The new method of distributing basketball and football tickets to students, devised by the Student Government and the Athletic Department, is sheer asininity. There are numerous shortcomings to this system which should have been anticipated.

1. In order to get tickets a student is almost compelled to skip class. Obtaining them entails standing in line from one to two hours on a weekday morning. Student teachers and students who are in class or working part time all day cannot get them at all.

2. Many people have gotten ID's from students not intending to attend the games and plan to sell these tickets to students who couldn't get tickets. These students, have already paid a twenty dollar activity fee for the privilege of attending sports events and then must pay again for this privilege. This is grossly unfair.

3. The quota of 4,800 comprises less than one-half of the student body. The Kernel poll shows that 42 percent of the students attended every home football game. Since there is high interest in basketball in this state, it is safe to assume that at least 60 percent of the student body will be present at any given basketball game and there will be more if we have a good team.

Sports should exist for the enjoyment of the students first and for alumni and sports fans second. If not, there is something gravely wrong with the purpose of sports events at this University. They exist as a business designed to make money.

SG Sets Referendum On Ticket Dilemma

A referendum was called by Student Government Thursday night to determine student opinion on the new method of obtaining tickets for basketball games.

The referendum will be held Dec. 5.

The bill was introduced by Reps. Wally Bryan and O.K. Curry, taken from committee, and passed.

The referendum reads as follows:

Do you favor the present system of obtaining tickets for University of Kentucky basketball games?

Do you favor the previously used system of obtaining tickets for University of Kentucky basketball games?

The polling places will be Student Center, Donovan Cafeteria, Blazer Cafeteria, Complex Cafeteria, Chemistry - Physics Building and Commerce Building.

In the past, students picked up tickets for the game immediately before the game, but this year tickets were made available to students a week before the game. All tickets for Saturday's opening game were taken by Monday evening.

In other action, the assembly passed a resolution urging the "persons responsible for the policy change in the 1967 Kentuckian and those persons responsible for the 1968 Kentuckian" to produce a yearbook "which meets the expectations and wishes of the students who support it."

The resolution was introduced by Rep. Mike Davidson. The Kentuckian has come under fire this year in Student Government and a referendum was held earlier to determine response.

An informal meeting will be held between Student Government representatives and members of the administration Dec. 10. The meeting is closed.

LeMaster Surprise As Rupp Picks Starters

By JIM MILLER

The decision is made.

Adolph Rupp, starting his 38th season at the Wildcat helm, last night announced the five men that will take the floor in the season opener against Michigan. There was one surprise. The surprise announced by Rupp is senior guard Jim LeMaster.

LeMaster was rated behind junior Phil Argento, but a finger separation on Argento's shooting hand prompted Rupp to insert the 6-3 LeMaster into the lineup.

"He's looked good all fall," said Rupp of LeMaster. "He's always had the ability... he's driving much better... he's got more confidence."

LeMaster is looking good at the right time, too. With two of his guards nursing injuries Rupp said, "we need him worse than ever."

Thad Jaracz will open at one forward.

The 6-6 senior, who was named team captain by his teammates, has started every game since his sophomore season when he was named to the Associated Press all-American third team.

At the other forward will be Mike Casey, a 6-4, 187-pound sophomore.

Casey led the star-studded freshmen in scoring last season with a 23.1 average. He was recently picked as one of the nation's "sophomores to watch" by Sports Illustrated.

At center will be another sophomore, Dan Issel. Issel fought off a threat by last season starter, Cliff Berger, for the opening job. Issel was second in scoring last season for the frosh, averaging 20.8 with about 18 rebounds a game.

At the other guard is another expected starter, Steve Clevenger. Clevenger, an even-6-footer, is the floor general needed by Rupp. He was bothered by a knee bruise earlier in the week, but will play Saturday. He has been chosen alternate captain behind Jaracz.

After Rupp saw four of his players struck with various ailments, he jokingly said, "I may not even go this week (to Michigan)."

Clevenger and Argento practiced only sparingly Thursday. Rupp is trying to protect them from getting "injuries on injuries."

Issel is still recovering from the removal of a benign tumor from the roof of his mouth. Sophomore forward Mike Pratt is recovering from the flu, but "is ready to go" Saturday, according to Rupp.

The Wildcats will help the Wolverines dedicate the new University of Michigan fieldhouse Saturday.

"We hope to dedicate it properly," said Rupp.

GIVE ME A MAN WITH 2 A.M. COURAGE

Napoleon Bonaparte knew what he wanted in a general. He sought the unusual type of man who could wake from a sound sleep at two in the morning, rally and beat off an enemy attack. We're thinkers, not fighters, at Brown Engineering. But we're looking for the same general sort of person—the unusual engineer or scientist who can give his work "2 a.m. thinking." We don't want engineers who just draw up other people's work. We have plenty of draftsmen. Brown's employees are scientists who create daring and unusual ideas from research—and engineers who uniquely and imaginatively translate these ideas into hardware. Together they play a large part in shaping our nation's space and defense efforts. If you'd like to help create tomorrow's technology, mail your resume to: David Lay, College Relations, Brown Engineering, Research Park, Mail Stop 26, Huntsville, Alabama 35807. You tear off to a corner, alone, but within earshot of your fellows.

And then? And then? And then you unleash it. SPRITE! It fizzes! It roars! It bubbles with good cheer!

DEFERMENTS

eral Relations of the American Council on Education, it is not likely the President will decide to draft college graduates first, because the Defense Department won't want a flood of older draftees this summer.

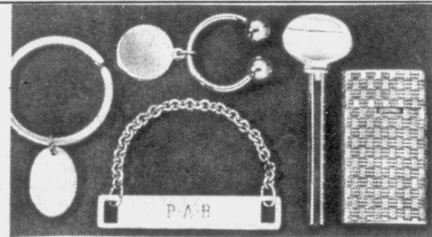

In order to achieve an "age-mix," therefore, some kind of system that draws on both 19-year-olds and college graduates will be necessary. Mr. Morse's commission has recommended that all draft-eligible males be placed into one draft-pool, and then chosen on the basis of the month and day they were born—that is, those born in January would go ahead of those born in February regardless what year they were born.

Mr. Morse believes a system something like that of his commission will be put into effect, though he doesn't think it will necessarily be exactly like the one his group is calling for.

As for the decision on what forms of study will result in deferments for graduate students, one of the proposals being studied by the National Security Council, which is in charge of resolving this question, calls for designating a "broad area" of study for deferments.

According to Mr. Morse, if this proposal is accepted it may mean that all graduate students in a broad field, such as the physical sciences, will be granted deferments.

The commission has proposed that deferments be provided "only in narrow and critically needed specialties." Mr. Morse, however, says there has been a good deal of speculation that a "broad area" proposal will be accepted. If so, he predicts, first-year and prospective graduate students in the social sciences and humanities will bear the brunt of up-coming draft calls.
