ALUMNI HONOR ROLL SUPPLEMENT

ABOUT THE COVER: Littleford and Shively are at it again . . . and in this battle you can help! It's a war between the alumni of the University of Tennessee and the alumni of the University of Kentucky to prove which of the two groups has the most devotion for and loyalty to Alma Mater. If you have not sent us your $5.00 for Alumni Association membership . . . do so at once. Won't you join the fight?

Robinson Is Named President Of Council

The Kentucky Joint Alumni Council, in closing its annual meeting Oct. 27-28 at UK, named John Robinson, Danville, president of the group.

Other officers elected at the closing session were Don Holloway, Morehead State College, vice president, and Charles A. Keown, Western State College, secretary.

Robinson, superintendent of Boyle

County schools, is an alumnus of Eastern State College.

The new officers will serve for two years. Their predecessors were made members of the council's executive committee. They are M. O. Wrather, Murray State College; Miss Helen G. King, UK, and W. H. Goodwin, Kentucky State College.

The council will meet at Eastern next year.

RALLY 'ROUND, LOYAL ALUMNI, IT IS WAR!

Tennessee Challenges Kentucky To Alumni Membership Fight

The whistle has blown . . . and the teams are lining up. Won't you join your friends in this fight? The TENNESSEE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION HAS CHALLENGED THE KENTUCKY ALUMNI ASSOCIATION TO A FUND RAISING CONTEST FOR THE CALENDAR YEAR 1959-1960.

You alumni have had a feeling more than once when your Kentucky Wildcats were battling the Volunteers of Tennessee that you wanted to walk out on that field or floor and join forces with them.

Of course, that hasn't been possible, but IT IS POSSIBLE NOW TO ACCEPT ANOTHER CHALLENGE Tennessee has sent out—a contest between the alumni of Kentucky and the alumni of Tennessee that will prove which of the two groups has the most devotion and loyalty to Alma Mater.

During the last four years your Wildcat basketball team has won eight and lost none to the University of Tennessee. The football team has won three and lost one. To win this membership contest we need EVERY KENTUCKY ALUMNUS to contribute to his Alumni Association.

The winner will be announced and a prize awarded at the Kentucky-Tennessee basketball game in the spring of 1960. Won't you join the team against Tennessee and help your Alumni Association GIVE YOUR UNIVERSITY ANOTHER VICTORY OVER TENNESSEE!

You can boost our total number of contributing members if you will send us $5.00 or more on or before June 1. You who are already members can give your association an added boost when you renew your contribution membership before June 1.

WRIGHT NAMED TO UK BOARD OF TRUSTEES

Floyd H. Wright, Lexington businessman, has been appointed a member of the Board of Trustees of the University of Kentucky.

Wright will replace Robert C. Stilz, Lexington, whose term expires. He will serve until Dec. 31, 1962.

Gov. A. B. Chandler announced Wright's appointment at Frankfort on Dec. 23.

The new trustee, a native of Casey County, has lived in Lexington since he attended the University. While enrolled at UK, he was a member of the football and baseball teams.

He is a partner in the Geary-Wright Tobacco Co., 1806 South Broadway; Dixie-Bell Dairy Co., 315 North Limestone Street, and the Fayette Seed Co., 137 Rose Street.

He also serves as a director of the Security Trust Co. He has served on the Lexington-Fayette County Airport Board since Blue Grass Field was opened in 1942.

His wife, the former Margaret Johnston, was selected by Beta Sigma Phi as Lexington's "Woman of the Year" in 1956 for her work with civic groups.

REUNIONS TO BRING BACK 15 CLASSES

May 23 Set For Alumni Day At UK

Saturday, May 23, 15 classes will return to the University campus for special reunions, headed by the 50-year class of 1909 and the 25-year class of 1934. In addition, the class of 1914 is planning a special 45th reunion spear-headed by the Fourteen Faradays—the 1914 engineers.

A program departure has been arranged for the 50-year class this May. It has been difficult in the past for the Golden Jubilee celebrants to return for Alumni Day on Saturday and then to stay over for commencement exercises on Monday to receive their Half Century Club awards. In fact, a number of the 50-year class members of former years have had to sacrifice the opportunity to remain and receive the awards with their classmates. Therefore, this year the 50-year certificates will be presented to all of the members of the class at the alumni banquet on Saturday night, May 23.

Reunion day will open on Saturday morning with registration at the Student Union from ten until twelve noon, during which time refreshments will be served in the Music Room of the Union. At 12:30 that day, central daylight time, the reuners will adjourn to Carnahan House where a picnic lunch will be served on the lawn to be followed immediately by the annual meeting of the Alumni Association. The new officers for 1959-60 will be announced at the picnic.

From 3:30 until 5:30 that afternoon President and Mrs. Dickey will be at home to all returning alumni, faculty, graduating seniors and their families at a reception in the garden of Maxwell Place.

The annual alumni banquet has been scheduled for six p.m. that evening in the ballroom of the Student Union, and in addition to the Half-Century Club awards, several other presentations will be made.

The annual "Alumnus of the Year" award will be made at the reunion banquet, as will the "Outstanding Senior" award, both awards and selections being made and presented by representatives of Alma Magna Mater, the student organization of children of alumni.

Speaker for the 1959 Alumni Banquet will be announced in the May Alumnus magazine, but the entire program promises to be one of interest and excitement.

All alumni are invited to remain over the week-end for the baccalaureate services on Sunday afternoon and the commencement program at ten a.m. on Monday morning, at which time your Alumni Association will present four $500 awards to four faculty members who have distinguished themselves in writing and research during the two-year period prior to January 1, 1959. This is one of the finest projects of the Alumni Association and has brought national recognition to your group for such outstanding recognition of the teaching profession.

The Alumni Office will mail detailed information to members of reunion classes a little later this spring, but in the meantime, if any group wishes to plan a special party or get-together during the week-end, you are requested to write to the office and so specify. Class secretaries will be notified of their duties in this connection.

Those planning to return in May are asked to fill out the blank printed below and return it to the office. Reunions are NOT confined to special classes and all alumni of the University are most welcome to return for the reunion week-end.

Hillenmeyer Is Named Alumni Member Of Board

Gov. Albert B. Chandler on Dec. 24 appointed Robert H. Hillenmeyer, Lexington, to be the alumni member of the University of Kentucky Board of Trustees.

The 37-year-old Hillenmeyer succeeds Frankfort attorney Louis Cox. He was selected by the governor from a list of three nominees of the University's Alumni Association.

Hillenmeyer, a 1943 graduate of the university, is a partner in Hillenmeyer Nurseries in Lexington. He is the immediate past president of the alumni association and a member of the board of the University Carnahan House, the faculty-alumni club.

Hillenmeyer is also a trustee of Villa Madonna College at Covington. His father, Louis Hillenmeyer, was a member of the University board for nearly 18 years.

ERNEST STEWART ADDRESSES JOINT ALUMNI COUNCIL

The existence of an "organization like the Kentucky Joint Alumni Council is a prominent, positive sign that alumni groups are indeed rising to the level of educational statesmanship," alumni officers were told recently.

Ernest T. Stewart, executive secretary of the American Joint Alumni Council, Washington, D. C., made these remarks at a dinner meeting of the Kentucky Joint Alumni Council, which held its annual session at the University on Oct. 27-28.

Speaking on "New Dimensions in Alumni Relations," Stewart listed the Kentucky group's activities as "the dimension of inter-institutional cooperation." The six state-supported institutions of higher learning in Kentucky are members of the council.

Other dimensions listed by Stewart were:

1. The alumni organization's relationship to its parent-institution is being "more sharply defined as a partnership to strengthen the college's higher education role in society," rather than owing "its first service to its membership," as most alumni groups did when they were first organized.

2. Alumni "are multiplying their own gifts" to the parent institution, by "helping attract support from others." Stewart said this is because "we have grown to the realization that financing higher education is a job demanding a broad approach and a comprehensive attack."

3. "The rapidly growing use of alumni as advisors to the institution." The speaker said that "alumni councils are now sitting down with the faculty, by invitation," to bring a broader perspective to the faculty.

4. A "definite revival in continuing alumni education," which includes alumni seminars, speakers for club meetings, and other educational services.

"The college or university which sets out to realize the potential support which is dormant in its alumni body must first expect to invest time, faith, and cash.

"You are a sure sign that alumni see as their first concern not just alma mater, but alma mater as a part

SECOND ALUMNI SEMINAR SET FOR JUNE 24-27

The University of Kentucky Alumni Association announces that its Second Annual Alumni Seminar will be held June 24-27 on the campus of the University.

"The American Constitution In A Changing Society" will be the general seminar topic, and top lecturers from the University faculty, the general alumni body and the legal profession will participate.

In view of the vast changes in American society in the last thirty years the topic will be of special importance, and with the Supreme Court under fire from several directions it seems unusually timely.

of American higher education," Stewart told the group.

"The American Alumni Council shares with you a strong kinship. All of us in alumni work stand ready to help your endeavor, and all in higher education must salute you," Stewart concluded.

M. O. Wrather, Council president, and Miss Helen King, vice president of the Council and director of UK Alumni Affairs presided at the banquet meeting.

Prof. Jesse Dukeminier, Professor of Law at the University of Kentucky, will serve as coordinator of the 1959 Seminar and will announce the complete program later in the spring.

All alumni of the University are invited to attend the Second Annual Seminar which, it is hoped, will be even more successful than the highly popular one which was presented by the Alumni Association last July.

The complete program details, including a reservation blank will be mailed to all alumni in May. Plan now to be present at the Second Annual Seminar on June 24-27.

Other features of the two-day meeting included a breakfast given by President Dickey at his home and a talk by Penrose Ecton, president of the Lexington Chamber of Commerce.

Dr. McAdams Honored By French Institute

Dr. William H. McAdams, emeritus professor of chemical engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, on Nov. 14 received the gold medal of the French Institute of Fuels and Energy before a meeting of members of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers at the Boston Museum of Science.

The award was established by the French Institute "to recognize the most distinguished achievements in the utilization of fuels and thermal energy." It was given to Professor McAdams in tribute to "the internationally known works of an eminent engineer from the United States."

Commenting on the award, Professor Walter G. Whitman, head of the Department of Chemical Engineering at M.I.T., said, "With singlehearted devotion Professor McAdams has studied, taught, experimented and theorized in the field of heat transfer phenomena for over 40 years, exercising leadership in its phenomenal development from crude approximations to its present status of an applied science.

"As a teacher, he has inspired generations of young men with his enthusiasm and insight. Many of his students have contributed through their student research to the body of research knowledge and have then gone on to become leaders in the profession. His publications in technical journals have been outstanding."

Professor McAdams graduated from the University of Kentucky in 1913 and in 1945 was awarded an honorary doctor's degree by UK. He first went to M.I.T. in 1914 as a graduate student and returned in 1919 to join the faculty. He was for many years a lecturer in chemical engineering at Harvard University, and since his retirement in 1957 has served as lecturer at the Institute.

Professor and Mrs. McAdams live at 31 Claremont St., Newton.

FIRST UK LAW CLASS RETURNS TO CAMPUS TO HELP PLAN 50TH COLLEGE ANNIVERSARY

FOUR OF THE SEVEN known survivors of the University of Kentucky College of Law's first graduating class stand before the tree they helped plant as a farewell gift to the University 48 years ago. The four, who will celebrate the 50th anniversary of the college at ceremonies next spring, are (l. to r.) Reed Wilson, former Lexington mayor; brothers Grover C. Thompson and Linzy O. Thompson, and Clem F. Kelly. The Thompsons and Kelly are still active in law practice in Lexington.

Under a towering black oak tree on the University of Kentucky campus recently, four men swapped stories about the fall 50 years ago when they were members of the first class in the UK College of Law.

The tree they stood under is part of their memories. It was a tiny sapling when their graduating class planted it as a farewell gift to the college in 1910.

Back to visit old campus haunts were Reed Wilson, Grover C. Thompson, Linzy O. Thompson and Clem F. Kelly, four of the seven known survivors of the class of 1910. They were among the 26 students who began their law study in 1908 under the direction of Judge W. T. Lafferty and two part-time instructors.

When ceremonies commemorating the anniversary are held next spring, many of the 1,291 graduates of the University's second oldest college will return to see old classmates and look at the changes the college has made.

There have been many. Judge Lafferty's makeshift faculty of two part-time instructors has grown to 10 full-time members, nine of whom have had experience in law practice and eight of whom have done graduate study beyond the LL.B. degree.

The law library, originally composed of the personal collections of Judge Lafferty and his assistants, now contains more than 60,000 volumes and is growing at the rate of about 1,800 each year.

Enrollment has increased from the original 26 to the present total of 138. There is no admission quota, but about 40 per cent of those who apply cannot meet academic requirements. Of the graduates, more than 97 per cent go on to pass the bar examinations and enter the profession.

These factors have greatly enhanced the reputation of the school. It has for 46 years been a member of the Association of American Law Schools, and since 1925 has been approved by the American Bar Association. Its law journal, published continuously since 1912, is the tenth oldest in the country.

In national moot court competition, the school has been represented in the finals five times in nine years, a record excelled by no more than three other schools.

Judge Lafferty served as dean until 1922. The college honored him by naming its present building for him when it was completed in 1937. Only four other deans have headed the college. Charles J. Turck was the second dean, serving for three years after the interim appointment of Judge Lyman Chalkley as acting dean from 1922-24.

Following Turck, Dean Alvin E. Evans held the office for 21 years, until 1948. He was succeeded by Dean Elvis J. Stahr Jr., and Stahr was followed by the present dean, William L. Matthews Jr.

Only Turck and Stahr among the former deans are still living. Turck is executive secretary of the Japan International University Foundation in New York. Stahr will soon take office as president of West Virginia University.

The success of the college is mirrored in the success of its graduates. They include five United States congressmen, 42 members of the Kentucky state legislature, two United States judges, four members of the Kentucky Court of Appeals, three state attorneys general, 14 assistant attorneys general, a governor, two lieutenant governors, and more than 230 other elective or appointive officials.

In Kentucky's last gubernatorial race, all of the three leading candidates—Democrats A. B. Chandler and Bert T. Combs and Republican Edwin S. Denney—were graduates of the UK law college.

The members of the pioneer class have also fared well. The Thompson brothers and Kelly are still active in law practice in Lexington and Wilson was mayor of Lexington from 1935 to 1940. Grover Thompson was the founder and first president of the college's alumni association in 1936.

DR. MERVIN J. KELLY RECEIVES 1958 JAMES FORRESTAL MEMORIAL AWARD

Dr. Mervin J. Kelly, formerly president and recently elected chairman of the Board of Bell Telephone Laboratories and one of the world's foremost scientists, has been named by the National Security Industrial Association to receive its 1958 James Forrestal Memorial Award.

He joins President Eisenhower, David Sarnoff, Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther and Admiral Arthur W. Radford who were similarly honored in past years for their accomplishments in furthering American defense. Dr. Kelly will make a major address at the NSIA Forrestal dinner on Jan. 29 when he will receive a gold medal and citation from NSIA.

Dr. Kelly is one of the nation's leaders in the field of industrial research. He began his career with the Bell System in 1918 as a research physicist. In 1936 he was named director of research. He became executive vice president in 1944 and president of the laboratories in April, 1951. Last December he was elected chairman of the board of directors.

Dr. Kelly has had wide experience in projects for the Armed Forces. In recognition of his World War II contributions, he was awarded the Presidential Certificate of Merit.

He is a member-at-large of the Defense Science Board. Among his many honors are the Air Force Exceptional Service Award and the 1953 Trophy of the Air Force Association, awarded "for distinguished service to air power in the field of science."

He has been named to receive the 1959 John Fritz Medal for his achievements in electronics and leadership of a great industrial research laboratory.

Dr. Kelly is also active in the field of education. He is a Life Member of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Corporation, and a member of its Executive Committee; a trustee of Stevens Institute of Technology; and serves on advisory committees at M.I.T., New York University, Case Institute of Technology, Columbia University, and the New York City Board of Education. He is also a member of the New York City Health Research Council.

He is a trustee and member of the corporation of Atoms for Peace Awards and is a trustee of the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation.

A native of Princeton, Mo., Dr. Kelly received the B.S. degree in 1914 from the Missouri School of Mines and Metallurgy, the M.S. degree in 1915 from the University of Kentucky, and the Ph.D. from the University of Chicago in 1918. He has been awarded eight honorary doctorates by American and European universities, including UK in 1946, in recognition of his distinguished contributions to science and defense.

Dr. Kelly has served on the board of directors of Bell Laboratories since 1944. In addition, he is a director of the Sandia Corporation, The Prudential Insurance Company of America, and the Bausch and Lomb Optical Company. He is also a director of The Economic Club of New York.

Dr. and Mrs. Kelly reside in Short Hills, N. J. They have a son, Robert, a daughter, Mary Katharine (Mrs. Robert von Mehren), and four grandchildren.

Marsh Is Elected To Ordnance Post

Henry N. Marsh, class of 1914, propellant consultant for Hercules Powder Company and former deputy assistant secretary of the Army, was elected a vice president of the American Ordnance Association at its annual meeting in December in New York City.

At the same time, the company announced that Marsh, a veteran of 41 years with Hercules smokeless powder development and production, will retire at the end of this year under the company's pension plan.

As vice president of the American Ordnance Association, Marsh will be responsible for the association's 88 technical divisions and committees which provide voluntary advisory guidance to U. S. defense services on all technical problems related to weapons and research, engineering, and production techniques.

Marsh has served as a propellant expert on numerous international liaison agencies for the U. S. government, both before and after his services as deputy to Assistant Secretary of the Army Frank H. Higgins in 1955-56.

In the past decade Marsh has represented the United States in negotiations with European members of NATO for offshore procurement of armaments and in the facilities assistance program for NATO industrial preparedness. These assignments have required wide and frequent contacts abroad.

A native of Kentucky, he joined Hercules in 1917. Early in his career he was made assistant to the chemical director of the company at Wilmington, later becoming director of smokeless powder operations. In this capacity he was a pioneer in development and production of rocket propellants.

In October, 1956, Marsh received the Defense Department's highest civilian award, the Certificate of Appreciation.

In June, 1957, he was appointed one of four national councilors of the Kentucky Research Foundation of the University of Kentucky.

New Registration Plan Announced By Elton

The University faculty has voted a change in its system of classifying and registering students.

Dr. Charles F. Elton, dean of admissions and registrar, recently announced the change.

Basically, the reclassification plan will involve the scheduling of students to classes at the end of the semester before they actually enroll in those classes. The plan is expected to be ready by next spring, when students will select their fall class schedules before leaving school for the summer vacation.

Preregistration, including the payment of fees and actual class assignment, would follow the preclassification plan as soon as it is feasible, Elton said.

UK experienced limited preclassification this fall in some of its large courses, such as freshman English, physical education and mathematics. The new plan is expected to reduce the confusion of registration and also lessen the cost involved.

The U.S. State Department has extended the University of Kentucky's Indonesian contract until 1961 and has allotted another $1,119,300 to finance it.

The UK contract to provide engineering and scientific aid to the University of Indonesia at Bandung was to have expired next year. The renegotiation of the contract will mean UK will get a total of $2,354,000 out of the project.

Dr. Merl Baker, co-ordinator of the contract, said further expansion of the contract is expected when it expires in 1961.

MEDICAL SCHOOL ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS ARE APPROVED

Admission standards similar to those at leading medical schools were recently approved by a faculty committee for the University of Kentucky Medical Center expected to be open in 1960.

President Frank G. Dickey said the requirements will "enable us to make selections to guarantee a very high quality student body."

Generally, applicants will be expected to have a liberal arts degree and an academic standing in pre-medical work of 2.75 or higher, based on a 4-point scale.

The medical school in full operation will admit approximately 75 students a year. The University has no figure on the number of possible students in the colleges of dentistry and nursing.

Applications will be accepted after next June 1 with the deadline Feb. 1, 1960.

The University said it would select students who show promise of making the best possible physicians. Applicants will be judged on total qualifications and in comparison with other applicants.

Preference will be given Kentuckians but a limited number of out-of-state candidates will be admitted each year.

A University committee on Medical College admissions advised students that a fundamental education in physics, chemistry, biology and English is essential.

PRESS CLUB STARTS MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

Dr. William Moore, Associate Professor, School of Journalism at UK, has been appointed chairman of a committee to draft a constitution and bylaws for the proposed Central Kentucky press club.

A temporary name accepted for the group, pending further suggestions, is Press and Radio, Television of Central Kentucky.

An active membership campaign began in December, with letters going to all persons eligible for membership.

$1200 In Scholarships Goes To Judging Teams

Members of the University livestock and meat judging teams received a total of $1,200 in scholarships at the annual Block and Bridle judging team banquet on Dec. 9.

Joe Brands, Fern Creek; Charles Schorer, Hawesville, and Robert Kemp, Greensburg, received $100 each from the Fischer Packing Co. after finishing the fall season as top judges on the meats team.

Also receiving $50 awards from the Fischer company were Jim Green, Rumsey; Robert Megibben, Paris; Robert Rogers, Russellville, and Gene Spicer, Lexington, team members.

The livestock team got $100 contributions from Farmers Elevator Co., Owensboro; Breeders Supply Co. and Livestock Health & Supply Co., both of Lexington, and the Kentucky Angus Association and the Kentucky Shorthorn Association. Field Packing Co., Owensboro, gave $200.

Recipients of the livestock team awards were Othal Shimmfessel, Winchester; George Brown and Maurice Ham, Olmstead; Randall Wood, Irvine; David Wynn, Georgetown; Doug Henshaw, Henshaw; Joe McCarty, Eddyville, and Dean Wilmoth, Cecilia.

Principal speaker was UK President Dickey.

Special Class Enrolls High School Artists

Young artists in the Lexington area—one selected from each of about 30 high schools within a 20-mile radius of the city—have begun a special course of art training at the University of Kentucky.

The course is sponsored by the Lexington Chapter of the Council of Jewish Women and is designed to provide professional instruction to the outstanding young artists of the area.

Under the direction of Raymond Barnhart, associate professor of art, the students are tackling a university-level course of instruction.

ELECTRONIC COMPUTER EQUIPMENT AIDS UNIVERSITY INSTRUCTION AND RESEARCH

By JOHN EGERTON

A layman observing the intricate feats of an electronic computer is prone to describe it as "the brain."

Dr. John W. Hamblen, who directs the University of Kentucky's new Computing Center, has a different name for it.

"It's an idiot," he says.

Hamblen is quick to explain his terminology. "This machine doesn't think; it has to be told what to do, and if you tell it something wrong, it gives a wrong answer or stops running."

"But if you give it the right information," he says, "it's a whiz."

"Whiz" is a gross understatement. Among other things, the device—technically described as an IBM 650 magnetic drum data-processing machine—can make 78,000 additions or subtractions, or 5,000 multiplications, or 3,700 divisions or 138,000 logical arithmetical decisions in the course of one minute.

The softly-purring 650, along with several auxiliary machines which make up the center, was put into full operation last month. It will be used primarily for research and instruction.

As a research tool, it will be available to all departments of the University. Its swift calculations will help to solve problems which previously have been too complex or too time-consuming, thus bolstering UK's already-strong research program beyond its present contract value of $3.5 million.

For instruction, credit courses within the regular curriculum and non-credit short courses are being conducted on use of the center's facilities.

The University rents the computing equipment from the International Business Machines Corporation for $2,000 per month. The regular commercial rental fee is $5,000, but IBM pays the $3,000 balance as an educational contribution. The machine costs about $200,000, but by renting the University can change to more advanced models when they are made available, Hamblen said.

Money for the rental was made available through an appropriation by the 1958 Kentucky General Assembly. An 11-man advisory committee headed by Dr. Leo M. Chamberlain, vice president of the University, oversees the work of Hamblen and his staff of five persons.

How does this complex bit of machinery work?

Simply stated, it solves long mathematical problems by reacting to a series of instructions fed into it on cards with holes punched in them. The actual step-by-step process is much more complicated.

After researchers have gathered and analyzed data on a problem, a "flow chart," or outline of logical solution, is prepared. From this a series of instructions called a "program" is written. This is then translated from words into figures, and the figures are punched onto cards (at the rate of one per second) by a key-punch operator.

Each card carries one instruction, or bit of information. Since each is independent of the others, they do not have to be arranged in any particular order, and once all the instructions in the program have been punched, the problem is ready to be solved.

Any errors in the programming are removed by a process known as "debugging." In this the cards are run through the machine, and if incorrect instructions have been given, the machine may stop or give incorrect answers. The faulty cards are then removed and the error is corrected.

When the corrected program is put into the computer the cards zip along at high speed. Information from each card is stored on the magnetic drum, a cobalt nickel plated cylinder about four inches in diameter and 16 inches long. Spinning at the rate of 12,500 revolutions per minute, the drum can file away 22,000 bits of information in its maze of circuits and retain them until they are needed.

After all the information is stored, the machine begins its step-by-step Hamblen, left, director of the Computing Center, and UK Vice President Leo M. Chamberlain watch every move. The machine proved hard to beat. On more serious problems, the computer can do long calculations that would require many hours of work with a desk calculator. It is being used for instruction and research.

Dr. Scherago Receives $47,916 Study Grant

Dr. Morris Scherago, head of the University Bacteriology Department, has been given a $47,916 grant to continue for three years his study of the sensitivity of white blood corpuscles to micro-organism products.

The grant comes from the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases of the United States Public Health Service.

The Kentucky Heart Association has granted $3,260 to Dr. Scherago to support a study of rheumatic fever.

The $47,916 grant calls for continuation of a research project in which Scherago and Dr. H. E. Hall, research associate, developed a white corpuscle test for diagnosing tuberculosis.

Studies are now under way to perfect the sensitivity test, which Scherago and Hall believe is more reliable than the skin test now used.

Studies are also under way to learn about white blood corpuscle sensitivity in connection with other diseases.

Dr. A. J. Whitehouse, 381 S. Lime, Lexington obstetrician and former student of Dr. Charles Barkenbus, has requested the Alumni Association to carry a notice to all former students of Dr. Charles Barkenbus to the effect that many of his former students are interested in making a gift to him.

Dr. Barkenbus has been at UK close to 40 years and has made a great contribution to many of his students.

Dr. Whitehouse will receive contributions for the gift and also will welcome suggestions as to the type of gift to be presented.

Make checks payable to Barkenbus Fund, A. J. Whitehouse, treasurer. Please send as soon as possible as the gift should be made during commencement exercises in May.

NEW BOOK BY DR. THOMAS CLARK TELLS OF WESTWARD MOVEMENT

"Frontier America" is the title of a book by Dr. Thomas D. Clark published in January by Charles Scribner & Son, New York. Dr. Clark is head of the University History Department. The book details the westward movement across the continent over the period 1740-1910.

It begins with the period leading up to the French and Indian Wars, with the "westward movement" in Maryland, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia and the Carolinas, Dr. Clark said.

It then deals with "breaking into the Ohio Valley," including Kentucky, Tennessee and Ohio. This segment "has a lot of Kentucky history in it," he said. In fact, Kentucky furnishes the central theme of the period.

The latter half of the book deals with such subjects as opening of the Santa Fe Trail, the Mexican War, Oregon Trail, opening of the Northwest, Gold Rush, settlement of California, Utah, cattle drives, the "sod-house frontier," etc.

"My big objective was to really trace the expansion of the American people across the continent, and to deal with various influences that went into the American personality and civilization.

"I tried very hard to maintain a balance between social and political history, with some attempt to take

New Co-op House Given Weldon Name

The University Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees in November named the new co-operative house at 635 Maxwellton Court the Myrtle Weldon Co-Operative House in honor of Kentucky's former home demonstration leader who served for 31 years.

The committee also approved a recommendation of College Foundation, Inc., Henderson, regarding placement of a plaque honoring the late Carl A. Dempewolf, former member of the Board of Trustees, in the proposed Henderson Center building.

into consideration military history," he said.

The book contains 856 pages, with a large number of maps and illustrations, including two from Kentucky—the State House in 1800 and the Kentucky Gazette.

Dr. Clark said the book was written as a "trade book" as well as a textbook. There are no footnotes.

He said he had been doing research for "Frontier America" from the time he got into the field of history, consulting source material that would fill a house.

A great deal of the text is devoted to relations between the white man and the Indian.

The book also deals with international relations—first as the British pushed back the frontier, and later as the United States spread westward.

Dr. Clark said he tried to make the book readable and also to give readers a sense of the frontier movement and its effects on people then and now.

"The frontier still is very much a part of our lives," he said.

Other books by Dr. Clark include "The Kentucky," of the Rivers of America series; "The Rampaging Frontier," "Petticoats and Plows," and "Southern Country Editors." He also wrote "History of Kentucky," a textbook.

The third volume of his five-volume "Travels in the South" is due for publication this year.

PROGRESS AND PROBLEMS DURING PRESIDENCY ARE DESCRIBED BY DONOVAN IN NEW BOOK

UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT EMERITUS HERMAN L. DONOVAN'S new book, "Keeping the University Free and Growing," gets a critical review by two of the author's former classmates, William H. Townsend, left, and Alfred L. Crabb, right. Dr. Donovan, center, was honored at a Carnahan House dinner just before the book was published. The volume deals with the progress and problems of his administration from 1941 to 1956.

Herman Lee Donovan, "Keeping the University Free and Growing," Lexington, University of Kentucky Press, 1959. Forward, Preface, XI, 144 pp. Appendix. $4.00.

Review by Dr. A. D. Kirwan
Professor of History
University of Kentucky

The title of this book might well have been "From One Crisis to Another," for President Donovan had been in office less than six months when the country was plummeted into war, and adjustments had to be made at the University, first to a disappearing student body, and then to specialized training programs for armed forces personnel. With peace came virtually a deluge of returning students, and the crisis of scarcity turned into one of overcrowding. Then came, in rapid succession, a law suit and legislative investigation precipitated by a few disgruntled faculty and alumni, a Court of Appeals decision declaring that faculty salaries were subject to constitutional limit of $5,000, a Federal Court order ending segregation at the University, a move by politicians to influence staff appointments and to bring faculty under the control of the Division of Personnel in the State Government, and finally, the basketball scandal.

It seems a miracle that one man could have survived, physically, mentally, and morally, all the perversities with which President Donovan was tried; yet, survive them he did, with ever increasing prestige and growing stature. To add to his difficulties, his health was uncertain during much of the time; so much so that those of us who worked closely with him at first feared that each new crisis might precipitate a complete breakdown. But we soon learned that his body and soul thrived on combat, and that his illnesses occurred generally in periods of calm and smooth sailing for the University. So remarkable was this coincidence—if it was a coincidence—that whenever he became ill we almost wished for a new battle which might restore his health.

When Herman Donovan took over the presidential reins in July, 1941, the University had a faculty numbering fewer than four hundred, a student body of about six thousand, a physical plant valued at 8 1/3 millions, and an annual budget of about 3 1/3 millions. When he retired fifteen years later the faculty had almost doubled in number, the student enrollment had grown by a third, the physical plant had increased in value five-fold, and the annual budget had increased more than three-fold. These are cold figures with which to measure the growth of the University under such a warm-spirited president. But they are impressive figures, even to one who is forewarned that quantitative growth does not always measure qualitative achievement.

During the same fifteen year period almost half a million volumes were added to the library. A College of Pharmacy, a School of Journalism, a School of Home Economics, and a College of Adult and Extension Education were established. And, finally, for good measure and as a valedictory achievement, President Donovan persuaded the Board of Trustees and, ultimately, the legislature, to establish a Medical Center including a School of Medicine, a School of Dentistry, and a School of Nursing.

Impressive as are these measures of growth there can be little doubt that Dr. Donovan regards them as of secondary importance. The improvement of teaching and research was his prime target. He early began the task of recruiting a young, vigorous, ambitious group of scholars. That his efforts bore fruit, the growing prestige of the University bears witness. If there is not a present faculty member quite as celebrated on the campus as were Ezra Gillis, W. D. Funkhouser, E. S. "Red" Farquhar, or W. S. "Bullneck" Webb in my own student days, it is probably because the University is so large and the number of distinguished scholars and fine teachers so numerous that it is no longer possible for universal acclaim to center on a few. Having rounded up his "bright young men" President Donovan fought with the legislature for larger salaries for them solution of the problem as outlined in the program. Answers are automatically punched on the appropriate cards and these are deposited at the machine's outlet.

The cards may then be put through a sorter, where they are rearranged and prepared for recording the solution. Usually, however, the figures need only be translated back into the desired form by the accounting machine and the problem is solved.

All this may be done in a matter of minutes, depending upon the number of cards involved. The biggest job, that of writing the program, may take months of work, even for highly experienced personnel. Since similar problems which follow the same logic may be solved with the same program, the writeups are filed for future reference or circulated to others who might be able to use them.

The writing of difficult programs requiring long months of work can be justified only if the problem to be solved would take longer by manual means than by use of the computer, or if the same program will be used often enough to justify the initial investment of time.

To illustrate the utility of the 650, Hamblen related this problem:

Fifty-one instructors at a college had to be assigned to teach 117 course sections. The schedule was complicated by the fact that many of the instructors were part-time workers. Given the times of the classes and the availability of the instructors, the machine produced a schedule in five minutes, guaranteed to have no conflicts and suited to the various personal schedules of each instructor.

The program used to solve that problem is flexible enough to be applied to any situation of a similar nature.

Hamblen predicts a great future for the UK Computing Center, and he should know whereof he speaks. Before coming to the University he established a computing center at Oklahoma State University and directed its operations for two years. During that time his staff was doubled. The 34-year-old director has master's and doctor's degrees in mathematics from Purdue University.

DONOVAN'S BOOK

and for better library facilities where they might pursue research. He fought with trustees, who on rare occasions did not agree on what the faculty regarded as their prerogative. He fought with politicians who attempted to bring faculty under political control.

What is the greatest menace Dr. Donovan sees to the continued growth and freedom of the University? It is the subtle but quite alarming encroachment of the state bureaucracy on the age-old jurisdiction of the Board of Trustees. He points out that the Board cannot today submit a budget directly to the governor or legislature, but must submit it to a faceless Department of Finance where requests are modified by "those who frequently have little concept of the needs of the University." The Board cannot, he goes on, decide where a new building shall be placed, or even what buildings shall have priority. "It cannot purchase a piece of equipment or a book for the library or food for its dining halls." He calls on the people at large to "exercise their influence to halt this creeping paralysis that will sooner or later destroy the freedom of our institutions of higher learning."

According to Dr. Donovan, the one indispensable quality a university president must possess is courage—courage to resist pressure from whatever direction it might come. "A man who cannot withstand pressure," he says, "has no business being a college president. To yield to all the demands that are made upon him in a single year would wreck his institution." In this one thought he has struck the keynote of his own career. Whatever shortcomings President Donovan may have his courage and his integrity are above challenge.

Dr. Donovan writes a clear and smooth-flowing narrative. His story is an interesting one, and it is told with restraint and dignity. This is all the more remarkable to one who knows how strong his emotions are, and how deeply he was stirred at the time by many of the events he discusses so objectively here.

Some years ago at a Founders Day ceremony at the University the thought was expressed that the true founders of the University are not merely those who arranged for and presided at its birth almost a century ago; rather are all those founders who down through the years have made contributions of great value to the University in preserving and cherishing and nurturing it. As he lays down his burden in a period that may be likened to calm after a storm, Herman Donovan may rest secure in the knowledge that his name will be in the forefront of the most illustrious of this legion.

A brief but revealing foreword is written by Vice-President Leo M. Chamberlain, who was President Donovan's loyal and able Chief Executive Officer during most of his term as President.

ALUMNI CLUB MEETINGS

CHRISTIAN COUNTY

The Christian County Alumni Club held a dinner meeting in November at the Hopkinsville Country Club. William McConnell, President, was in charge of arrangements and introduced the speakers. Smith Broadbent, Cadiz, and Miss Helen King, Director of Alumni Affairs, addressed the group concerning the total University program and urged the participation of all alumni in University affairs. Forty alumni in the area were present, and the film, "Parade to the Championship," narrated by Coach Adolph Rupp was shown. Officers, elected for the coming year were: Charles Dorroh, President, and John Blane, Secretary-Treasurer.

WARREN COUNTY

A dinner meeting of the Warren County Club was held at the Helm Hotel, Bowling Green, in November. Harry B. Lane, President, was in charge of arrangements and introduced Miss King who presented an interesting talk on the total alumni program of the University and the various reasons why constant interest of the alumni is needed in order to promote the cause of public higher education in Kentucky. Approximately forty-five attended and at the close of the meeting, an election of officers was held. Mrs. Robert Smith is the new president of the club and Miss Frances Anderson was elected secretary-treasurer.

By KEN KUHN
UK Sports Publicity Director

"The Master has had his arm around us . . ."

Thus Adolph Rupp, a "master" of sorts himself in many peoples' minds, summed up the amazing first half of the 1958-59 Kentucky basketball campaign.

As the "Fledgling Five" broke for semester exams after amazing the cage world by surging to the number one spot in all national rankings on a 14-1 record, the fabulous Baron admitted to anyone who would listen: "I'll be frank with you. . . . These kids have surprised me as much as the next guy. With only Johnny Cox back from our National Championship five of last season, nobody expected this bunch to win—even I didn't believe they could win consistently.

"They all seem to think they are All-Americans and every one of them apparently believe the thousands of fans in the stands are voting every game on whether they are to be ranked number one," Coach Rupp explains. "That's a fine thing in reality because, more than any one other thing, I believe our success is due to the support of the people of Kentucky and the winning tradition they have instilled in our basketball teams."

The Baron left little doubt that he attributed the spirit of winning as responsible for lifting a very average team to NCAA Championship heights last year and carrying their 1959 "Fledgling Five" successors out of predicted obscurity to a pinnacle of fame that promises to surpass some of the teams of the "Golden Era."

Through the first 15 games of a pitfall-laden schedule of "pointing" opponents, the latest edition of Rupp-men had surprised the nation's experts by forging a record that showed only a lone upset at the hands of unheralded Vanderbilt (now 7-7 on the season) to mar an otherwise perfect mark.

Boasting only All-America candidate Johnny Cox back from their championship five, the Wildcats rallied around their star and were moulded by Rupp into a fearsome combination despite sophomoric inexperience. By mid-January, the old master had utilized no less than eight different starting combinations—the greatest shuffling in the memory of long-time fans and the most use of bench strength since the post-war days when a pair of All-Americans occupied substitute roles.

Although not even Coach Rupp himself would point the finger at five of the fighting Wildcats and say "you are the starting bunch," out of the shuffling a lineup emerged that seemed hard to beat if and when all were "hot." The combination had the old pro, Cox, at forward along with Bill Lickert of Lexington Lafayette. The guard spots were manned by Sid Cohen and Bennie Coffman, a pair of junior college products brought in on a gamble aimed at producing immediate help for the graduation riddled ranks. Occupying the center post most consistently and efficiently was big Don Mills, 6-7 Berea, Ky., native.

Standing by ready to step into the breach in case anyone hit a slump were some of the nation's best reserves, men like diminutive guard Dick Parsons, forward Bobby Slusher, centers Phil Johnson and Ned Jennings, guards Lowell Hughes and Al Robinson and forward Howard Darden, the latter an Indiana product who is one of the few out of state boys on the '59 Wildcat team.

Virtually obscured by the direction of the national limelight of publicity on his teammates is a lad by the name of Carroll Burchett. You see his name carried on the roster in the official UK press and radio brochure, but it's a safe guess that only a handful of the thousands of fans who have watched the Kentuckians play know he even exists.

Carroll is a 6-4 red-haired mountain lad from the Eastern Kentucky community of Fuguet. He started for Flat Gap High early last winter and then entered the University in February. Although he became eligible at the start of the second semester this year, he asked Coach Rupp to hold him out—a rare thing in basketball though common in football. Burchett looked good as a Kentucky freshman last year and he is being counted on to make up for the absence of Cox next season.

There were a lot of thoughts about next season even before the present campaign got underway. The experts figured 1958-59 would be the year to "get Rupp." After all, they reasoned, The Baron would be without the services of four starters and six key reserves off a "lucky" team that had surprisingly walked off with the NCAA title. Added to that, it was explained, Kentucky would be "on the spot" as never before because of the reputation gained by winning a record fourth National Championship.

Even Coach Rupp remarked "They better get us this year. . . . We are only a year or two away from being a real good ball club."

Apparently with more faith in the coaching ability of Mr. Rupp than in honest confidence in Kentucky's young ball club, the experts nevertheless failed to count the Wildcats completely out of the Southeastern Conference picture. The nation's coaches, sports writers and broadcasters picked up the cue and paid even greater tribute to Coach Rupp and the name that he has made for Kentucky by ranking them third in the nation in pre-season ratings.

It was hard, however, for even the most faithful follower to see how the neophyte Wildcats could escape with any of their nine lives in the face of the toughest December schedule of any club in the country. The fact that they rolled unchecked over a host of nationally ranked opponents warmed the hearts of friend and enemy alike.

Florida State, a coming Dixie power, offered the first test of the re-built Kentuckians in a game at Memorial Coliseum December 1st. Although the Seminoles made a close game of it the first half when the "new look" Cats were jittery and slow in warming up to their task, in the end it was the same story that has blessed Kentucky basketball teams since 1926—UK won, 91-68, and thereby notched a 31st consecutive season opener victory. Cox gave immediate notice of his All-America candidacy by poking in 27 big points and plucking 24 important rebounds off the boards in a great exhibition.

Last season, Temple had given the Wildcats two of the biggest scares of their lives—succumbing by an 85-83 count in a triple overtime battle at Lexington and later losing by the margin of a single point in the national semi-finals. But the Owls big spark-plug, Guy Rodgers, was gone and an easier time was forecast as the Kentuckians made their first road jaunt of the season. Such was not the case, however, as Bill (Pickles) Kennedy led his club to a 41-34 halftime lead. In the end, clutch-shooting Cox and his Wildcat mates pulled victory out of the fire and won going away, 76-71.

Two nights later at Duke, it again took a great second half rally to come out on top. This time it was Brooklyn-born Sid Cohen who lighted the fire under a good Blue Devil band with 19 vital points and a display of the form Rupp had gambled on in bringing him to the Blue Grass country.

With invaluable confidence gained from three straight wins, particularly the comeback efforts on the road, Kentucky returned to Lexington for a six-game home stand. Southern Methodist, which had knocked off UK last season, threw up a tight zone defense, only to find that Bill Lickert knew the answer. Lickert's 23 points led the Wildcats to a 72-60 decision.

The St. Louis tilt that came next on the schedule long will be remembered as one of the high points of the "Fledgling Five" campaign. Making the first of three appearances before a national television audience in NBC's new "TV Game of the Week" series, Kentucky soundly trounced the ninth-ranked Billikens, 76-57, in a scintillating exhibition of shooting and stout defensive play. Again it was the inimitable Cox, at his best when the going is the toughest, who starred with 27 points and 20 rebounds.

Revenge victim number two for the season proved to be Maryland. The Terps who beat the Cats at College Park last year, were sent home on the short end of a 58-56 decision after a hair-raising overtime battle. Easy-going Bennie Coffman came off the bench to become the hero of the game as he scored a miraculous three points that sent the game into overtime. With Kentucky behind 54-51, Coffman drove in for a basket and was fouled on the play as the clock showed only three seconds remaining. He calmly sank the free throw and the Wildcats won out in the extra period.

For those who figured there were no more thrills left in the never-say-die systems of the fighting Wildcats, there were at least two more thrills coming.

The sixth annual University of Kentucky Invitational Tournament opened with the startling disclosure by Coach Rupp that two of Kentucky's starters—Bill Lickert and Don Mills—were in the hospital with virus infections. This stroke of adversity seemed to strengthen the Ruppmen, however, and they all but ran Ohio State out of the gym in the process of achieving a 95-76 victory. Mills was able to return to the lineup in time for the championship contest against West Virginia the next night and led the fired-up, smooth Wildcats to one of their greatest triumphs as they trimmed the favored Mountaineers, 97-91.

Crowds turned out in record numbers during the next week of action—no less than 42,000 witnessing Kentucky's conquest of Navy (82-69), Illinois (76-75) and Georgia Tech (72-62). The Illinois game at Louisville's Freedom Hall attracted 18,274—largest crowd ever to see a regular season game in the South.

All good dreams often have periods of interruption and any dreams of an undefeated season were shattered by Vanderbilt at Nashville on a fateful nite early in January. Catching the Wildcats in the midst of a slump that started in the second half against Illinois, the Commodores managed to paste a 75-66 shocker on the nation's number one team.

Relieved of some of the pressure built up by their amazing win streak, and revived by Coach Rupp's shocking lineup switch that put four sophoms in starting jobs, Kentucky started rolling again. LSU was victimized, 76-61, in a national TV game and a good Tulane outfit felt the sting of a 85-68 defeat.

Returning home, the Wildcats convinced the national TV millions for

Annual Alumni Football Banquet Closes Season

The University of Kentucky football season was officially wrapped up for the season on Nov. 24 at the annual Alumni Association football banquet.

Principal address of the evening was given by UK Vice President Leo M. Chamberlain. B. A. Shively, director of Intercollegiate Athletics, served as master of ceremonies. A floor show was presented by the freshman-varsity squad.

Dr. Chamberlain praised the Wildcats for their courageous performance during the season and exemplary conduct as students at the University. He lauded Football Coach Collier and his assistants for "the kind of leadership you represent."

UK Could Use Some Big Gifts

Try as we might, we could not help but be a little envious of Yale University upon reading this week that gifts to that fine institution during the 12-month period just ended reached a total of $33,047,068. The institution's endowment fund as of June 30 had a market value of $260,789,615.

With the University of Kentucky's Medical Center just in process of being established and realizing the dire need that will exist for chairs of surgery, heart and other departments, we naturally felt that this sum could just about take care of this new school's needs along this line for the first 10 years of its existence! Not that we have any idea of the financial requirements for operating a medical school, which is the state's responsibility, but the new center could come into being with little unnecessary worry if it were possible to visualize such an endowment fund.

Yale University got endowment funds of $23,465,000 last year. The previous high was in the 1929-30 period when $26,519,192 was added in gifts to take care of the school's financial needs. Income from the 1957-58 funds will go to help in increasing teachers' salaries and in providing larger pensions to retired members of the faculty and employees. The school also set another record in the 1957-58 school year by setting aside $2,878,000 for aid to needy students, an increase of some $400,000 over the previous year's figure.

Although the University of Kentucky is a state supported school, all friends of the institution realize that it can attain the greatness to which it is entitled only through gifts from the alumni and certain foundations which recognize its possibilities for greatness. The new medical center has every opportunity of reaching the heights. But this cannot come to pass unless large sums of money are contributed to the cause of education and medical advancement. A wonderful opportunity is offered to all to help make the University of Kentucky achieve the greatness to which it is by all rights entitled. This suggestion is offered to anyone who may be thinking in terms of contributing to worth-while causes during the next several months.

The above appeared as an editorial in The Lexington Herald on November 7, 1958.
