Senate Endorses Plan to Add 35 Students

By JANE BROWN
Assistant Managing Editor
Under the watchful eye of two closed-circuit television cameras, the University Senate, at its December meeting, approved the Tripartite Report. If the Board of Trustees and President Otis Singletary subsequently approve the senate's recommendation, 40 students will become University Senators.

The recommendation to increase student representation in the faculty senate came after lengthy and sometimes heated discussion. The proposal had already been discussed at a previous meeting and a "straw vote" had shown that most senators were against enlarging the present five-member student delegation. In view of that initial vote, many senators and students were surprised at the proportionally strong vote favoring the proposal (the final roll call vote was 99-59).

Some senators cited student interest as a deciding factor in the outcome. Also, as a result of student appeals to be allowed to attend the meeting, the location was changed to the Chemistry-Physics Building where two rooms equipped for closed-circuit television were open for students to view the proceedings.

Some persons present speculated that perhaps the roll-call vote for adjournment and the roll-call vote on the report had caused some senators to vote in favor of the report. Others said they hoped the senators would not be intimidated by the factors of television, students, and a roll-call vote. One senator added that he thought a roll-call vote was good in that it "requires a real exercise of responsibility."

The adopted proposal will replace the five current student representatives with 40, and decrease the number of faculty members from about 200 to 160. The students will be elected from each of the 14 colleges and the Graduate School, with the remainder being divided according to student population in those academic divisions. The Senate Council, the executive branch of the senate, would be composed of 12 faculty members and three students. Currently there are no students on the council.

The Tripartite Report, if approved, may also result in the reorganization of the Student Government Assembly. An appendix to the original report, prepared by nine senate members, outlines recommendations for a newly formed student assembly. If followed, the 40 student senators would also make up the student senate. According to Student Government President Steve Bright, the Student Government would concern itself only with purely student matters; it would as a whole not be acting on matters under the domain of the University Senate. This matter is subject to action by the trustees and the student government itself.

During the two hour discussion, both sides of the issue were presented by senators, student representatives, and some students who had been specially permitted to attend.

Opponents had five main arguments. They maintained that since students are transient, they would not have proper concern for the possibilities of future forums. They wondered about the constituency the students would be representing. They asked if academic decision making is student's business, and if it is, do students have any knowledge of what is entailed? And probably the most often-heard argument was that the senate would be rendered inefficient if the student membership were increased.

The advocates, initially the students present, countered these arguments and said that if the senate is really as interested in the student voice as they claim to be, they will increase the student representation in that body, where it would matter.

Robert Seidler, professor of law called it a "modest proposal" and said that it recognizes that the teacher knows a little more but not everything. He said, "I learn from the students, and strongly favor the report."

It was stressed that the senate should not fear the "monster student." They were assured that the student representation would be diversified and that they

Firing Disputes Continue

BY JERRY W. LEWIS
Assistant Managing Editor
Last semester's Forum on Faculty Hiring and Firing came at a time when UK students were beginning to worry about final exams and were just starting those class projects which had been assigned since the first of the school year.

A Seminar on Undergraduate Education earlier in the semester produced disappointing results when few students even attended the meetings.

However, it was a different story for the two-session forum which focused on the problem of "publish or perish" and included speeches by "fired" faculty and administrators who had to defend the hiring policies of the University.

Chairs were pulled out to seat the unexpected crowd of faculty and students which packed the large Grand Ballroom of the Student Center and cheers and boos often accompanied differences of opinion voiced throughout the night.

The main problem of the forum arose, however, when administrators refused to answer any specific questions concerning the cases of the "fired" faculty members on the forum.

Unfortunately, that's what most of the students were interested in and many walked away that evening frustrated that they could do little to change the status of some of their professors.

Although there was some talk at the forum concerned with organizing another meeting or taking some type of action to help the professors, there was little time to organize with finals only a week away.

Now that the students are back from vacation and the entire semester lies ahead, the forum may still be a topic of discussion.

"After the forum, I thought about, well, where do we go from here," said Bright, UK Student Government president who organized the forum.

"I think the forum definitely showed the need for legitimate student input into the hiring and firing policies of the University," said Bright. "I guess right now it just depends on individuals. They can continue to at least make their opinions known through letters to and appointments with certain administrators."

Dr. Wimberly Royster, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, who spoke at the afternoon session of the forum, said he was unsure about what the effects of the forum would be.

Royster said he thought that "some good and some bad" came out of the forum, mainly because "the cards were stacked on both sides."

Dr. Garrett Flickinger, the former head of the University Senate Privilege and Tenure Committee and another member of the forum panel, voiced a concern over the possibilities of future forums.

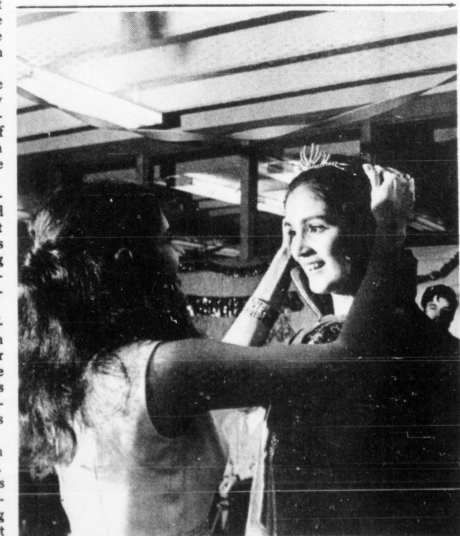

He explained that while "administrators feel that they should appear at such forums," what happened at the last one was that "students were attacking their (the administration) integrity, giving very little maneuvering room."

Looking in a somewhat different perspective, Dr. Byron Petrakis, an assistant professor of English who spoke at the forum because his contract was not being renewed, said the administration refused to discuss the real issue.

"The emotions at the forum were inevitable," said Petrakis. He noted that the real issue was the "primary stress upon publication as a major element in hiring and firing at the University, but all the administrators could do was discuss the rules and regulations."

The English professor explained that perhaps the forum could

TV Program to Feature Ecological Theme

BY JERRY BUCK
AP Television-Radio Writer
NEW YORK — Where do you go to shoot a film about a city driven underground in the future by air pollution?
Finding the long underground corridors necessary to the story was a major production problem in making the first science-fiction episode attempted by NBC's "Name of the Game."

Gene Barry, in a segment to be seen this Friday, is overcome by exhaust fumes from his car and wakes up in the year 2017.

The air is unbreathable and the three million people left on earth have taken to underground shelters and to interminable warfare. The United States, what's left of it, is ruled by an iron-fisted corporation.

Dean Hargrove, the producer, said, "What we had in mind was that everyone thinks technology will somehow save us. It's a safety valve. What we wanted to show is that technology may not save us at all, but may cause the problems. We show that the world of the future may well be a slum and a nightmare."

But where did they go for those underground corridors? After the Los Angeles International Airport turned them down, Hargrove said, "We finally wound up going to the Hyperion sewage plant at Plata Del Rey."

The desolate outdoor scenes were filmed in the section of Los Angeles swept by brushfires. The film was then washed in an orange dye to give the outdoor scenes an acrid, smoggy effect.

The show, called "LA 2017," is the first television script by author Philip Wylie, who stirred up a fuss some years ago with his indictment of "momism" in "A Generation of Vipers." His Crunch and Desistances were made into a television series in the 1950s, but he did not write the scripts.

"LA 2017" resulted from an ecology piece by Wylie that was published in the Los Angeles Times. Hargrove read it and called Wylie and suggested the story premise. Wylie received the show's customary fee of $7,500 for the script.

The show takes a strong stand in the ecology movement and accuses industry of polluting the environment and the scientific community and the government of standing idly by.

Senate Endorses Reform Plan

shouldn't assume that all students would vote alike.

Steve Bright said later that the "real importance of this proposal is that it will allow for a wide range of student attitude." He added that he was "most pleasantly surprised" concerning the outcome of the vote and said that he "certainly hopes the board passes it."

The Board of Trustees will meet next Tuesday, where the recommendation of the senate will be brought up. They will not vote on it, however, until their February meeting because changes in the governing regulations have to endure a waiting period.

At the January meeting of the Senate a proposal was introduced to return voting privileges to the ex-officio members of the body, who are mostly administrators. The motion was made with the purpose of relegating the senate to a "true" tripartite composition. It will be voted on at the next meeting.

This proposal is similar to the one made in the minority report of the Tripartite committee, presented by the only dissenting member, Dr. Stephen Diachun. If it had been adopted instead of the majority report, an advisory "super-board" composed of faculty, student and administration represented in equal numbers would have been instituted. Many senators during the discussions expressed a desire to see that proposal adopted as an alternative.

Tripartite Decision Reflections

The University Senate's recent Tripartite vote tells us a great deal about the sincerity and dedication of the majority of our faculty senators; the manner in which the students respond to this gesture will tell us even more about the student body.

As University Student Advisory Committee chairman John Nelson points out, the crucial step toward student power is not the granting of more student seats in the senate. The most important phase of the process will come when students rise to the challenge they have been presented. If students are able to supply the responsible and talented input they have promised, we will be in a better position to demand an even more nearly equal voice in our own government. In the meantime, in that threadbare old democratic tradition of patience, we must make the most of what little we have.

Much credit must be granted USAC and the Senate Tripartite Committee for having worked on the basic Tripartite proposals and lobbying for its passage. Especially effective were Rona Roberts, Howell Hopson, SG president Bright and John Nelson, whose persuasion and hard work were the determinants of the proposal's fate. Faculty senators Stan Smith, Tom Blues, Ken Guido, Ray Smith, administrator Lewis Cochran and others effectively presented the students' case.

Even more commendation must be granted the body of the Senate for its careful deliberation and considered action. In rejecting the usual Staley Adams cop out—"let's adjourn and forget the whole thing because that's what we've always done," the Senate exhibited a rare courage. By ignoring the obscene tactics of William Plucknett, the Senate raised itself from the below-the-belt maneuvers of the faculty politicians.

Unfortunately, the Senate's decision is not the final authority. Because of the great importance of the issue (it constitutes a change in the University's Governing Regulations), the Board of Trustees will make the final decision. Hopefully the Board will give prompt and favorable attention to the matter.

There is a strong temptation for one to speculate that the Senate's decision marks a turning point from the atmosphere of depression which has choked UK for the past three years. Perhaps both the faculty and the administration have realized that they must learn to live and work with students and with each other. Perhaps the loud clear voice of the majority of the Senate has announced the cure of the simplistic selfishness which has diseased the campus. Perhaps students will inject the necessary impetus to raise UK to a higher standard of educational awareness. Perhaps.

Impeach Bright

I would like to commend our illustrious Student Government president for again demonstrating just how interested he really is in students at this university. I refer specifically to his handling of the latest screw job perpetrated upon the student body by the Athletic Board. Mr. Bright exchanged half of something he had no right to give, namely half of the student allotment of tickets to the Kentucky-Oregon State basketball game on Dec. 22, for the priority to purchase half of what already belongs to the students in its entirety anyway, namely half of the normal student allotment of tickets to the Kentucky-Florida basketball game on Jan. 9. This sort of "deal" can only be matched in its ludicrousness by the sale of Manhattan by the Indians for $24.

As justification for refusing students admission to the Kentucky-Florida game on their I.D.'s, the Athletic Board has used the premise that the University is not "officially" in session at that time. The fact is that parts of the University are officially in session before Jan. 9. But even this is irrelevant. Whenever the day comes that students cannot attend an intercollegiate athletic event involving representatives of their school in a regular season athletic event on their campus, then intercollegiate athletics no longer have a place within the structure of a university. In addition to this, every member of the student body of this university has paid, through a portion of his tuition fee, for the right to attend such events at no further charge.

In the event that the Athletic Board refuses to reconsider its decision, I would call upon members of both the freshman and varsity basketball teams to support their fellow students and take a stand on the proper position of intercollegiate athletics within the University by informing the Athletic Board that they refuse to take the floor in any regular season home basketball game to which students are not admitted on showing a valid I.D.

In conclusion, I would suggest that Mr. Bright be subjected as soon as possible to impeachment proceedings for releasing for sale 2,328 student tickets to the Kentucky-Oregon State game.

The Greek World From Inside

By R. D. WINTHROP
English/Education Senior

After noticing an ad placed by IFC extolling the changing virtues of the UK Greek world, I can't resist a chance to add my two cents worth.

Yes—times, values, and even people change. The trouble is fraternities change a bit more slowly than the real world. As I recall some of the cherished memories of my temporal life as a local Greek—and in particular a tumultuous celebration of the death of Dr. King—I am thankful I finally chose the path less travelled. The decision-making process involved destroying a few myths of my own.

Myth No. 1: Living in a fraternity house is as cheap or cheaper than living in a dorm or apartment. It ain't, brother, it surely ain't. But on to less worldly things.

Myth No. 2: Fraternities are a way of bringing diverse people together. As long as they are reasonably wealthy, dress well, can make their grades, don't have terminal acne and are white. I discovered the best way to rush someone was by keeping him away from the rest of the "brothers"—someone was bound to find fault if a rushee was over-exposed.

Myth No. 3: Fraternities do not squelch individuality. Even beyond the consideration fraternities here are as homogeneous as possible, there is no way for an individual to remain autonomous. Approved "Greek-sheets" dictated election choices; long hair was something of a sacrilege; woe be unto him who also joins a left-wing political group . . . meetings, dress restrictions, everybody's-gotta-get-drunk, hell sessions (which are not a thing of the past) . . . every fraternity has its share of demands upon behavior. For me, it wasn't worth it.

Myth No. 4: Greeks perform a useful social function. With few exceptions, these services are semi-annual affairs which would never have happened in the first place if there wasn't the call of favorable public relations beckoning. With all the crap that is required of a fraternity man, there isn't time for real social involvement.

Believe it or not, there is real value in the Greek system, at least for some. I came out of my association with it with some of the finest friendships one could ever hope for. Other than that, the hassle wasn't worth the time, energy, or bread. All the impressionable young go-togethers considering pledging had best take a long and hard look around.

To the Editor:

All I can say about your editorial of November 30 (Nixon's Policies and Youth, or "Wanna Buy a Good Used Car?") is that I found it interesting not so much for anything it says but for its rhetoric. I found it especially interesting because the Kernel screams long and loud when anyone else uses such tactics.

Sihanouk Says Cambodia Has 'Liberation Army'

Editors Note: Norodom Sihanouk, former head of the Cambodian government, was deposed by a coup on March 18, 1970. He is presently in Peking where he is head of a government in exile, the United National Front of Cambodia. This article was cabled from Peking, special to the Pacific News Service.

PEKING—The United National Front of Cambodia now has its own liberation army composed of soldiers who are neither Viet Cong or North Vietnamese, the majority of whom do not even know what Communism is. I might just mention the following statement of the French reporter Xavier Baron, who spent several weeks in the territory liberated by our Front. He wrote in English in a bulletin released by Agence France Presse on the 28th of August: "Most of the people in the liberated areas had rural backgrounds. Their attachment to Prince Sihanouk had been sentimental at first. But it changed as the weeks passed and the families they left behind began to suffer from air attacks and to sometimes die in them. Some did not die in the meanings of the terms Marxism and Communism. They said, 'I am fighting for my Prince.' The guerrillas have two enemies—the Americans and General Lon Nol."

Your own countryman, Richard Dudman of the St. Louis Post Dispatch, similarly reported, "What I saw and heard during nearly six weeks as a captive in Liberated Cambodia convinced me that President Nixon's policies inadvertently were helping to create conditions for a people's war by a determined guerrilla front with strong popular support. I saw what appears to be a Cambodian people's movement, the National United Front of Cambodia. It is loyal not to the shaky government of Premier Lon Nol, but to Norodom Sihanouk. The Cambodian countryside, where most of the population lives, is being radicalized and quickly turned into a massive dedicated and effective revolutionary base. We have seen evidence of allegiance to Sihanouk, and of its counterpart, extreme hatred of the U.S. and President Nixon. American shells and bombs mean to Cambodians that the U.S. is waging unprovoked colonialist war against them. They see America as a would-be successor to the French trying to turn back the clock of history in the face of a swelling spirit of Asia for Asians."

These statements speak eloquently for themselves.

It is not difficult to see why Lon Nol and his regime are doing everything possible to hide the truth from world public opinion and from the American people, from whom President Nixon is now extracting more than $250 million annually to allegedly help Lon Nol repulse a foreign Communist invasion. On November 25, 1970, AP cabled from Phnom Penh that, "The Lon Nol government has refused to acknowledge the presence of any significant number of Cambodian communists or supporters of Prince Norodom Sihanouk. Censors have been heretofore instructed to cut almost all references to such anti-government elements out of dispatches filed by correspondents here."

Mr. Nixon's administration knows the truth, but it too is trying to hide it from Americans. The bombings by the U.S. Air Force against Cambodia have totally destroyed hundreds of Cambodian villages and dozens of Cambodian towns, causing hundreds of thousands of casualties including women, old people, children and infants. On some days, my country has seen hundreds of planes operating over our land as was confirmed by the November 25 AP Dispatch: "The U.S. now has about 500 planes for combat missions over Laos and Cambodia." The November 9th issue of Newsweek described the results of such an air strike: "When newsmen arrived to inspect the damage last week, they found no trace of the deep Communist bunkers described in Phnom Penh briefings, nor any other sign of a North Vietnamese occupation force. All evidence indicated that the massive air assault had done more damage to the Cambodian town than to the enemy. More and more U.S. planes have roared into action over Cambodia. The stepped up use of air power there has had an impact on the civilian population. Hospitals in Phnom Penh and many provincial centers are jammed with civilian casualties. One U.S. diplomat in Phnom Penh said, 'We are terribly aware that the destruction in civilian areas could swing the peasants into the arms of the Communists far more effectively than all of Sihanouk's rhetoric.'

It is my hope that what I have written here will be seen by responsible representatives of the American people in Congress so that they might give some thought to the terrible wounds being inflicted on my people by U.S. planes before they consider voting more credits to President Nixon's "protege," Lon Nol, who is plainly and simply a murderer of the Cambodian people.

It is very important that the U.S. consider what the relationship between our two peoples will be in the coming years. The unpopular and unpatriotic fascist regime of Lon Nol continues to survive only by grace of the money, weapons and planes supplied to it by the U.S. Unless the U.S. Congress makes it impossible for Mr. Nixon to continue his wholehearted support of Lon Nol, our people will never be able to forget what has been done to them after they finally become free.

Book Examines Power of Military

"The Pentagon Watchers: Students Report on the National Security State," Edited by Leonard S. Rodberg and Derek Shearer, Doubleday/Anchor.

By TOM RIDDELL
Dispatch News Service
"The Pentagon Watchers" is another addition to the current critique of the American Warfare State. It is a compilation of papers that resulted from the National Security Summer Research Project during the summer of 1969.

The first two sections of the book on "State Power" and "Intervention" are timely within the context of the current debate over the Nixon doctrine and American foreign policy—not to mention the Indochina War. The first two essays by Robert Borosage, now at Yale Law, and Marcus Raskin, co-director of IPS, author and anti-draft conspirator (of the Boston 5), respectively, provide an excellent historical presentation of the formation of the Institutions of the National Security State in the years following World War II.

And where has this National Security State and its propaganda machine led us? To intervention and to Vietnam cum Indochina. Our proneness to intervention is entirely consistent with our foreign policy since World War II. As William Stivers (a Reed graduate) points out, we assume a world of Communists and us, the bad versus the good. Simple perhaps, but nevertheless a fairly accurate description of what American foreign policy has been concerned with for the past 20 years.

The final section of the book is entitled "Arms and Industry" and concerns itself with dynamics of the military-industrial complex (yes, Virginia, there is a military-industrial complex). It contains five insightful essays on the process of military contracting from initial research and development right on through to the completion of projects—complete with cost over-runs and poor performance.

Overall, the book is an intelligent and critical examination of the American military establishment.

Franz Kafka's

THE TRIAL

Produced and directed by Orson Welles

A master's film, from one of the great novels of our age of anxiety, Orson Welles' stern interpretation of Franz Kafka's "The Trial" tells of a perfectly commonplace young man, Joseph K., charged with a nameless crime by unidentified accusers, who, in trying to disentangle reality from the nightmare engulfing him, becomes a symbol of modern man searching for a way out of his predicament. (English dialog.)

"... The dialog is mostly quite successful in conveying a sense of sinister schizophrenia—making sounds which sound reasonable, yet also steadily dissolving the distinctions between what is reality and what is individual or collective fantasy. Little by little, as Joseph K. is drawn into an obsession with his possible guilt, he and we learn more about the weirdly hierarchical world of the film. . . . The film has the close texture of madness. If MARIENBAD is a fantasy of obsession, THE TRIAL is a fantasy of an infinite asylum."

Big Tom Payne (54) sets a pick for Mike Casey (with the ball) in UK's 79-66 win over Georgia Monday. Casey scored 20 points and Payne grabbed 12 rebounds as the Wildcats won their fourth game in as many starts against SEC competition.

Rupp: Cats Have Solved Problems

By MIKE TIERNEY
Kernel Sports Editor

I think we're closer together now than we've ever been. In the last two games, we have understood each other better than we did before."

Adolph Rupp, optimistic as ever, sat in his office yesterday and reflected over UK's 10-2 record, which has been accepted by Wildcat fans with mixed emotions.

"You had a bunch of boys trying to make records of their own instead of trying to make team records," explained Coach Rupp. "But, now, they're together."

Although the 10th-ranked Cats have looked impressive at times, several glaring weaknesses were evident in losses to Purdue and Notre Dame and in uneasy victories over traditional pushovers Ole Miss and Mississippi State.

Specifically, critics have mentioned difficulty with the press and poor shooting as problems that the Wildcats must cope with if they are to successfully defend their SEC title.

No Big Problems

Yesterday, Rupp seemed unconcerned about the troubled areas and spoke as if the team had ironed out the problems.

"It (the press) bothered us some, but we have corrected it. It didn't bother us at all in our last two games," Rupp said.

"We've worked real hard on it in practice."

One reason for the slight increase in errors by the guards this year is that Rupp is emphasizing scoring from his backcourt men more than ballhandling. Last season, with Dan Issel and Mike Pratt providing the scoring punch on the front line, Rupp stressed a playmaking role from his guards.

Rupp discussed his fine array of backcourt players:

"Mike Casey is a far more powerful guard than any of the others. Casey can go get that ball for you."

"They're different guards, but they each fit into a certain category that will help the team," he said. Rupp chose Jim Dinwiddie as an example.

"Dinwiddie is more of a playmaker, as he proved last year," Rupp said. "This year, we need the shooters. He's as good a shot as most of these other fellas, but not like Casey."

"I go with a guard and use him in a tough position to hound someone," he continued. "I don't think it makes a bit of difference if (Terry) Mills or (Kent) Hollenbeck or anyone is playing here."

Parker Recovers

Typical of UK's shooting dilemma is the case of Tom Parker. Usually a superb shooter, the 6-7 junior fell into a 3-game slump, hitting only 40 percent of his shots.

However, Tom reversed the trend Monday against Georgia by connecting on 10 of 18 from the field.

"It's about time Parker had a good game," commented Rupp. "I thought he was having too much basketball with that European tour this summer. But, apparently, he's shook out of that."

The loss of Mark Soderberg, who quit the squad last week, has been offset somewhat by the outstanding play of Soph Jim Andrews. After failing to score a single point in his first three games, Jim exploded with a 19-point outburst against Oregon State and has continued to play well since then.

"Andrews has shows a tremendous improvement in the last few games," Rupp said. "I think Andrews attitude is different, and he's playing better."

"I think he's going to make a great contribution—maybe at forward, maybe at center. I just don't know."

Now that veteran forward Larry Steele has recovered from the broken thumb he suffered early in the season, and since soph Tom Payne is rapidly improving with each game, Adolph Rupp isn't worrying.

Wildcats Unbeaten in SEC

By DENNIS RUSS
Kernel Staff Writer

Despite its troubles, UK has climbed to the top of the Southeastern Conference standings with four straight league victories.

UK's first victory of the holiday season came over Oregon State, whose sophomore-studded lineup outshot and outrebounded its opponents. Providing the impetus for the Cats was Jim Andrews, with 19 points and eight rebounds.

The next encounter for the Wildcats was against twice-beaten Notre Dame in the traditional fullhouse shootout at Louisville's Freedom Hall. As in the past two years, the offensive show for the Irish was Austin Carr, the 6'3" All-American. Carr pumped in 50 points and was elected the most valuable player in leading Notre Dame to a 99-92 victory.

Although down by as many as 18 points, Kentucky fought gamely back behind Mike Casey's 25-point effort and managed to narrow the gap to five points late in the game. But it was "too little, too late" and the Wildcats fell victim to the Fighting Irish.

Against Mississippi, at Oxford, Kentucky embarked on its first SEC road trip, and for 28 minutes UK looked as though it had finally jelled. During that time, the Wildcats gained a 24-point advantage and seemed in the process of wrapping up a routine game.

Then UK fell apart and Ole Miss, led by super-scorer Johnny Neumann, made one of the most dramatic comebacks in recent UK history. Ole Miss led, 91-90, with 3:06 left in the game.

But thanks to "Mister Clutch," Mike Casey, the Cats regained some of their lost poise and managed to put the Rebels away, 103-95. UK regained its shooting touch in hitting 50.8 percent, with Casey getting 23 and Parker 21.

The first game of the New Year saw UK knock off Mississippi State with possibly its best clutch performance of the season.

Overcoming a 7-point halftime deficit, the Cats, with Casey and Tom Payne leading the way, were taken down to the wire and edged the Spartans, 79-71. The Wildcats seemed to gather courage from the thriller, as reflected in their next outings.

The score was 101-75 and losing Florida coach Tommy Bartlett was quoted as saying, "I don't know who is going to beat them."

Last Saturday at Memorial Coliseum, UK outran, outrebounded and outshot the visiting Gators. Casey scored 19 to lead a balanced attack and Payne hauled in 16 rebounds.

In its next encounter, against the Georgia "slow-it-down" Bulldogs, UK scored the first seven times it had the ball.

But with a 75-percent shooting average in the first half, Georgia stayed within range. In the final 20 minutes, the Dogs' shooting returned to normal, and the Cats breezed to a 79-66 victory.

Priests Deny Participation in Conspiracy

By The Associated Press
The Rev. Philip Berrigan, three other Roman Catholic priests and a former priest denied Wednesday they were part of a Washington's birthday bomb conspiracy or plotted to kidnap a presidential adviser. They said the charges were a government attempt to discredit opposition to the Vietnam war.

Berrigan, 47, the alleged mastermind of the plot, and five others were indicted Tuesday by a federal grand jury in Harrisburg, Pa. Asst. U.S. Atty. Guy Goodwin said the grand jury met again Wednesday on the case.

At arraignments Wednesday bail was set at $60,000 for Eqbal Ahmad, 40, a Pakistani who is a fellow at the Adlai Stevenson Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Chicago, and at $50,000 for four others.

Only Sister Elizabeth McAlister, 31, of Marymount College in Tarrytown, N.Y., was released on bail.

Berrigan, 47, a Josephite priest, remained at the Federal Correctional Institute in Danbury, Conn., where he is serving a six-year sentence for destroying draft records in Maryland. His brother, the Rev. Daniel Berrigan, 49, a Jesuit who is serving a three-year sentence at Danbury on similar charges, was named one of the seven conspirators who were not formally charged.

The plot outlined in the grand jury action called for blowing up heat tunnels connecting several federal buildings in Washington on Feb. 22, the birthday of George Washington.

The following day they allegedly planned to kidnap Henry Kissinger, the President's adviser on national security affairs. The maximum penalty is life imprisonment on the kidnaping charge, and five to 10 years and $10,000 penalties on the bombing charge.

Attorney William Kunstler visited the Berrigan brothers in prison Wednesday and released their statement which said the government's action was following a "tragic and outrageous course to stigmatize millions of morally dedicated opponents of our military involvement in Indochina as violent and deranged people."

The statement continued: "Thirty-eight years ago the Nazi party burnt the Reichstag in order to stampede the German people into supporting a policy of repression at home and militarism abroad.

"Yesterday, the government of the United States, for much the same purposes, created a grotesque conspiracy to kidnap a presidential assistant and blow up the heating systems of federal buildings in Washington.

"In 1933, the principal defendants were German and Bulgarian Communists—today they include Roman Catholic priests, ex-priests and nuns, as well as a college professor. The objective is a simple but deadly one—to destroy the peace movement by creating caricatures of those who oppose the war in Southeast Asia."

Kunstler said the Berrigan brothers view the charges as "a colossal blunder" which the government "has been stamped into" by accusations of a similar plot made last Nov. 27 by FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover.

Revs. Joseph R. Wenderoth 35, and Neil R. McLaughlin, 30, and the now-married former Josephite priest, Anthony Scoblick, 30, issued their denial of the charges after arraignment in Baltimore.

"To attribute kidnaping and bombing to priests who have neither the philosophy nor the resources to support such activity," they said, demonstrates "the desperation of men who have decided to stop at nothing in order to crush the antiwar movement."

The statement, released through their attorney, said the only conspiracy which they have participated in is "a conspiracy to foster life."

"We reject any attempt to discredit our fundamental commitment," it added.

Lawrence Cardinal Shehan, archbishop of Baltimore, visited them in jail. "The cardinal felt that they were his priests and that they were his responsibility," an archdiocese spokesman said.

Specific actions which the indictments said occurred as part of the conspiracy were a visit to underground heat tunnels in Washington by Philip Berrigan and Wenderoth, and a Sept. 20 discussion between Wenderoth and a General Services Administration engineer about the system.

The tunnel tour allegedly occurred less than a month before Berrigan's capture April 21. He and his brother jumped bail after their convictions and Daniel was captured Aug. 11.

The indictments also said that on June 29 and Aug. 24, Philip, who was then locked up at the Lewisburg, Pa., penitentiary, tried to communicate with Sister Elizabeth through messages.

have been better if it had been a real debate on the role of publications in undergraduate education, rather than attempting to deal with the specific cases of the individual professors.

Petrakis explained that he would like to see a series of such debates, perhaps simply in separate departments.

"There must be some differences in what should be required for research between the science departments and such departments as English and Political Science," explained Petrakis.

Petrakis said that he was not going to appeal his own case, although Dr. Gene Mason, assistant professor of political science, said he would appeal his "firing" before the University Senate Advisory Committee on Tenure and Privilege.

If Mason's appeal failed there, it could then be taken to a special hearing board and the hearing would be public. The final place where the appeal could be made would be the Board of Trustees.
