PREFACE

Old Capitol and Frankfort Guide is a product of the Federal Writers' Project of the Works Progress Administration in Kentucky. It is designed primarily as a catalogue of the contents of the Old Capitol Building which houses the Kentucky State Historical Society. The tours through the building are intended to expedite a trip for the casual visitor, while the catalogue is intended to aid the student or research worker who is interested in a more detailed study of the contents of the building. All objects in the building have been systematically renumbered according to the catalogue. Certain outstanding points of interest in the city of Frankfort are described and located in a chapter devoted to the city.

The editors particularly wish to acknowledge their gratitude for the guidance, assistance, and supervision of Mrs. Jouett Taylor Cannon, secretary of the Kentucky State Historical Society, Miss Nina Visscher, librarian, Miss Lockett Smith, curator, and Mr. Bayless Hardin, assistant librarian. Without their cooperation this work could never have been completed. They also appreciate the cooperation and assistance of Mr. Harry McChesney, president of the Kentucky State Historical Society, and publisher of the book. He has been a congenial and sympathetic friend throughout the life of the project.

TOUR THROUGH THE OLD CAPITOL BUILDING

The stately OLD CAPITOL, standing in what was in 1827 the very heart of Frankfort, is little changed in appearance since the early days when history was being made there. Acquired by the State Historical Society in 1920 and converted to its present use as a museum, the building contains a wide variety of antiquities, including military relics, historical paintings, documents, costumes, weapons, and household gear.

A massive double door, set within a broad, classically designed portico, gives entrance to the building. The floors of the wide hall are of "Kentucky River marble," polished by more than a century of use. On the walls hang paintings which recall Kentucky's historic past. Among these is a portrait of Landon Sneed, by Chester Harding, Massachusetts portrait painter who spent several years in Kentucky; Nicola Marschall's copy of the portrait of Daniel Boone by Harding; a portrait of Richard Menifee, said to be by Oliver Frazer, a pupil of Matthew Harris Jouett, Kentucky's "old Master"; portraits of Abraham Lincoln and Jefferson Davis, by unidentified artists; and a painting of the dramatic Simon Kenton's Ride by Walcutt.

Facing the entrance is a brass cannon, first captured at the Battle of Saratoga, later lost to the British by Hull's surrender of Detroit during the War of 1812, and recaptured by Kentucky troops at the Battle of the Thames. Just back of the cannon is a multi-barreled gun called a "street sweeper", used during the War between the States.

Rooms open on each side of the hall, that on the left leading to the LIBRARY (open to research workers), containing about nine thousand volumes, many of them now extremely rare. Among these is the Stephenson collection, presented to the Historical Society by Misses Mary and Martha Stephenson, in memory of their brother, the late W. W. Stephenson, historian of Mercer County; the Lewis Jones Library, containing rare English genealogical material; and the Willard Rouse Jillson collection of historical publications, including maps of the Kentucky Geological Survey. In addition there are many bound volumes of important newspapers of Kentucky and valuable source material contained in copies of tombstone inscriptions and Bible records. The society adds from time to time publications of other

State historical and patriotic organizations, as well as all available material relating to Kentucky. None of the books are circulated, but the library is in constant use by those engaged in historical and genealogical research.

The ARCHIVES ROOM, across the hall, contains a collection of State archives, dating from 1792, when Kentucky attained statehood, to 1915. These records, transferred from the office of the Secretary of State to the custody of the Historical Society in 1926, consist of bound volumes of executive and legislative journals and numerous documents kept in file cases. Military records, including letterbooks, pay rolls, certificates of service, and other data relating to Kentucky's part in various wars, covering a period of more than one hundred years, are also on file. These were transferred from the office of the Adjutant General to the Historical Society in 1935. Valuable source material is contained in tax lists, some as early as 1787, bearing the name "Tithables." These contain the names of white males over twenty-one years of age, with the amount of land, number of slaves, horses, and cattle, as reported annually from each county in the State.

Within the ROTUNDA, opposite the entrance on the main floor, is a section of the first railway track laid in the State in 1831. The stone sleepers, running parallel with the rail, proved unsuccessful, and were followed by the modern cross tie. There is a section of water pipe constructed of wood, a portion of Frankfort's first water system laid from Cedar Cove Spring in 1804. On the right wall is an old print of the First Ovariectomy Operation, performed by Dr. Ephraim McDowell in Danville, Ky., 1809. In the right wing of the transverse hall are three glass cases of mounted birds found in Kentucky.

Perhaps the finest architectural feature of the entire building is the graceful CIRCULAR STAIRWAY which rises from the floor of the rotunda to the balcony above. Designed of Kentucky River marble by Gideon Shryock, it is so constructed that the secret of its structure is the keystone at the top. On the circular walls of the stairway are engravings from the original edition of Birds of America by the great ornithologist, John James Audubon, and a map of Kentucky made in 1818 from actual survey by Dr. Luke Munsell. It was the first map to be officially accepted by the State.

On the walls of the rotunda balcony on the second floor are paintings by Kentucky artists. These include: Little Blonde Girl, an original by Frank Duvencck, a copy of Whistling Boy by the same artist, Brittany Woman Knitting by Dixie Selden, pupil of Duveneck, and two groups of water colors by Frankfort artists, Robert Burns Wilson, and Paul Sawyer. There are also marble busts of Henry Clay, Andrew Jackson, John J. Crittenden, and Gen. James Taylor, said to be the best work of Joel T. Hart, Kentucky's sculptor.

A glass case in the second floor hall contains the mohair lining of the great fur coat worn by George Washington at Valley Forge; another contains the uniform of Rear Admiral Lucien Young.

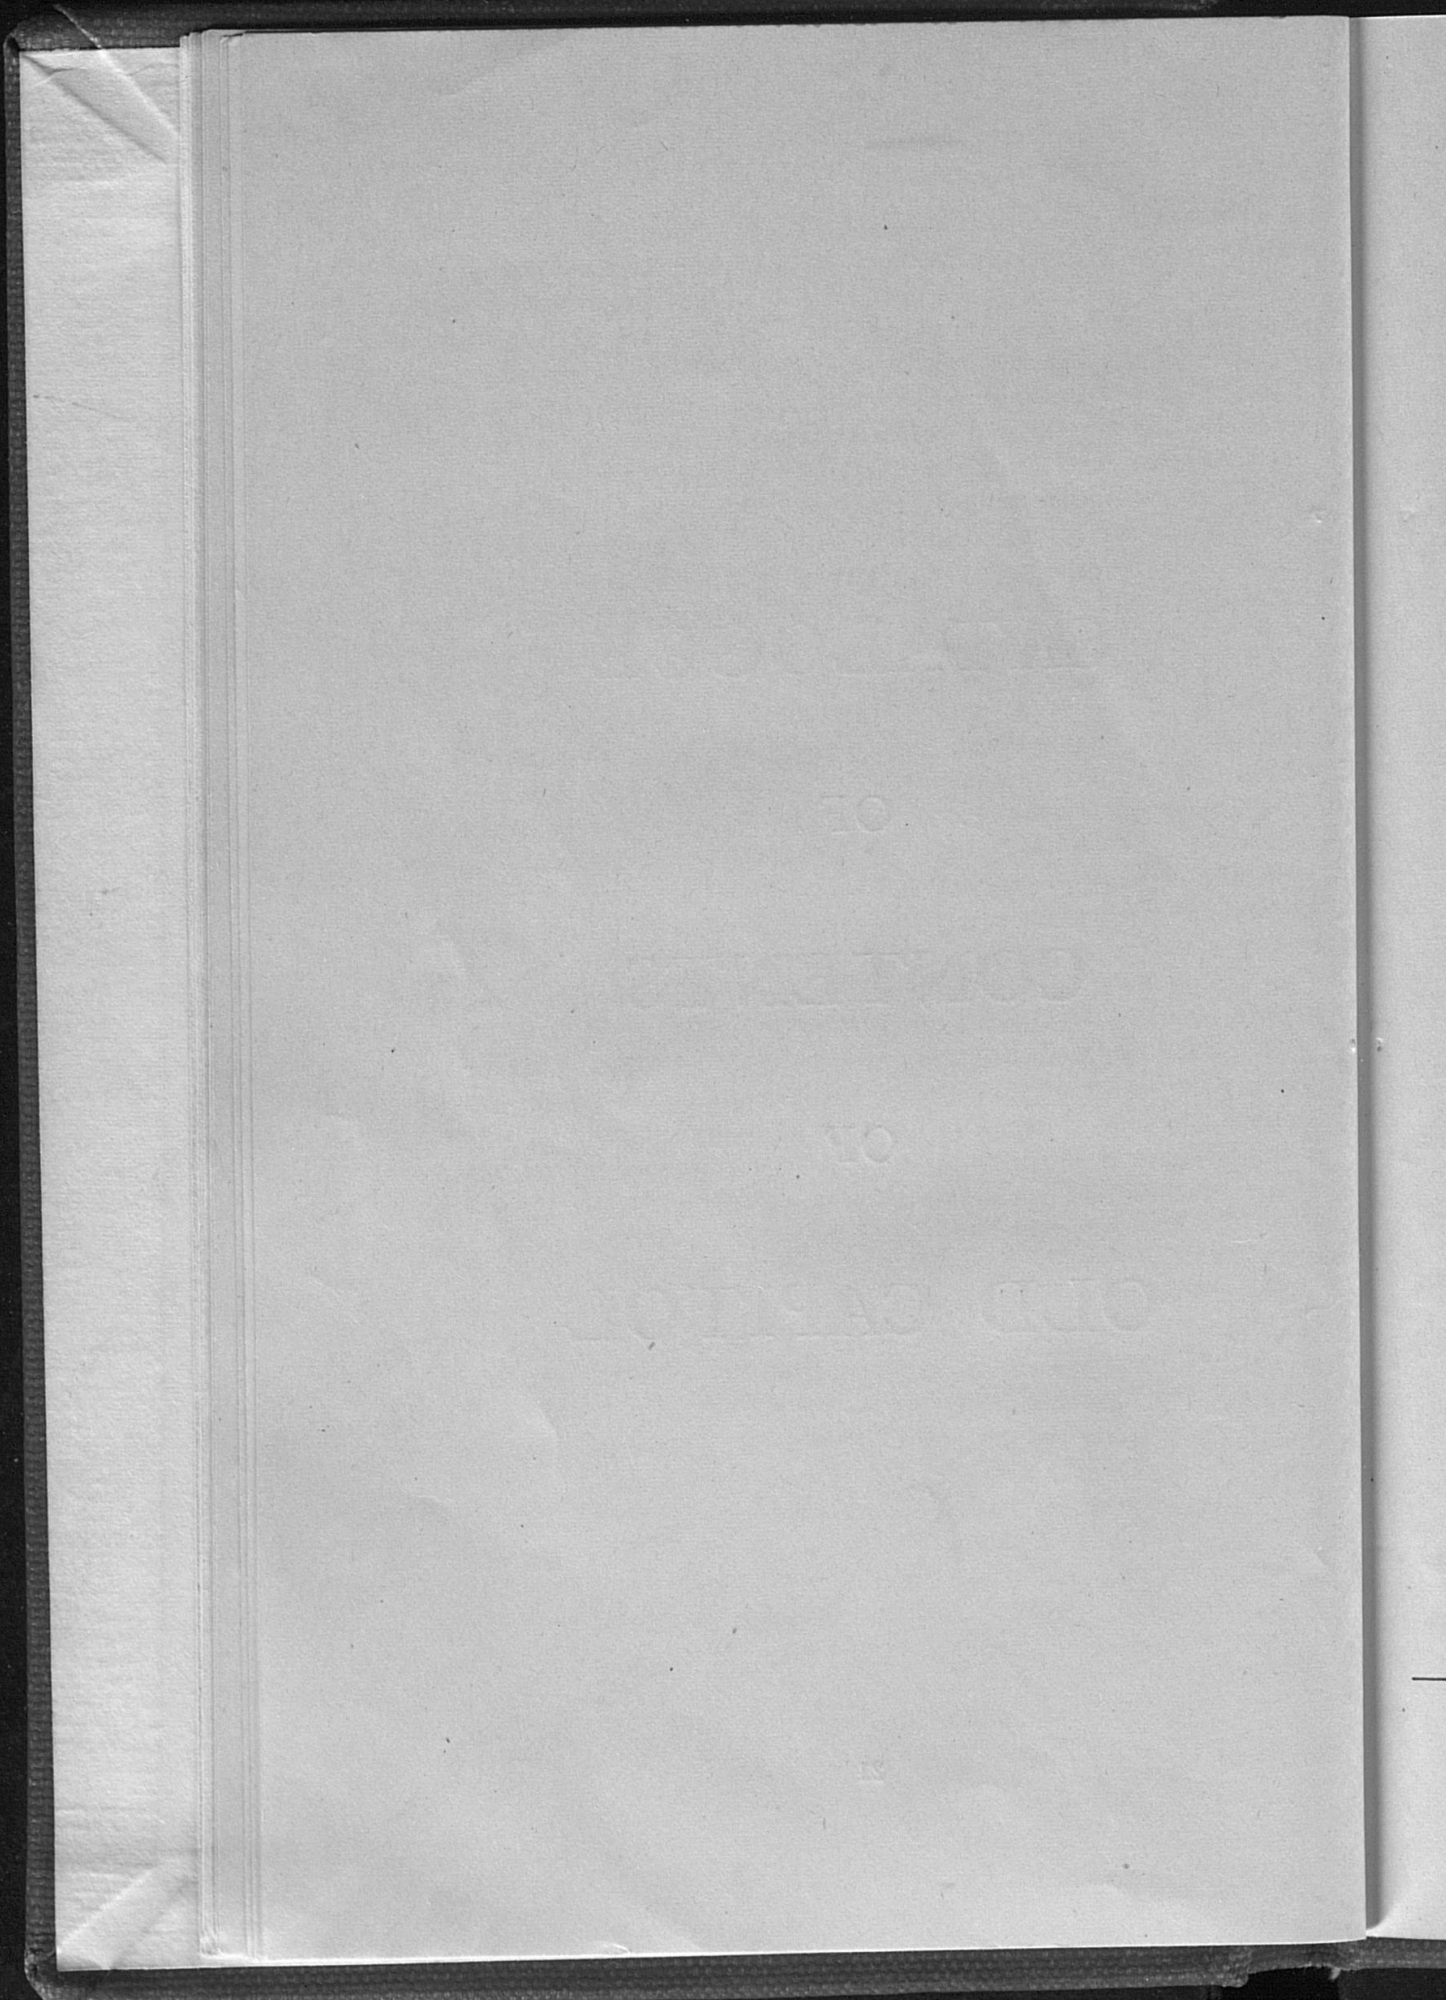

The SENATE CHAMBER, at the head of the stairs, has on its walls a notable collection of portraits, all Governors of Kentucky, beginning with Isaac Shelby (1792-1796, 1812-1816). On the east wall is a three-quarter length portrait of Abraham Lincoln by Charles Sneed Williams. In this room is the 18-piece silver service from the battleship Kentucky; a fine old harpsichord, brought to Kentucky prior to 1830 by the father of Gen. John Hunt Morgan; a glass case containing a plaster bust of Stephen Collins Foster, and an old candle holder, said to have been used by the musician while writing My Old Kentucky Home. Another case contains valuable old documents, one bearing the signature of Patrick Henry, another that of John Quincy Adams. A quaint corner cupboard contains rare old china. Among war relics is a horn made of wood by Capt. Robert Collins, used during the War of 1812, and a silver-mounted, black leather saddle captured from a Mexican officer at the Battle of Buena Vista in 1847. A feature of this room is the spacious elevated lobby at one end, separated from the main body of the chamber by Ionic columns supporting the entablature, with cornice and frieze extending around the room. The ceiling is richly ornamented in classic design. The SENATE CLOAKROOM (now the office of the curator) on the right of the stairway, contains the Collins Library purchased by the State of Kentucky from the estate of Richard H. Collins, historian, author of History of Kentucky (1874). This library contains more than two thousand volumes; many of the books are on historical and religious subjects, and are very old and rare. On the walls of the room are old engravings and prints of leaders of the Confederacy.

On the north side of the rotunda balcony is the door leading into the HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, which contains, in addition to valuable historical paintings, a collection of relics and materials portraying the everyday life of the pioneer. The outstanding feature of this room is the copy by Oliver Frazer of Gilbert Stuart's full length portrait of George Washington. This picture hangs directly over the speaker's desk from which Henry Clay and other great orators addressed the house. On the left of the entrance is CONFEDERATE CORNER containing many relics of the period from 1861 to 1865. There is a portrait of Jefferson Davis by J. P. Walker, rare old prints of Confederate generals, flags, documents, old newspapers and costumes of the period. Grouped around the mantel in the northwest corner of the room is a collection of household utensils of the pioneer period. Over the mantel hangs an imaginary portrait of Daniel Boone by William Allen. On the left of the speaker's desk, in a small glass case, is a blanket woven by the wife and daughter of Simon Kenton, and on the right the first treasury chest of the State of Kentucky. Nearby in a window stand the old scales from the State treasurer's office, used to weigh the bits of gold money before coins of specific value came into use. On each side of the desk are furled battle flags of Kentucky. Among these historic relics, most prized of all, is the case containing the long rifle, powder horn, and a few other personal belongings of Daniel Boone. In the same case is a child's blue calico dress worn by little Betsy Grant, niece of Daniel Boone, during the siege of Bryan Station. In this case reposes the pistol used by Aaron Burr in his duel with Alexander Hamilton. The full length portrait of Lafayette, painted from life by Matthew Harris Jouett, occupies a prominent place on the north wall with William Frye's portrait of Henry Clay. Conspicuous on the east wall is William Allen's portrait of Gen. Zachary Taylor on his famous horse, "Old Whitey." Cases in this room contain collections of various articles of wearing apparel and handicraft of pioneer women. In the gallery on the south side of the room is a fine collection of firearms used in the wars in which Kentuckians have taken part.

Photostat from the original letter of Ethan Allen, addressed to the Honorable Committee of Colonial Correspondence for the City and County of Albany, received May 12, 1775.

Gentlemen I have the inexpressible satisfaction to acquaint you that at day-break of the 11th instant pursuant to my direction from sundry leading Gentlemen in the Colonies of Massachusetts Bay and Conn. I took the Fortress of Ticonderoga with about one hundred and thirty Green Mountain Boys. Col. Easton with about forty-seven veteran soldiers distinguished themselves in the action. Colonel Arnold entered the Fortress with me side by side the guard were so surprised that contrary to our expectation did not fire on us but fled with precipitancy. We immediately entered the fortress and took the Garrison prisoners without blood-shed or any opposition they consisted of one Captain and Lieut. and forty-two men. Little more need be said. You know Governor Carlton of Canada will exert himself to re-take it, and as your county is nearer than any other part of the Colonies and as your inhabitants have thoroughly manifested their zeal in the cause of their country I expect immediate assistance from you, both in men and provision. You can not exert yourself too much in so glorious a cause, the number of men need be more at the first till the other Colonies can have time to muster. I am apprehensive of a sudden and quick attack. Pray be quick to our relief and send us 500 men immediately. Fail not, your friend and humble servant.

Commander of Ticonderoga
ETHAN ALLEN,

DANIEL BOONE RIFLE

(CASE 24)

This famous old rifle is 58 inches overall, with a 44-inch octagon-shaped barrel; 45 calibre and 7 point rifling; brass blade, front sight and an iron rear sight, with an unusually deep notch, insuring correct shading at all times. The original flintlock is intact and the rifle is equipped with the delicate system of set triggers found on the finest guns of this type. The trigger guard, with a convenient handhold and butt plate, are of plain metal construction. Four brass rings hold the barrel securely to the forearm. Tallow holes are on the right side of butt, used by those who preferred to carry the patches in the pocket of their hunting shirts. The butt of the stock is rudely carved. On the right side are the initials "D. B."; an Indian facing a tree with his tomahawk raised; the head and neck of a deer; the rising sun. On the left side is the cheek rest, below which is carved "Boons Best Fren"; on the right side of the forearm are cut fifteen notches. The full length stock is of walnut. The rifle bears every trace of a Powell Valley product.

BURR PISTOL

The famous pistol has been handed down in the Marshall family for several generations. Col. Thomas Marshall, who fought in the American Army during the Revolution, was presented with a sword by the Continental Congress, in recognition of his bravery at the Battle of Brandywine. He built a home at Buck Pond in Woodford County in 1783, having emigrated from Virginia. It was his grandson, Thomas F. Marshall, who came into possession of the Burr pistol.

Alexander Hamilton, statesman, was killed in a duel by Aaron Burr on July 11, 1804, on the banks of the Hudson River at Weehawken, N. J. Judge Van Ness, who was the second of Aaron Burr, marked the fatal pistol and gave it to Colonel James Bowie, together with its mate, the Hamilton pistol. Colonel Bowie wore the pair as belt pistols but lost the Hamilton pistol in swimming a bayou. Subsequently he gave the Burr pistol to Dr. Carr, the Superintendent of the United States Arsenal at Baltimore. Dr. Carr had acted as second for Thomas F. Marshall in his duel with James Watson Webb, editor of the New York Courier and Enquirer, in which Webb was shot in the knee and crippled for life.

Dr. Carr presented the Burr pistol to Captain Marshall who afterwards gave it to his brother Edward C. Marshall. The latter carried it through the Mexican War, and at his death bequeathed it to Lewis Marshall. While in the possession of Captain Tom Marshall it was altered from a flint lock to the percussion lock.

This famous dueling pistol was presented to the Kentucky State Historical Society by Mrs. Lewis Marshall, of Versailles, Ky., June 1, 1927.
