Vol. LXVII No. 141

Contrary to the philosophy stressed at WBKY-FM, most of the University-owned radio stations in Kentucky emphasize student participation and integrate practical experience with the curriculum

Despite the fact WBKY received $71,000 from the University in 1975, station manager Don Wheeler insists the station operates primarily as a community service and not a training ground for students. And while WBKY does employ 15 students through grants-in-aid one former WBKY staff member said their duties include little or no actual studio production

"Mostly what they do is tear and read wire copy (syndicated) news and cue records," the employee said. "They produce a few programs and some live event broadcasts."

However stations at four other state supported universities comprise integral components of the various media-related departments, actively training students in all facets of radio broadcasting.

Student involvement at these stations ranges from volunteer work to salaried positions and even required participation by students in media-related fields

While community service is a main objective of stations at Eastern (EKU), Western (WKU), Morehead (MSU) and Murray, station management explained that student training and participation is not neglected.

"We use a lot of students and therefore make mistakes. But it is the best op-portunity students have to be equally competitive for jobs," said Larry Netherton, station manager at WMKY-FM. MSU's station.

WMKY is similar to WBKY in that it is a member of the National Public Broad-casting (NPB) network, operates on 50,000 watts of power and maintains five full-time employees. It also meets other NPB requirements of operating 18 hours daily, 365 days per year, and receives more than $18,000 annually from NPB.

Netherton said the station provides alternative programming" which is not offered by commercial stations in the rural community. Unlike UK's radio station, WMKY's format consists mainly of "middle of the road" and top 40 music Eleven per cent of WMKY's programming two hours daily is classical music. WBKY, however, plays 40 per cent classical

"We cut the classical music back to two hours in the afternoon because few people were listening to it." Netherton said.

Like WBKY. Morehead's station also uses National Public Radio (NPR) features such as "All things Considered" and the National Press Club.

MSU's station is under the supervision of the Division of Communications and 40 students participate in some facet of the operation each semester, he said. Students volunteer to work at the station, receive work-study assistance, or receive paid internships if they have prior experience.

Any student, whether he is on the staff or not, can propose a program, and if we like the pilot tape we'll produce it." Netherton said. "Students in the workstudy program can receive up to nine hours (credit) in their major and a total of 12 with three general electives."

MSU student-produced Several programs have been syndicated, including shows on the evolution of rock and roll (26 half-hour shows) and 13 point series on pollution, Netherton said.

Netherton said WMKY's programming emphasis differs throughout the day, though the station serves the community "From 9-12 p.m. we aim our programming at the college students because those are the times when most of them can con veniently listen." he said.

Unlike WBKY, the MSU station operates under direct faculty supervision and provides local commercial stations with coverage of MSU basketball and football

"We feel that theory is fine, but the professionals have told us that practical experience is the best way to insure getting a job. So that's what we give our students," Netherton concluded.

Murray's station, WKMS-FM, also programs for a community audience rather than only the University, but is used primarily as a laboratory for students in the Department of Radio-TV-Journalism, said station manager Grey Hurt.

"All courses in the department evolve around working at the station," he said.

Tenure refused— Philosophy prof to appeal decision

Kernel Staff Writer

Philosophy Assistant Professor Dr. James Fetzer plans to appeal the decision not to grant him tenure made last week by Vice President for Academic Affairs Dr. Lewis Cochran.

Fetzer questions whether or not the decision is actually based on the criteria set out in the University governing regulations and will appeal to the Committee on Privilege and Tenure

"My case raises the issue of whether decisions on promotion and tenure are going to be decided on the basis of the specified criteria or not," Fetzer says. "This case has to be thoroughly investigated if UK is to avoid becoming a country club for academic incompetents."

The basis of the negative decision, according to information given to Fetzer by Arts and Sciences Dean Dr. Art Gallaher, research. His research is considered to be too narrow in its choice of problems, shallow in analysis, and lacking in originality.

"If my research were inadequate, Fetzer responds, "my articles would not have been accepted by the prestigious journals which have published them, nor would it have received as much discu nong other philosophers as it has."

The Committee on Privilege and Tenure, which will hear the appeal, is appointed by the president from recommendations submitted by the University Senate. It serves as a mediation board, gathering information and talking to the involved parties informally.

The committee then makes a report to the president, but it is only a recom-mendation. The president can accept or reject the committee's report.

Arts and Sciences Dean Dr. Art Gallaher, is primarily the weakness of Fetzer's Wagner, who is currently chairman of the committee and has served as a member at varous times in previous years says, however, in his experience the president has always accepted the recommendation of the committee. "The president has a high regard for the committee's evaluation," Wagner says.

Cochran's own decision did not need approval by President Singletary and the Board of Trustees since it involves an appointment at the assistant professor level. Only decisions involving the rank of approved by the board.

University regulations give the dean of the college authority to appoint or ter-minate assistant professors. But because of the controversial finature of the Fetzer case, Dean Gallaher forwarded the file with his own recommendation to Cochran for final consideration.

Wagner expects the committee to begin its study of Fetzer's appeal next week, but says he has no idea when they will finish.

In view of the recent articles on tenure appearing in the Kernel it seems clear that Dr. Fetzer more than adequately fulfills the requirements of that policy, and could only serve to enhance the learning atmosphere of the University.

Since tenure policy is "...what sets the permanent nature of our faculty," it would seem that the students of the University have at least the right to take an interest in that policy, for it is the nature of the faculty that determines the quality of their educational experience.

It is in the exercise of that right that

DR. STRANGE, for truly mind-bending ventures into the wonders of ical mysticism;

CONAN THE BARBARIAN, for a bit of sword-and-sorcery in the tradition of novelist Robert E. Howard;

KILLRAVEN, for futuristic science fiction based on H.G. Wells' classic, "War of the Worlds."

And, of course, there is good old CAPTAIN AMERICA, about whom I wrote these words in January of this

TO: Bruce Morton CBS News 2020 M St. NW Washington, D.C. My Dear Mr. Morton:

In a televised commentary this In a televised commentary this morning bemoaning the fate of the Classic Comics magazines you suggested with tongue thrust in bicentennial chic — that perhaps we should "bring back" the true-blue tantasy heroes of yesteryear. Specifically, you lamented the demise. of World War II freedom fighter

Do not despair. Captain America lives and breathes and still is fighting the forces of evil. It seems that at the end of the Big One — when Cap ha helped finally defeat the nasty Nazis when Cap had the flag-draped shield slinger somehow managed to get himself frozen in a seagoing ice mass. Some 10 years ago, as this nation entered yet another era of crisis, the iceberg hiding his body was conveniently discovered and Captain America was thawed out and sent back the enemies of freedom both at home and abroad.

No cursory account of Cap's modern day struggles could do justice to the tradition he embodies. Yet I feel obliged to point out your error in ob serving that Captain America and his kind seem always able to discrimin easily between what is right and what is wrong. That was certainly true of America's World War II superheroes.

But then, that was true of World War II America. Since his rebirth, Captain America has changed right along with the nation he was created to defend. He has been in Viet Nam — and wondered at the reason for it. He has faced mob violence — and sympathized with the people's frustrations. He has a new crime-fighting partner: a black hero named The Falcon whose "secret identity" is that of a social worker in Harlem. And (most significantly of all)

Cap has just emerged from a long, difficult struggle with himself. For the government scandals which have shaken the foundations of the United States have not gone unnoticed

Himself a witness to what was metaphorically portrayed in his magazine as a "presidential suicide," Cap was accused of a murder and publicly discredited through a massive media campaign sponsored by the high-Regain America's Principles. Although he smashed the conspiracy and proved himself innocent, the whole episode left its mark on the conscience of Captain America.

Taking a hard look around him at the corrupt and sickened nation whose name he bore, Cap decided he could no longer allow himself to be associated with the government of the United States. Instead, he donned a new costume and a new name: Nomad. It required many months — and the death of an untrained young man who tried to carry on Cap's good name — before Nomad finally realized there is nothing wrong with America . . . because that title, and Captain America's own red, white and blue costume, are symbols of an ideal. Cap called it the "American Dream." It is a dream which may never become reality; but it is a dream which nevertheless must be protected. But then, let Captain America speak for himself:

thought I knew who the good guys and the bad guys were. I thought, as usual, that things weren't as complex as they are . . . and I couldn't un-derstand how the good guys could put their faith in a man so bad!

America's! The country didn't let me I let her down, by not being all that I could be.

"If I'd paid more attention to the way American reality differed from the American Dream — if I hadn't gone around thinking the things I believe in were thirty years out of date - then I might have uncovered Number One, and stopped him, before it was too late!

"I guess . . . what I'm saying is . . . there has to be somebody who'll fight for the dream, against any foe. Somebody who'll do the job I started — and do it right!"

Nuff said.

Double talk covers shady dealings

By James Embry

UK's budget tightening has caused dentistry-secretaries, receptionists, dental hygenists, dental assistants. Employes we talked to estimated there were 30 people who got laidoff. Personnel says "only" 18 positions got the ax. These people were told that no one would be hired when people quit-"job freeze" was the phrase used.

The UK American Federation of State and County Municipal Employes committee distributed a leaflet about this incident, which the University was keeping quiet. Now personnel has sent letters to every employe claiming there have been no layoffs. They claim these employes will be "fransfered." These employes have been offered such choice jobs as a typing pool of two secretaries covering the entire dental department—approximately six floors! The letter from personnel lists each person's present plans. It is irrelevant what people decide to do now. A layoff is a layoff. This action hits those employes remaining especially hard. While they will get no raise they are expected to do the work of two people or more. Most of the people in dentistry were and that their jobs were temporary. The University could have sough funding elsewhere. In fact at least one person affected got a job at UK specifically to avoid layoffs.

While there may not be a University wide job freeze, it has definitely hap pened in dentistry and other depart-ments scattered throughout the University. The 126 current job openings are "concrete proof" only that conditions and wages at UK are so bad that there is a constant turnover of nployes.

This is not the first time UK has used double talk to cover up its shady dealings. Last year as an "energy conservation" measure a job freeze was slapped on night janitors. Whenever anyone quil for was fired) no one was hired. UK had the nerve to claim this wouldn't mean any extra work for those remaining.

This incident clearly shows we have no job security at UK. UK always reserves the right to eliminate positions if they see fit. Sacrificing public employes is part of a national trend of government reaction to the economic crisis. The only way to defend our-selves effectively is to do like other public employes-organize a union!

Bargaining refusal called 'power play'

By JOHN PECK Kernel Staff Writer

The struggle between the Fayette County Educational Association (FCEA) and the Fayette County Board of Education is a power play by the board, the president of FCEA said.

"They (the board members) hold the power," said Martha Moore, FCEA president.

The FCEA, representing about 50 per cent of Fayette County's approximately 1600 teachers has attempted to deal with the board on issues such as teacher's salaries, overcrowding in classrooms, obtaining classes for "special" children and, most prominently of late, job security and fringe benefits. One teacher estimated that the FCEA has presented its case in open forums before the board "about 26 times" in the last five years, but to no avail.

"(The board) has said 'we will not listen,' and we've had to put up a battering ram to make them listen," Moore said. "They refuse to listen to any issue that is controversial as they see it."

Moore noted that "we've tried to get agencies to act for us," specifically members of the state legislature. Members of the FCEA have lobbied for a state bargaining bill before the General Assembly in Frankfort.

Senate Bill 200, which would have given teachers the right to collectively bargain with their employers, and House Bill 300, which would have extended the same privilege to all public employes, were both defeated by the Assembly this year.

School Board Chairman James L. Barlow expressed his displea sure concerning collective bargaining in a letter dated Feb.
11, 1975, sent to the legislative committee conducting study of public employe collective bargaining.

"I am submitting data which will demonstrate that collective bargaining laws in other areas have not settled problems between boards of education and teacher groups," he said, "but have aggravated them if numbers of strikes be used as a barometer."

Barlow added that 'in Michigan and Pennsylvania, for example, the numbers of teacher strikes increased dramatically after gaining statewide bargaining rights," and that this trend seemed to be "nationwide" as collective bargaining laws have been instituted in other Of even more concern to Barlow was the fear that collective bargaining would result in "increasingly severe financial pressures" for the school systems, and be used as "an instrument that will wrestle control of our school systems from clected officials," legislatures as well as school board members.

Guy S. Potts, superintendent of Fayette County Public schools, said that despite the FCEA's attempts, four out of the five loard members remain solidly against collective bargaining, and that he, too, did not favor it.

"I am opposed to collective bargaining in public schools for this reason." "For the 10 years that this has been an issue, not one bit of research proves that collective bargaining aids education," he said.

Moore believes that even if the board isn't on the FCEA's side, school employes are.

"The League of Women Voters conducted a poll in Lexington schools on collective. bargaining," she said. "Ninety-four per cent of the school employes voted, and two-thirds of them voted in favor of collective bargaining."

Moore and the FCEA must contend not only with the school board, but also with another conflicting group-members of their own profession who belong to the Professional Educational Association (PEA), and who also oppose collective bargaining.

PEA President Vada Phillips said that the only problem between the board and the FCEA is that the FCEA refuses to accept no lor an answer. "We know the loard is cleeted by the citizens of Fayette County, and that's who they represent in making these decisions," she said. "I think they have been very fair in dealing with the FCEA," she added. "Too lair."

Phillips contended that should collective bargaining be granted to teachers, major cutbacks in supplies, building allocations and other such programs would occur.

"You can't get blood out of a turnip," she said. "If you give all the money to teachers, other programs would be hurt."

Meanwhile. Moore and other members of the FCEA are planning strategy for their nextmeeting with the board, scheduled for May 3.

"It's ironic that in 1976, we're still fighting for the same things we fought for in 1936," she said, with a sigh of grief. "We're 4) years behind the times."

Next year WKYU plans to install automated systems which will allow the station to continue broadcasting while classes are utilizing the studios.

Overall, the station managers agreed that the most important function of their stations is to rain students in every facet of radio broadcasting. Although the programs vary at each school the emphasis remains the same-to provide a community service while educating future broadcasters This is apparently at odds with WBKY's philosophy of purpose

Cats fall 9-6 to Tennessee; division lead is deadlocked

By DICK GABRIEL

It was fun while it lasted.

Kentucky's baseball Wildcats. alone in first place for less than 24 hours after a doubleheader sweep over Tennessee, dropped a 9-6 decision to the Vols yesterday and fell into a tie with their archrivals for the lead in the Eastern Division of the Southeastern Conference

A seven-run seventh inning did the Cats in. John Koenen's three-run homer in the bottom of the sixth had given Kentucky a 4-2 lead. But Marty Lenhof gave up singles to the first two men he faced in the seventh.

With men on first and second and nobody out, Tennessee's Mark Batchko, the number nine hitter in the order, dropped a bunt everybody in the ball park was expecting Lenhof calmly fielded the ball but threw wildly past third, letting in two runs and opening the gates

Before the dust had cleared, 11 Tennessee batters paraded to the plate. Lenhof gave up two more singles and another run before leaving in favor of releiver Bill Roebel. Roebel surrendered an RBI double, a sacrifice fly and a wo-run homer before ending the "One play," UK coach Tuffy Horne said after the game. "One play was all it was. We had 'em."

Horne said he didn't think Lenhof rushed his throw to third. Quite the contrary. "I think when he came up with it, he realized he had so much time that he let up on it," said Horne

So the elusive series sweep slips by once more. The Wildcats have not taken all three games in series this season, which is what they must do this weekend to clinch at least a tie for the division lead.

The Georgia Bulldogs invade the Shively Sports Center this weekend for a Saturday doubleheader and a single game on Sunday. Tennessee, in the meantime, closes out its season the next weekend with a threegame series with state rival Vanderbilt, which is only a half game back.

The Cats have already taken two of three games from the Bulldogs, but Georgia is in last place and Horne sees this as a psychological problem.

"I'd rather we were playing somebody else," he said. "They come in here loose and ready to play with nothing to lose. They're just about the same team that won it last year.

Horne didn't think avoiding an upset would be much of a stimulus. "You're out here playing against Georgia but you're really playing against somebody else," he said.

Lack of a third pitcher has been the reason offered for the Missing Sweep Syndrome, but Lenhof pitched well enough to cause hope for a cure, and will probably start in the third game on Sunday.

"Assuming his arm's all right," said Horne, "I couldn't expect any more from him."

Lenhof may have emerged with win yesterday, were it not for trange circumstances. "There They're not going to give up. We strange circumstances. were a lot of 'ifs' in that game.

Besides his own error, Lenhot was the victim of bizarre hap-With UK trailing 1-0 he fourth. Lenhof struck out the first two batters before giving up a single. UT third baseman Richard Arnsparger lofted a hooking double to center field which Billy Fouch caught at his knees but couldn't control, and dropped it, allowing a run to Trailing 9-4 in the bottom of the seventh, the Cats had two on with wo out when designated hitter LeRoy Robbins smashed a LeRoy wicked knee-high liner at Arn-sparger at third. Arnsparger, who an inning before had been pelted in the head with an orange fromt he stands, made a brilliant diving grab, snuffing the rally. Randy Gipson homered to lead off the eighth, cutting the lead to With two out, leftfielder Jim Sherill, hitless in four at-bats. stepped up with men on first and second and crashed a double. rule double, which meant the man on first who ordinarily would have scored, was called back to third. The next man flied out, ending the rally and setting up the dramatic confrontation with Georgia.

"We gotta win three, that's all there is to it. I really think we can win three someday," Horne said with a smile. "I don't think God has anything against us, you know. Thou Shalt Not Sweep.

Money!

Lady Kats to offer scholarships next fall

By DICK GABRIEL Sports Editor

Three years ago, a Studies Committee examined the University of Kentucky women's athletic program and decided that any new money budgeted the program should be channeled into facilities. rather than scholarships. The committee held that a strong foundation should be laid with strong facilities, which in turn would facilities, which in turn would lure quality athletes.

A 10 year program—development timetable was drawn up, with 1976 designated as the Year for the Scholarships.

Following the timetable almost precisely, the women's athletic program will now be able to offer scholarships to prospective as well as present athletes.

An increase of $30,000 in the An increase or $30,000 in the program's budget is now being allotted for scholarships. Approximately one third of that will go to the Lady Kats basketball team. Another $8,000 will go for track, $4,000 for gymnastics and tehnis and $3,000 for golf. These totals are broken down by the individual coaches and awarded as they see fit.

According to athletic director Sue Feamster, there are three levels of awards:, $1500, $1,000 and $500. The grants cover room, board and tuition only. No laundry money is included, leaving the total $110 short of the actual scholarship total. This, said Feamster, qualifies the award as "an out and out grant, not a scholarship."

Feamster said the money was allotted the teams on an estimate of how much it would take to build a competitive program Golf would take at most four top-notch players, while basketball would take considerably more.

"We award the scholarships equally," said Feamster. "We're not trying to make one sport major and another sport minor

"Over the country, we find the majority of scholarships are going to basketball. Obviously, its the only revenue producing sport with a chance to make it," she said.

Kentucky is at least one year behind other state schools in awarding scholarships, because of "strategy."

When the University's budget for women's athletics was given a huge increase a few years ago, the women's programs at other state schools began to look for increases in their budgerts, too. Feamster said that when they didn't get enough to cover new facilities such as UK's, the state schools simply channeled the money into scholarships and looked for gradual improvement in facilities.

"It was a good strategic move on the regional schools' part," said Feamster. "It was the only conceivable way they could keep quality program without us running all over them." So by employing a different strategy. UK has caught up with her sister schools in the scholarship department while building "one of the strongest programs in the country," said Feamster. "We are the top-funded school in the South."

UK's budget, which is close to $150,000 per year, is twice that of s150,000 per year, is twice that of its nearest competitor. Eastern Kentucky University. UK's budget not only allows for scholarships, travel expenses, facilities and salaries, it also pays for the services of a full-time trainer. Mimi Porter. Porter is one of only 17 certified omen trainers in the country.

Feamster said the addition of scholarships should help the women's athletic program to total compliance with Title IX, an act designed to prohibit sex discrimination in any federally funded institution, by 1978.

the top programs in the country," she said, "and we should be able to draw top quality athletes, especially from the state, and keep them here in Kentucky

Thompson's 40 dooms Colonels

DENVER AP-Sharp-shooting rookie David Thompson scored 40 points, leading the assist-conscious Denver Nuggets over the Kentucky Colonels 133-110 Wednesday night in the seventh and deciding game of their American Basketball Association semi-final playoff series.

The victory, before an aroused ABA-record crowd of 18,821, sends the Nuggets into the Championship series against the New York Nets beginning here Saturday night.
