COUNTRY CLUB OR COLLEGE

After the Alabama football game we engaged in conversation with a gentleman from that state who made the remark that Kentucky was rated as being the second best country club in the South. He vanked Rollins College of Florida first, and modestly placed his own school in third position.

Briefly outlined, the social system here is by no means a hindrance to the cause of higher education. In itself, the system is more or less satisfactory, although there have been some rumblings of discontent with it by students. Some people on the campus might go so far as to say that the social life here is not adequate.

Other than that, sororities are open of afternoons, and banquets, smokers and devous other social functions of a minor nature are indulged in.

That is a resume of the social life as presented by the various organizations. Individually, of course, students are the same every place. As far as environment is concerned, Lexington, Kentucky is considered a city of sport as testified in its reputation for fast horses, good whiskey, and beautiful women, is, on the whole, about as clean and peace loving a town as we know of.

Scholastically, Kentucky does not do so badly. It manages to hang on to most of its widely known teachers, losing only the few each year who are promoted to bigger and wealthier colleges. Its alumni hold down able and responsible positions all over the world and generally are interested in the welfare of the old school.

Perhaps the fact that the University is known to some people as a country club college is due to students who wish to be tinged with the light of romance. We'll reserve our judgment. We will say, though, that in our opinion, the story that

This Campus and That World

By RALPH E. JOHNSON

There is a curious code among men—an unethical, or immoral, code of justice, you might say, but definitely it is a law. A law quite as complex as the legal things pertaining to justice, yet it inhibits and betrays progress.

I doubt if anything can ever be written that will change that unethical code, for it apparently is inherent in us. At any rate it crops out in children almost as soon as they learn to talk. As life becomes complicated with mischievousness, law-breaking and sin, so does this code become involved—hopelessly entangled in the scheme of things.

This is the code that is responsible for "honor among thieves" (if any). It is the code that is responsible for the opprobrious significance of "rat," "informer," "stool pigeon," "squealer," "tattle-tale," and other quite as offensive.

That this code has existed for centuries is evidenced in the Bible wherein it is commanded of men that "Thou shalt not go up and down the land as a talebearer." That passage may be interpreted to mean that you may not gossip. But tale does not necessarily mean gossip. I prefer to interpret it to mean gossip, but there are those who feel that it implies "tattle-tale."

But then you grew up. You went to school and the same thing might there be repeated. This time teacher will substitute for mother. Now you are teachers' pet! Your mind struggles with that problem. Was it not to tell the teacher who threw the dead mouse onto that little girl's desk? Certainly it was!

Now suppose you grew up weaker than your brother. He went to the same university with you. You made good grades, but he didn't across the campus to his office over on Lexington to get the keys and let them out. Ain't it funny what some people will do for an education.

When Mary Elizabeth Howk tells John Breathouse and Bob Owens that she loves them tenderly, could she have just the tiniest bit of a conscientious scruple, a kiddy like nature enable her to live nine lives?

I have located a babe this week who seems to know about the what is going on in this university than all the rest of us put together so with her permission I am going to print verbatim the few notes she has jotted down.

Student Opinion

The Kernel welcomes communications both from its student readers, and from others who prefer, however, that they be short and to the point, and that the writer sign his name, to be used or not, as indicated. The rights is reserved to delete any part or parts of all letters.—Brewster.

Editor The Kernel Dear Sir: I am thoroughly in sympathy with your current advocacy of optional class attendance for the senior class. I believe you have covered the subject completely and convincingly but for one premise, i.e., the reaction of the public to such a revolutionary step.

It is a generally accepted fact that the political situation on our campus is rather corrupt and has been diverted to ends other than those serving the interests of the student body. Students are aware of it. Even the faculty is beginning to sense it.

Moreover, the students have allowed themselves to become pawns of the "political bosses." The fraternities and sororities, in order to advance their interests, have allied themselves to cliques which in turn have dictated to the individuals the student body. Students are aware of it. Even the faculty is beginning to sense it.

And now the corsages (Isn't it funny how the guest columnists always want to throw bouquets at people, well anyway, here goes—Dryden):

1. Candidates should be selected on their own merits with particular regard to their integrity and ability.

2. Candidates should not be responsible to any group or clique. Their sole responsibility should be to the class or student body as a whole.

3. Balloting should be conducted secretly. No attempts should be made to coerce the voters at the poles.

There is a movement in progress in the junior class to nominate candidates for the forthcoming election who will stand upon the above principles. Will the students support them?

Looking for trouble with a smile

HIS job is to look for trouble before it happens. He is one of many who inspect telephone apparatus regularly, even when nothing is wrong. His work is called "preventive maintenance."

This work is of the highest importance. It helps to prevent interruptions to the service; often forestalls costly repairs, or replacements; helps keep telephone service at highest efficiency.

To plan this work requires management with imaginative foresight and the ability to balance the many factors involved in the maintenance problem.

Human Suffering Alleviated by Red Cross in Times of Distress

Thousands of young men and women have returned to their campuses this fall with a first-hand knowledge of Red Cross disaster relief work, gained during the spring floods and tornadoes when they and other volunteers worked with the Red Cross Chapters in the affected areas to mitigate suffering caused by the winds and water.

On whatever disaster front one visited, whether the flooded villages in Maine and New Hampshire, the inundated cities of Johnston and Pittsburgh or the tornado torn cities in Georgia, Mississippi and South Carolina, there one found scores of college men and women helping The Red Cross in its administration of relief.

Hundreds of students home for their spring vacations were on the ground when the disasters struck. There was work to be done. Families had to be taken from their flooded homes, automobile transportation had to be provided for those unable to walk, missing persons had to be found, arrangements for temporary shelter had to be made, food had to be prepared and clothing given out, families had to be registered so that their needs might be ascertained, and a myriad of other tasks performed to ease distress.

Students who participated in this work know the Red Cross in action. They felt the thrill of being a part of it and realize how necessary it is that such help should always be available to soften the blows of disasters in the future.

Other Red Cross programs of particular interest to university and college students are those of instruction in first aid and water life saving and first aid on the highways.

The article discusses the record of Ralph Kercheval, University football star, and his work with the Brooklyn Dodgers owned by another Kentucky graduate and football ace, "Shipwreck" Kelly.

Kercheval's work on the Whitney horse farm in Lexington is also discussed by Garing, who states that Kercheval claims this is his last year as a professional football player.

KERNEL SPORTS EDITOR

Kentucky's Wildcats will ring down the curtain on their home football season out on Stoll field tomorrow afternoon when they engage the Tigers of Clemson once again after a two-year lapse in relations. And many of the experts have been giving Clemson an excellent chance of defeating the Wildcats.

Which leads us to believe that football has become a funny game—maybe funny isn't the word for it—but when the Clemson game was originally scheduled or even as late as the middle of September, there wasn't a fan in these parts who would have conceded the Tigers a 100 to 1 chance of taking Kentucky.

Now with the actual battle looming on the morrow the South Carolina club has been named an even choice to win. And that isn't just newspaper talk as is so often declared, but the selection is based upon past performances of both entries.

Probably the best exhibition the Tigers have given all year was against Georgia Tech—the same Tech team that started the Wildcats downhill with a 34 to 0 shove. Clemson gained a 13 to 12 decision over the Engineers in a sensational ball game at Atlanta a few weeks ago.

The Tigers have won five games while losing three thus far this season. In addition to Tech, Clemson has won over Presbyterian, V. P. I., South Carolina and The Citadel. The losses were suffered at the hands of Alabama, Duke and Wake Forest.

If it means anything, Clemson was beaten by Alabama at Tuscaloosa, 32 to 0 and lost to Duke 25 to 0. Wake Forest eked out a 6 to 0 victory.

The Clemson record, then, is just about as good as Kentucky's as the Wildcats have also won five battles while dropping three. However, the Tigers have counted in their last three starts while Kentucky has lost two in a row. One team is seemingly on the upgrade while the other may be on the tobbogan.

With the teams appearing to be pretty evenly matched, a close game may be anticipated and the rival backfields should furnish the customers with a whole load of thrills. The Clemsons are well fortified in the balloting department with Mac Fogler leading the offense. Fogler, according to Coach Porter Grant, who has scouted the Tigers in two games, is probably the hardest-hitting line-plunger in the South.

The burley fullback scored both of Clemson's touchdowns against Georgia Tech mainly through virtue of his own line thrusts which took the ball straight down the field.

Captain Joe Berry will be remembered by local fans as a fine ball carrier. He was only a sophomore when the teams met here two years ago, but he turned in an excellent performance against the Cats. Winston Lawson is another of the Tiger backs who will bear watching.

Kentucky will have a change of backfield for Saturday's battle. At least indications from the daily scrimmage sessions seem to point to such a maneuver. Elmore "Red" Simpson, who has been first-string quarterback all season, will probably be moved back to his regular position of fullback with Dick Robinson getting the signal-calling assignment. Bert Johnson and Bob Davis are ready to start at the halfback berth and this quarter will give the Wildcats their greatest potential attacking strength of the season.

Simpson had a good year at fullback last season and was only moved to the field general's post because Coach Wynne figured he would add weight and experience to the all-around ability of the backfield. The idea has not worked out and it seems that Simpson will return to his old position in an attempt to bolster up that post.

As far as tomorrow's game is concerned, we'll not make any prediction here, although we did tell some one a few days ago that we thought the Wildcats would win by a couple of touchdowns. But we've been so consistently wrong that a week off will do us a lot of good. Maybe.

However, we can't resist the temptation of making some sort of selection, so here goes in the weekly career of national battles: L. S. U. to bat down Auburn; Dartmouth to smother Cornell; Duquesne to get the nod over Carnegie Tech; Alabama to slap Georgia Tech; Ohio State to decision Illinois; Northwestern to sweep over Michigan; Minnesota to blast Texas; Princeton to conquer the Yales; Pittsburgh to get by Nebraska, and Notre Dame to come back Army.

And we feel pretty confident this week.

WILDCATS RATE TWENTY-THIRD

Kentucky Ranked Highly On Basis of Hardest Schedules

According to an expert analysis, Northwestern University has been playing the toughest "major team" schedule in college football since 1933, says Olan Gould of the Associated Press.

The basis for the calculation of the standing for each team is simple. The expert takes the six strongest teams faced by any given team and taking the numerical ranking of each of these six teams and averaging them. Thus if a team plays six teams ranked 46, 4, 42, 13, 3, and 15 he would add them dividing by six and the result, in this case 20.5 is the rating. The lower the average the tougher the schedule the selected team is playing.

Using this method the University of Kentucky was ranked twenty-third in the nation with an average of 37.7.

The analysis shows that in 1933 Northwestern played the toughest schedule. In 1934 Texas A & M faced the toughest opposition and last year the University of Texas faced the most difficult schedule. Ranking next to Northwestern for the three-year period are Notre Dame, Southern California, and the University of Texas, in that order. In the South, Georgia Tech, Louisiana State, and Tennessee have been playing tougher competition than Alabama or Duke.

INTRAMURAL

By BILLY EVANS

By virtue of an intercepted pass in the last few minutes of play, and an 80 yard run for a touchdown, the Sigma Chi's defeated the Phi Tau 6-0 Friday afternoon. This touchdown came in an overtime period. The game had ended with both teams locked at two first downs each.

In the overtime the Phi Tau made the first down near the start of the period. Holding this lead for about two-thirds of the period the Phi Tau secured the ball on the Sigma Chi 25. Trying to get a touchdown, the Phi Tau back passed into the unprotected zone where the Sigma Chi right halfback intercepted it and started on his long jaunt to the goal line and victory. On this run the blocking of the Sigma Chi team was excellent, and no Phi Tau came near him.

The A. T. O.'s defeated the Lambda Chi's to win the lower division championship. In this game the A. T. O.'s again demonstrated the fact that they have an excellent pair of ends, with one of the best passing backs to make them quite formidable. The A. T. O.'s also won the game by first downs and demonstrated their all-around superiority over their rivals by not allowing them to threaten their goal line at any time during the game.

In somewhat of an upset, the Deltas defeated the S. A. E.'s. Before the start of intramural football the S. A. E.'s were figured to be one of the strongest teams in the draw. However, in this game they displayed no potent strength and were defeated by a mediocre team.

This week's schedule brings the Phi Tau and Phi Sigs together again in what promises to be an interesting battle. In their first encounter, the Phi Tau emerged victor by the narrow margin of one first down. The A. T. O.'s play the Sigma Chi's to determine one finalist. The winner of the Phi Sig, Phi Tau game will play the Deltas later in the week.

SOPHOMORES HOLD SPOTLIGHT IN 'CAT WINS OVER CLEMSON

By LOUIS HAYNES
When Clemson Tiger came snarling from their lairs in South Carolina to engage our Kentucky Wildcats Saturday they had better be on the look out for sophomores as in previous games played between the two teams the sophomores have turned the tide of battle for the 'Cats.

There have been three games between these two teams and the Kentuckians have won all three. Back in 1933 Kentucky played Clemson for the first time. We defeated them 19-6, scoring all our touchdowns in the first half. Ross, sophomore back, tallied one of the touchdowns and after the game he was regarded as one of the best players ever to represent the University.

A period of four years elapsed before we met them again. In 1937 the Tigers came to Lexington confident of beating us. The score—Kentucky 44, Clemson 6.

The trouble also in this game was too many sophomores. "Shipwreck" Kelly, halfback, on the first play of the game ran 47 yards for a touchdown. Later in the game he made another 47 yard dash to tally again.

But Kelly was not the only sophomore to star in this game. "Bo" Myers, 145 pound quarter back, dived 52 yards to score, adding to the rout of the highly-favored South Carolinians.

Then in 1934 we met them again in battle. This game resulted in a 7-0 victory for the 'Cats, but they had to play inspired ball in the last quarters to tally.

This game was an exception to the sophomore theory because Bob Pritchard, full back, scored the touchdown that won the game with Able Ayers kicking the extra point. Summing up the facts of previous games, perhaps we should say—Tigers beware not only of sophomores, but also full backs. And this year the probable full back will be Hodge, a sophomore.

FROSH BASKETBALL MANAGERS SOON BECOME DISILLUSIONED

By J. B. FAULCONER

"Go get the balls, manager." "Get those kids out of the gym." "Don't bounce the ball while the coach is talking." "Get a towel, manager, and wipe up that sweat." "Freshman, make out a shot chart."

"Sit down. Let me see." These are only a few of the verbal phrases hurled at the new green freshman basketball managers.

The first two weeks of basketball practice is the opposite of the above. The freshman has duties of course, but he does them in his new-born enthusiasm. This fervor, however, soon dies out and his "cinch" becomes a tough job.

When asked to officiate a scrimmage, the freshman swells his chest; he'll show them how to referee. But, with the loss up of the first ball he receives both the fire of the coach and players. After about five minutes of such scrimmaging, the freshman becomes "tight" and is afraid to blow the whistle less he get bawled out by a player.

Answers on page six.

These three games promise to be the most exciting of the week. Intramural volleyball has started, but to date too few games have been played to determine the strength of any of the contestants.

The S. A. E.'s winners of the championship last year, give promise of repeating their performance, its end, approximately thirty basketballs have to be cleaned. Anticipating the "ahs" and "ohs" that will be registered when he makes his appearance in his home town, the freshman manager gives his belt another hitch, tugs his hat at an obtuse angle and feels doubly repaid.

Then in 1934 we met them again in battle. This game resulted in a 7-0 victory for the 'Cats, but they had to play inspired ball in the last quarters to tally.

This game was an exception to the sophomore theory because Bob Pritchard, full back, scored the touchdown that won the game with Able Ayers kicking the extra point. Then comes the day when he reads in the paper "Basketballers and Managers to Precede Banquet." He quickly scans the article for his name, the now somewhat important name of John Doe. After three more careful readings of the column, he realizes that the name Joe Dorr, is his name. The freshman is crestfallen. There is no use cutting out the article for his scrapbook as really his name is not there, at least, spelled so that no one would recognize it.

Recalling the freshman is equally down-hearted. Dressed up in his Sunday suit, the luckless manager is not recognized by either the coach or the captain of the squad.

After the regular season closes, comes the spring vacation. This practice does not last long but at

POSITION OF ENGINEERING IN AGRICULTURAL FIELD IS ONE OF PRIME IMPORT

Professor James B. Kelley, head of the department of Agricultural Engineering, says: "Agricultural engineering deals with the application of the fundamental branches of engineering to the peculiar conditions and requirements of agriculture as an industry and as a field of applied science. The engineers seek to utilize the materials and forces of nature to lighten the labor and reduce the cost of producing farm products and to improve the sanitary and housing conditions so as to increase the satisfaction of farm living."

The department of agricultural engineering is allied with the agronomy department for administrative purposes. The personnel of the department consists of James B. Kelley, professor of agricultural engineering; Earl G. Weston, extension engineer; Jesse B. Brooks, part time instructor and part time extension engineer; J. M. McKirick, full time agricultural engineer and soil management specialist; Nelson Puckett and W. H. Moore, general mechanics and Miss Mattie Ramsey, secretary.

The members of the agricultural engineering department are responsible for planning, supervising and conducting all phases of agricultural engineering work in connection with college teaching, Experiment Station and extension work. At the present time, the department is offering college courses and conducting extension projects on the following subjects: farm buildings, farm machinery, farm motors, sanitary (including sewage disposal and water supply systems), land measurement, land drainage, and the engineering phases of soil conservation.

The members of the department are also responsible for the upkeep and repair of the farm buildings and equipment on the Experiment Station farm, Lexington, and for a major portion of the engineering work done on the experimental farms at Princeton and Quicksand. Professor James B. Kelley was the agricultural engineer in charge of the planning and erection of all the buildings at Princeton, Kentucky, the new beef cattle barn, sheep barn, piggery, the poultry buildings and remodeled hater barn on the Experiment Station farm in Lexington.

He has also supervised the planning of drainage systems, sewage disposal systems, transmission lines, roads and fields on the Experiment Station farms.

Annually, hundreds of requests are received from farmers asking for information on all phases of agricultural engineering. These are answered by letters and by means of extension circulars which have been prepared by the staff, and in addition by the regular organized field service that is carried on in cooperation with county extension agents.

A farm building plan service has been developed. Some 313 different kinds of farm building and equipment plans are now available for the farmers of the state. Blueprints of them may be obtained for a small charge to cover the labor of making them. This service was started in 1920. The requests for blueprints in 1935 increased 86.2 percent over 1934. Last year, requests came from 83 counties in Kentucky and from 17 other states.

The department is housed in a beautiful agricultural engineering building, which was completed in 1931. It was a step up from a very small metal building, two sheds, two stalls in the main barn, and the great out of doors. This beautiful Georgian building stands at the end of a new agricultural quadrangle which is in the process of development. It is 198 feet across and 98 feet deep. The middle wing is of two stories, while the side wings are but one story in height. The basement space in the middle is used for laboratory work in sanitation, drainage, concrete, and storage of lumber, supplies and equipment. The first floor area includes two class rooms, one laboratory, tool room, wash and locker rooms, and a commodious hallway. The second floor is divided into four offices for the staff, a large combination drawing and class room, and two convenient rooms for the preparation of plans and blueprints. The side wings are divided into large spaces for laboratory work on farm motors, sanitation equipment, farm machinery, seed drying rooms, combination farm shop and lumber storage. The space between these wings is macadamized and furnishes an area for operating tractors and machinery demonstrations.

Enemy Camps

By MACK HUGHES

Here we are back on the old merry-go-round again. Early season brilliance that fades out like an old electric bulb. With five wins and three defeats behind them and two very tough opponents coming up, the Wildcats give every indication of hitting that old half and half, five wins and five defeats with all the wins over mediocre teams. Victories over Tennessee and Clemson would, to some degree, allow Cats followers to hold up their heads once more. Both wins appear doubtful.

The Clemson Tigers continued their climb into prominence with a 20 to 0 victory over the much-defeated Citadel. After losing the majority of the games on a suicide schedule, the Tigers were thrown into the lime-light by their win over Georgia Tech. The Clemson team has been slow to develop but now seems set to knock off the remaining big boys on their schedule.

Tennessee playing substitutes for all but a few minutes of the game, ran over Maryville, 34 to 0. The first team played only five minutes of the game but in that short time pushed over two touchdowns. The reserves were then put in and played the remaining 55 minutes. Taking little time to return to strength after Neyland's return, the Volunteers have ruined the records of two of the South's strongest teams. The only blemish on the record of Alabama is the Tennessee tie game. The defeat the Volt handed Duke's mighty Blue Devils is the only upset the Devils have suffered this season. At the rate the Tennessee boys are developing they should be able to make a far better showing than when they were defeated by Kentucky last Thanksgiving.

Georgia Tech, who incidentally has not won a game since its rout of Kentucky, was defeated by Auburn, 13-12—a favored Tulane Green Wave was clouded up by the Crimson Tide of Alabama and washed back to the Gulf on the crest of a 34-7 defeat.—Washington and Lee defeated V. P. I., 27-0.—V. M. I. ran over William and Mary by 21-0.—Florida was defeated badly by Georgia, going down, 28-8.—Xavier won easily over Wittenburg, 30-0.

Few things that grow require all the care and cultivation it takes to raise the mild, ripe tobaccos in Chesterfield Cigarettes.

Chesterfield Wins

There is no higher standard of tobacco quality than the Chesterfield Standard.

Proper curing by the farmer gives flavor to Chesterfield tobaccos just as it does to fine hams and bacon.

Like fine wines, Chesterfield tobaccos are aged for two years or more to make them mellow and better-tasting.
