Short Ag Course Offers 7 Speakers

Seven guest lecturers will highlight a special three week course relating to agricultural adjustment and public policy. Dr. R. W. Rudd, professor of agriculture economics, stated.

Thirty-three persons, representing all of the southeastern states, are enrolled in the course which will be concluded July 27.

The course is jointly sponsored by the Agricultural Policy Institute of North Carolina State and the UK Department of Agricultural Economics. It is designed primarily for those agricultural workers who are in direct contact with the farmer, Dr. Rudd said.

Six seminars are being conducted in connection with the course.

The lecturers are: Dr. John Schnitker, staff economist with the Secretary of Agriculture;

Dr. Joseph Ackerman, director of Farm Foundation; Dr. Dale Hathaway, professor of agricultural economics at Michigan State University; Dr. George Brandow, professor of agricultural economics at Pennsylvania State University.

Dr. William Block, professor of history and political science at North Carolina State College; Dr. C. E. Bishop, director of Agricultural Policy Institutes at North Carolina State, and Dr. Charles Hullman, assistant professor in the UK Patterson School of Diplomacy and assistant professor of economics.

UK Project To Spur Economy

Wood-Use Center To Aid Eastern Kentucky

By RICHARD WILSON, Kernel Staff Writer

A UK operated wood-utilization center is expected to be a giant-sized step toward the development of Eastern Kentucky's timber industry.

The proposed center is to be located at the University's Robinson Substation near Quicksand, in Breathitt County. Though no target date has been set for the center's completion, limited operation is expected by midyear, 1963.

Keith Kelley, director of the Eastern Kentucky resource development program at UK, stated, "This is a new field for the University to enter. Presently, we are the only institution in the nation attempting to serve an underdeveloped region of a state with such a project."

The principal objective of the Quicksand Center will be to increase employment opportunities and improve the economy of Eastern Kentucky through a more efficient use of the region's timber resources.

Seventy-six percent of the 33 Eastern Kentucky counties are densely forested. This is a total of 5,540,000 acres, or an area approximately the size of Massachusetts. Presently the majority of the timber cut in this area is shipped elsewhere for processing and finishing.

These counties will realize a major economic and employment gain if this trend can be curbed. To do this, local industries for processing and fabrication of raw timber products will either have to be established or present facilities and methods will have to be improved and modernized.

The Quicksand Center will provide the demonstrations, training, technical services, and facilities needed to accomplish this goal.

Gilbert E. Brown, Agricultural Experimental Station consultant in wood utilization, said, "This project is an outstanding opportunity to train the people of this area by a practical demonstration of method and machinery in the ways of building the timber industry from within."

Established through a $642,000 grant from the Federal Area Redevelopment Administration, the project will be operated with funds made available to the University through state funds. The Quicksand program, however, is only one portion of the overall Appalachian Resource Development Project.

The goal of this entire program is to aid economic development in areas characterized by severe conditions of unemployment, underemployment, and low income. Statistics of 1956 revealed the per capita income in this area was $680, or one-half of the state average and one-third of the national average.

The center is to be operated as a facility of the University and will be directed by a coordinator responsible to the dean of the College of Agriculture and Home Economics.

Assisting the dean in policy and planning will be a coordinating board comprised of the state commissioners of Conservation, Commerce, the director of the Bureau of Vocational Education. In addition, three members representing wood use fields will be appointed to the board by the governor.

The project will consist of three separate facilities. The main plant will be installed at Quicksand. The practical and economic feasibility of processing and marketing rough, semi-finished and finished products will be studied here.

A forest management facility will be located at the University-owned 15,000 acre Robinson Forest near Quicksand. This facility will demonstrate modern and efficient methods of logging and sawmilling.

A market timber yard is pending location. Once this site is determined, it will serve as a public market place for the concentration, sorting, and selling of wood products.

A UK spokesman said recently the people of Eastern Kentucky are most interested in the project. They are awakening to the fact that their resources have been slipping through their fingers, he added.

Pat Patterson Resigns; Takes Job In Kansas

UK's assistant dean of women has resigned to take a position in Kansas.

Patricia Patterson, assistant dean of women has resigned to become dean of women at Kansas State College in Pittsburg, Kan.

Miss Patterson came to UK in 1960 to be assistant dean of women and to direct Panhellenic affairs. She has been advisor to the Associated Women Students and Cwens, sophomore women's honorary.

She is a native of Pittsburg, Kan., and attended Colorado Women's College where she received her associate arts degree. She received her bachelor's degree from the University of Nebraska and her master's in education from Indiana University.

Before coming to the University, she was an air line hostess for Braniff International Airways, a first grade teacher in Kansas City, a play ground supervisor in Pittsburg, Kan., and a resident hall counselor at Indiana University. She was also assistant dean of women at the University of Kansas for three years.

Miss Patterson is a member of the Episcopal Church and has taught Sunday School at Christ Church for the last two years. She is also a member of the National Association of Women Deans and Counselors and the Red Cross Grey Ladies. She is a member of Delta Delta Delta social sorority and PEO.

Having specialized in women's counseling, she has addressed student and lay groups on this subject.

Doris Seward, UK dean of women, was not available for comment on a replacement for Miss Patterson. She is in Stockholm, Sweden attending an education conference.

Two ROTC Instructors Activated

The University ROTC Department recently announced the impending departure of two staff members. Both have received orders reassigning them to duty with U.S. military forces in South Vietnam.

Lt. Col. Cecil G. Dansby, assistant professor of military science since August of 1959, will leave Lexington in late July or early August.

Prior to departure for Vietnam in February, Col. Dansby will attend a course at the Army's Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and a briefing at the Military Assistance Institute, Arlington, Va.

Also leaving the department in late July is Captain Kulman B. Smith. Captain Smith has been on the University's ROTC staff since the summer of 1959.

Letters

To The Editor:

The summer school registration seemed to be almost perfectly planned. In spite of this, however, hundreds stood in line several blocks from the entrance in the hot sunshine as the line moved imperceptibly.

Many were much too far away to hear the officer announce the alphabetical letters of admission to the actual registration. In fact, many took advantage of this and did not observe the scheduled alphabetical arrangement.

I wondered if the plan of handing out numbered cards to indicate one's order in line, thus freeing him to seek a more comfortable waiting spot, would be more helpful than the plan used.

This plan was employed in the days before super-markets installed self-service meat counters and seemed to relieve the congestion and frustration of standing in a line for long periods of time. Of course the cards would have to be specially printed so as to avoid easy duplication.

NANCI BOWLING
Miss Kentucky

Nanci looks for a handbag and gloves in the accessory department of Hymson's to match the knit suit she selected for our trip to New York to buy fashions for the annual Hymson's-Panhellenic Fashion Show.

Our buying trip to New York each summer to select fashions for the annual Hymson's-Panhellenic Fashion Show is always a ball, but this year it promises to be better than ever.

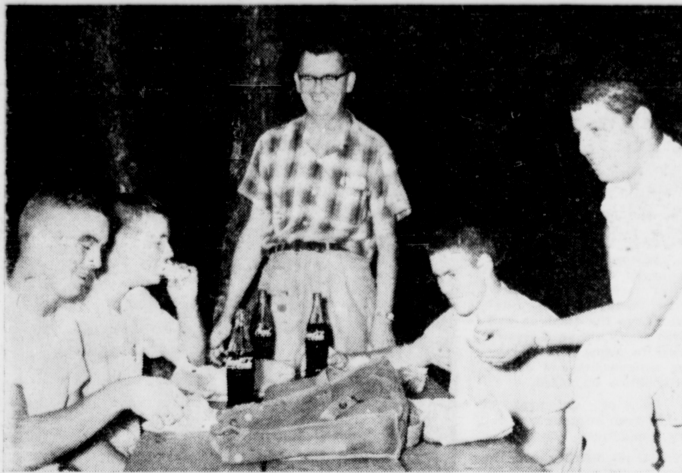

Nanci Bowling, recently chosen to represent Kentucky in the Miss America contest, is going with us to help select fashions for the show and to buy her own wardrobe for the contest in Atlantic City.

All of the members of the Fashion Council are really looking forward to spending a week with Nanci. She is a very attractive (naturally) blonde (natural) with a lot of enthusiasm. In fact, I'm sure she is excited about the trip which begins Sunday as we are.

Nanci models a wonderful knit that she thinks would be perfect for our days in the big city. It is fashioned in taupe and beige and is an Italian import. The sheath skirt and loose jacket are in brown and the overblouse is beige. Contrasting hand stitching emphasizes the lines of the blouse and jacket.

Be sure and visit us at Hymson's when we return so that we can tell you about the trip and show you fashions that you will want for fall. The big unveiling of what's new will be at the annual Panhellenic Show Aug. 23.

Summer Lectures Feature Educators

The first in a series of summer lectures sponsored by the College of Education was held Wednesday in the Taylor Education Building Auditorium.

Speakers at the first program were Dr. Harry Robinson, visiting professor of education, and Dr. James E. Moore, chairman of the Division of Curriculum of the UK College of Education.

Dr. Moore and Robinson focused on the progress of education in their discussion of "The Elementary School of the Future."

Three other lectures are scheduled during the summer school session. The next will be at 7 p.m. Wednesday, July 18. Dr. Herbert Sorenson will discuss "Some Common Fallacies in Education and Psychology."

"New Frontiers in Guidance and Counseling" will be the topic for Drs. William Carse and G. W. Rogers. They will speak at 7 p.m. on Wednesday, July 25.

The last lecture will be held on August 1, and like the previous two, will begin at 7 p.m. At that session Dr. Leonard Ravitz and Ernest McDaniel will speak on "Creative Teaching."

Dr. Lyman V. Ginger, dean of the UK College of Education, will preside at the lectures, which are open to the public.

4 Greek Students Arrive Next Week

Four Greek students will arrive on campus Thursday for a two week stay as part of the Experiment in International Living Program.

The four students, three boys and a girl, all 18 years old, are residents of Athens, Greece. They will be accompanied by a group leader who is responsible for the group, their behavior, and arrangements for their recreation and travel.

They will audit regular UK classes and receive information in the fields in which they are interested.

Those attending the session are Gella Varnara; George Avramides, a commerce major; Evangelos Sarassitis, a mechanical engineering major; and George Skouras, the golf champion of Greece and a drama major.

Agriculture Center Bid Awarded Nashville Firm

A $2,060,200 contract to build the first section of a science building and other facilities at the UK Agriculture Research Center has been awarded to the Foster and Creighton Co. of Nashville.

Other facilities included in the bid are laboratory equipment, a seedhouse, a flammable liquid storage building, a gas meter building, and a utility tunnel.

When completed the new Research Center will cost $8 million. The center will have an agriculture library, conference rooms, and space for livestock shows and exhibits. Tobacco research laboratories are going to be a major facility of the center.

The building will be a three-story brick structure with basement, aluminum projected windows, and aluminum walls. Approximately $2 million in State funds has been given for construction of the first section of the building, with a total of $4 million available for the two sections.

16 From Two Colleges Make Perfect Standing

Eleven engineering students and five students in the College of Agriculture and Home Economics earned perfect 4.0 standings during the spring semester.

FOUND: 3 keys on gold chain in front of Administration Building. May be claimed at Busar's Office, Administration Building.

Rome wasn't built in a day, but workmen are progressing rapidly on the new campus home of the University Alumni Association at the corner of Rose Street and Euclid Avenue. James B. Allen, Winchester, chairman of the building committee, said the $180,000 building is expected to be completed by spring, 1963.

Library Adds Study Areas In New Wing

Fifty modern faculty studies and 200 study cubicle partitions will be available in January in the new wing of the Margaret I. King Library.

Dr. Thompson said there will be a heavy demand for both types of facilities, particularly for the faculty studies. Suggestions from the teaching and research staffs will be necessary in order to frame policies governing assignments and use of these facilities, he added.

The following statement of policy has been suggested by the Library Committee:

1. Full time members of the teaching faculty, senior administrative officers, and visiting scholars are eligible to apply for the use of a faculty study.

2. Faculty studies are to be used for research projects requiring frequent and extensive use of library materials.

3. In all instances, the assignment of faculty studies will be made by the director of libraries.

Application should be made one month prior to the date the study will be needed. Assignments will be made for one semester. Requests for renewal will be judged on the status of the work in progress, and on a basis of merit along with new applications.
