FOOTBALL SEASON

The football season just past has been a more than usually interesting one in a great many ways, and it is for this reason that an unusually large amount of editorial space has been devoted to it during recent months.

With the game Saturday, in which the Wildcats encountered every difficulty which can beset a football team, the season was brought to a happy termination. Few there are who will term it an unsuccessful one. Kentucky received almost national recognition with its magnificent stand against Tennessee, and the ability of individuals on the team was lauded in every prominent publication of the country.

To the Kernel the season which has closed was particularly brilliant in that although every handicap was placed upon the team and upon the coaching staff, a spirit of harmony and cooperation was maintained between these two departments at all times. During the trying period of accusation and disturbance, we pleaded for truce until the close of the season, and we now applaud both the coaching staff and the team for their observance of that truce—whose victory seems to have made a permanent peace—and for their consequent success.

Kelly, Wright and the other seniors who are through will be remembered long by those loyal followers of the Blue and White who saw them play during the last season. Our regret over losing them is mitigated only by the hope which Kercheval and other younger stars hold out to us.

CONVOCATION

Students of the university too seldom appreciate the intellectual and cultural advantages which are offered them, and in this lack of appreciation assume more or less the attitude of tyrant high school students who reason that every hour spent away from their classes is an hour saved. Not in our memory has a convocation been held which would not benefit every member of the student body in some way, and although those who attend these meetings seldom make any but favorable comments, the interest which is evidenced is not commensurate with the love which the student in an institution of higher education is supposed to hold for things of the mind.

Students have cut convocations for too long a period to retain the belief that their non-attendance is a clever gesture of independence. They are not required to attend convocation, and no effort on the part of university authorities, other than adequate publicity, is made to assure their attendance. We do not believe that the student who is frankly bored with independence should attend them, but we do believe that many students who would enjoy them are falling to do so through ignorance. If each student would attend only one convocation, and would base his like or dislike for the meetings on that one attendance rather than on the opinions of campus sages, we believe that attendance would be repitious during his remaining years at the university.

NEW ASSOCIATION

The Department of Buildings and Grounds association, which recently was formed at the university and which last week contributed $50 to the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations' finance drive and $25 to the Red Cross, is an expression of a spirit of helpfulness and charity which does credit to the men who organized it. Its purpose is organized giving by the members of the department, and this giving is determined on a basis of the salary earned by each member.

We have heard much about charity during the last two years, and we have felt deeply the need of many of our people. That employees of the university have chosen this method of aiding worthy organizations is intelligent and commendable.

Literary

THE MOUNTAINEER
Strong of muscle, large of bone.
A courage born of being lone:
Favoritism asked of none—
The mountaineer.

A heart that fiercely loyal beats,
Whose temper quickly kindling heats,
And opposition boldly meets—
The mountaineer.

Whose blood runs hot with feudal strain,
Where insult made, will e'er remain
And fume and rankle and make gain—
The mountaineer.

Who in drawing room would awkward be,
But when at home with rock and tree
Is airy, light, and spirit free—
The mountaineer.

Who loves the mountain fold and way,
Whose ignorance may lead astray,
Yet the penalty will proudly pay—
The mountaineer.

WINTER NIGHTS
Yellow roses in a beaten copper bowl,
Against a background blue with smoke,
The freight on the walls,
And highlights on a silver paper-weight,
The warmth and coziness within,
The night outside a symphony
Of velvet hush and sparkling snow,
Clear frosty stare that wink pale green,
Above the sharp etched scene below.

Jest Among Us

It seems that those elusive "As" are becoming merely an idle rumor.
Someone hints that Yeager and Ardrey are politicians. Quick, Henry, the Fiat!
Ad in Louisville paper: Anderson's Golf School. Exciting and petting taught. Driving and putting taught. Excellent equipment.
Now we understand the passage, "Many are cold, but few are frozen."
Famous Last Lines: When are you going to pay me that five bucks?
Alfalagan states in Kernel: "Lips that talk politics shall never touch mine." Make your own crack.
Now that the depression is ending, the weather is coming into its own again as the chief topic of conversation.
Famous Last Lines: "Freshmen, that's the third no-break you've had with my girl tonight!"
Rhodes Scholarship Committee Meets. The Jester smiles.

Cheers Snickers Scandal

by Derek Smythefield

Brief Biss on the Big Shots
Hurry of Centre officials to deny a fight among the members of the team on a recent football trip reminds us of the fond mother who knows her boys can do no wrong, but everyone's else can do plenty.
Joe Jordan says that he and Mr. Webster will never give in on the matter, but that he likes Kappa Hilda Cooper regardless of an inconsequential thing like a mere announcer's pronunciation of wars and rumors of wars here fought and heard concerning the bond sponsor election.

Cheque All

One of our more brilliant assistants recently brought to light an interesting fact about the recent dance at Paris on Thanksgiving. He tells us that every door, window and mouse hole was so securely locked and barred that even the collegians of the University of Kentucky did not have a prayer of getting into the building, and a half was extracted from every one of the luckless victims. As an added precaution, a weak fire was kept burning all during the party.

We know that you are wondering, you say. That was to keep one from coming down the chimney!

Other Greenlets Speak

Communications become more interesting as we near the end of the list. Presenting the Zeta Tau Alpha.

"There is an ancient adage to the effect that people of glass houses should not throw stones; and we are firm believers in the wisdom of the ancients. However, we are of the opinion that a commendable action to toss gently back some of the missiles which have been aimed in the direction of said house.

We suggest that the logical place to plant a crop of greenlets is the miniature golf course on Pine street across from that collegiate stable, known as the Den of Iniquity. This course, being in their line of nourishment might cause the fair co-eds to leave their flirting stalls for a more substantial diet.

News of the day: At a recent convention the National Pan-Hellenic Congress decided that washing would not be dirty, because of the high standards of honor held by each sorority.

We hope that some of the "Town-Criers" will be able to deviate from the usual practices and that their resolutions be stronger than their natural habits?

Since the members of the glass house find little use for the garden during this chilly weather, we reserve a bench for the issue of cordial invitation to those political mounturers who can make any atmosphere hot.

People who force entrance to well-kept camps, other social gatherings, and contaminate the environment, should not ensure the lowered tone for which they are responsible.

In the fear of overstepping our bounds, we bury the remaining stones and retire. Our sincere appreciation and gratitude, Mr. Smythefield, for the loan of your column.

American Students Debate in Australia

From the Australian press several thousand miles across the Pacific Basin debate tour conducted by students from the University of Oregon. The students are conducting this venture in an attempt to promote good-will between Australians and Americans.

The three debaters, Robert Miller, Roger Pfaff and David Wilson are winning "convincing" victories by "overwhelming majorities," and "flooding Australian representatives by popping questions like machine guns," say two Sydney newspapers.

The account in one having been written by Frank Russell, world noted journalist and one of the few men to ever interview the Pope.

From the light of the Russell pen comes a column of praise and commendation and accomplishments, that the Americans are making.

"The boys dislike questions from interviewers," said this Australian, "designed to draw replies as to whether Australians are like Englishmen or Americans. They cannot understand this attitude.

"Australia is a nation," said Wilson. "Why would you want to be like anyone but yourselves—or care what strangers think of you?"

"It was an acute remark. Provincialism shows its cloven hoof by too great a pre-occupation about what other people think," commented Russell on the adroit way in which the visitors had brought out an important international idea.

The writer praised the spirit in which the Oregon students were "lecturing, debating and inquiring, all in the interests of good-will and fellowship."

"Splendid samples of Young Americans—these, sincere, eager and bright youngsters, likeable and admirable, restless to learn and spreading the goodwill they came to promote."

Hobbies of University Characters Include Darning and Dog Shoeing

By A. A. DAUGHTERY

"It is said that the gods look with favor upon university men and women struggling with adversity, but that does not prevent them from indulging in diversions of mental relaxation, which a Kernel scribe has discovered, take expression in the form of mud and water."

Mary Ann O'Brien, who has been the real mayor of Lexington for the last four years, declares that her hobby is hanging up holes in stockings. Her own stockings, she adds.

Prof. Enoch Grehan, head of the department of journalism, has as his hobby the shoeing of Rebel, Dean Boyd's genial Colie, from his classroom door. It is not exactly a recreation, but a hobby in the sense that it takes him from his work so much, Professor Grehan feels completely holy on such occasions.

Eleanor Stekler has as her hobby, especially on such occasions, hours daily in ecstatic investigation of its possibilities. She repudiates H. L. Menck's definition of a psychologist as "a person who sticks pins in babies and makes a chart showing the ebb and flow of their tears."

S. A. "Daddy" Boles has as his hobby fishing. In this he aligns himself with Prof. J. L. Lawrence, of the College of Commerce faculty.

Emily Hardin seeks the great outdoors for diversification, and delights especially in the plucking of green, blue, red, and brown leaves during the autumnal season.

Robert Baxter's brain stimulant is checkers, or after the fashion of merrie England, draughts. He holds a wicked king.

Eleanor M. Smith's hobby is horses. She delights particularly in hunting. It really doesn't hurtle little girl, she says.

Gerald Griffin's greatest moments come from his true detective stories and selling them. He is virtually transported with joy, too, in the unspitting of spit infinitives.

That said that he can while looking at page one of a story, spot a split verb on page three of that story.

Dean Boyd, in contradiction, finds his pleasure and mental tonic in reading detective and mystery stories that Griffin writes is not revealed.

Kathryn Aufenkamp depends upon the prosaic sports of swimming and clipping football news items.

Billie Goble, who has become famous by clipping and keeping a scrapbook of all interesting school items published locally and in other publications, says that she is now saving drawings girls from the depths of the Kentucky river.

Robert Caplan, a native Parisian, looks to aviation for his avocation. He rather prefers operating a glider to spending time in the motorized flying machines. Either suffices to

Wisconsin Students Earn School Expenses

Earning as well as studying their way to a university degree, nearly three-fifths or 59 per cent of all students attending the University of Wisconsin this semester are either wholly or partially self-supporting, according to figures released recently by Miss Annie B. Kirch, university statistician.

Based on replies to a question asked when the students registered in September, the figures show the degree of self-support of students at the present time by college, school, rank and sex.

The figures present a true estimate of the number of students who are earning part or all of their higher education is indicated by the fact that of the total number of students enrolled, 8,765, only 876 or slightly less than 10 per cent failed to indicate the degree of their self-support.

1,810 Wholly Self-Supporting
The figures reveal that a total of 1,810 students, or 23 per cent of the entire student body, are wholly self-supporting; the 1,338 students, or 14 per cent, are more than half self-supporting; while 1,713 students, or 22 per cent, are less than half self-supporting.

A total of 3,228 students, or 41 per cent of the entire student body, are earning part of their living while attending the university this semester, according to the figures, which reveal that of this total, 1,789 are women and 1,439 are men.

Exactly 64 per cent of the total of 2,818 women enrolled in the university this semester are not at all self-supporting, while these figures are just reversed for the men, only 28 per cent of whom are not earning any part of their living while at the university. On the other hand, 3,641 or 72 per cent of the total of 5,071 men enrolled in the university this semester are either wholly or partially self-supporting, which leaves 1,392 or 28 per cent of the total number of women enrolled earning either part or all of their living in school.

1,620 Women Earn Way
Of the total number of those totally self-supporting, 418 were women while 1,392 were men; of those over half self-supporting, 288 were women while 910 were men; and of those less than half self-supporting, only 374 were women, while 1,339 were men.

While first year men outnumbered the men in all other classes in both wholly or partially supporting themselves while attending the university, the first year women were able to gain less support for themselves either wholly or partially than the more experienced sophomores, juniors or senior class members, according to the figures, which revealed that only 165 first year women either entirely or partly supported themselves during their first year, while 721 first year men were wholly or partly self-supporting, or partly so.

Noter Dayme Is Correct, Says Ediet

If anybody criticizes you for pronouncing Notre Dame as though it were spelled "Noter Dyme," just laugh and make a remark about ignorance, being refreshing or something like that.

The Rev. Charles Leo O'Donnell, president of Notre Dame, has announced that the name of the university has been officially Anglicized and that it is now as incorrect to pronounce the "Dame" as "Dom" as it is to speak of a "bawtin" down on the farm.

Father O'Donnell is in Los Angeles for a short visit on behalf of his health.

Cosmopolitan Club Will Hold Meeting At Maxwell Place
The last meeting of the Cosmopolitan club before the Christmas holidays will be held Friday, December 12, at Maxwell Place, in President McVey's home.

The club is composed of approximately 40 university students and faculty members. The purpose of the club is to provide those students of the university who were born outside of the United States with a better understanding of home life in this country. Likewise, home-born students of the university are familiarized with social problems and conditions in other countries.

Looking Over the Magazines

By NICHOLAS WINN WILLIAMS

Washington, D. C.
Sometimes we are fed up on reading articles which may be classified as intellectual; sometimes we are weary of trying to reach solutions to difficulties and of trying to determine which way the world goes. To those readers who may want to rest their minds from the more ponderous type of looking over the magazines, The National Geographic Magazine, the November issue, offers a pleasant relaxation.

One has but to thumb its pages and look at its pictures, photographs of the city of Washington "Through the Years." Those who have been to Washington will want to recall the Capitol with its massive dome, its stately columns, and its noble dignity. In natural color, the magazine may view the well-known cherry blossoms which "frame a distant view of the Lincoln Memorial. It is sort of a kaleidoscopic view of Washington—the magnificent statues to Lafayette and John Adams, the "water-front market, where small Potomac boats from the group of modern poets has been much embittered by war; Siegfried Sassoon may be mentioned for an example. Even Thomas Hardy wrote a poem entitled, "The Man He Killed." The last lines went something like this:

"Yes, 'tis quaint and curious was I; You shoot a fellow down 'You'd treat it if met where any war is Or help to half-a-crown."

Now Thomas W. Duncan, writing for Poetry, a magazine I have edited by Harriet Monroe, wonders about "1902—the last war." He sees "poisoned orange poppies" swallowing a city; his brain imagines skyscrapers being "ripped asunder." He writes "Ten million died that day, the papers said." The splash of color that he creates is beautiful in all its ghastliness.

"Mourning Becomes Electra" is the name of the new play by Eugene O'Neill. The current New Republic review of O'Neill's latest effort through one of its editors, Stark Young, O'Neill has more friends than any other man who writes the type of drama he is writing. John Anderson writing for November of The Arts Monthly is in his praise. He (O'Neill) meets our times with an understanding unmatched in the contemporary theatre. He is the first important dramatist to contend consciously with the shifting values of modern living and to compress them within the limits of the drama. If he has no message it may be, that he recognizes the utility of messages, and is content to grope more searchingly than anyone writing for our stage."

Lexington Sports Writer Lauds Kentucky Wildcats

The following article, written by Neville Dunn sports editor of the Lexington Herald, points the Wildcats as they sped toward their title...

It will be good to plant one's feet in that good old Blue Grass again, the Wildcats sing back.

As hot as it was, as dreary as the Wildcats looked in that torrid battle with Florida, these seniors got their chance to play in the final game.

One—Newell Wilder—came out of the game with a souvenir that will hold the place of honor above the family fireside.

And the Wilder, what of him? The ball carrier who did not make the all-Southern team.

But these boys and their fellow seniors are through—they are, as they themselves express it, happy.

Clackety clack—you're through, say the car wheels to the seniors. Clackety clack—you are just starting.

"The Scandinavian Legal System" was the subject Judge Chalkley used in a convocation address Wednesday at law college.

Alpha Zeta fraternity enjoyed a dinner bridge Saturday night at the Chimney Corner.

Members of Phi Beta Kappa women's professional musical and dramatics fraternity will hold their first initiation of the year Saturday afternoon at the Church of the Good Shepherd.

Members of Mortar Board will hold initiation ceremonies Thursday evening at 5:30 o'clock at "River-side" home of Dean Sarah G. Blanding.

COACH CAMPBELL TO PLAY FOR CHARITY

"Spinner" Campbell, Wildcat at backfield member of former Alabama star, and all the other former luminaries of the Crimson Tide of Alabama of this year and past years were assembled by Coaches Crisp and Thomas at Tuscaloosa.

Men from all the Red Elephant teams since 1923 until the present will comprise the squad.

Several games of twenty minutes each will be played by the former Wildcat against the three District of Columbia aggregations.

Overshadowing the local playhouses this week, Guignol brings us a fine presentation of Rosen's masterful drama, "A Doll's House."

The Ben All feature, "Local Boy Makes Good," is a Joe E. Brown comedy adapted from Will play "The Poor Nut," and them's our words!

Standing before the toy display in the lobby of the Kentucky theatre was a twelve year old example of the modern generation. Her expression was one of disgust.

"Ambassador Bill," Will Roger's latest, appearing at the Kentucky while typically Rogerian, is not nearly so amusing as that comedian's previous pictures.

His idealizing of Babe Ruth to the small price is typical of this great American jokster. Persons who have had the pleasure of viewing Will Roger's other films will be disappointed, but those who have not will enjoy this work.

When Roy and Rena set up housekeeping to give their friends a place to park their hats, they will most certainly require the services of the world's finest maid now in the employ of the Ben All theatre.

The Strand, this week, brings back one of the screen's outstanding dramas of this production, "Street Scene" is a classic which every one should see. As we devoted a great deal of space to the preview and review of this production at the time of its first presentation in Lexington we would advise those interested in improving their minds to take time out and reread some back issues of this illustrious sheet.

Writer Praises U. K. Musicale Programs

(Continued from Page One) But I had no intention of writing an article on organ recitals except to call attention to the fact that Memorial auditorium not only has a very fine organ, but also that on two occasions, at least, it has been played by eminent organists—and on both occasions free to the public.

"At the Pine Arts Academy in Philadelphia, free Sunday concerts have been regularly offered for several years. Portland, Oregon, Chattanooga, Tenn., Atlanta, Ga., San Diego, Cal.—all these and many more have had Sunday concerts of various types for a long time. But the trouble with most of them is that they have been either all organ, all piano, all voice, too much local talent (which, no matter how fine, is never fully appreciated), or else programs which seem only to advertise certain performers.

(probably the most important—at Lincoln— It is impossible to please all the listeners all the time. Or even all listeners some of the time. But surely some listeners some of the time. And some listeners all the time.

"There is every evidence that the present administration at the University of Kentucky and especially the concert committee, is making a serious effort to present only the best as far as the able. "Speaking of variety—the series this year includes three choruses, one trio, two organ, three men (vocal artists), two women (vocal artists), two orchestras, one violin and one piano. What more could one ask and with no charge?"

Intramural

By NORBERT CAMPBELL With the final game of the volleyball tournament run off last week, the fall intramural program came to a brilliant close. It was up to one of the most successful volleyball tournaments ever to be held in the university. There were quite a few upsets during the course of the play, and also a few teams that were not given a chance to play the first round fooled everyone and came out with flying colors. Among these were the Phi Kappa Taus and the Wrecking Crew.

The Phi Kappa Taus upset the S. A. E.'s in the final round to take the championship and stamp them as one of the organizations that are pretty sure to give the present leaders of the intramural athletics program a stiff fight for the leadership of the loop. They are now occupying fourth place in the standings.

Then there is that independent organization, the Wrecking Crew. In the fourth division who will give somebody a good deal to think about. These boys have one of the best teams in the university ever to be banded together on the campus. They are good clean sports, and deserve a lot of credit for their performance during the course of the playing of the tournament.

Did you know that during the course of the 57 games that were played off in the volleyball tournament, that there were only two forfeits during the two or three weeks the tournament was in progress. This shows a decided increase in interest in intramural competition. . . . that when the Phi Kappa Taus defeated the S. A. E.'s in volleyball, that they did something the fraternity volleyball team has been trying to do for several years. The S. A. E.'s have won the volleyball championship of the university for three years straight prior to their defeat this year.

While I am a "did you know" stuff, I might as well state that if you want some good free entertainment you can see the old bus out South Limestone street and stop in front of the Gym Annex. If you hear any blood curdling noises such as "knock his block off," "kill him," "atta boy, Jim," you might just as well go in and add your lusty voice to the rest of the din. What I am trying to say is that boxing and wrestling is now on the intramural list of winter sports. The first round in the boxing bouts will get under way tonight at 7 o'clock in the Gym Annex. Sixteen bouts will be disposed of in tonight's events, ranging all the way from the 115 pound boys to the guys who shove the scales up past the 165 pound mark. The unlimited class will be held off until after the Christmas holidays. There are some mighty good boys entered in the boxing matches, and those who go to see them, (there is no admission charged) will see some clever fighting. Forsythe, runner-up in the 145 pound division last year, will again attempt to capture the trophy in this weight. "Tate" Duff, this year's star varsity and winner of the 158 pound class last year will again push the leather mitts around, but in the next division. . . .

Wildcats Win from Florida University

(Continued from Page One) Ailsa's admitted to wear out the Wildcats by continuous substitutions, and at the beginning of the third quarter he used an entirely fresh team for 10 minutes. Even this was not enough to overcome the profusely pe-spring "Cats" however. They just mopped their faces and went at it. Coen Gamago also saved his men as much as he could by substitutions and the game ended with a good many of the regulars out. . . .

You probably know that heat is used in the treatment of all cigarette tobaccos. But you know too that excessive heat can destroy freshness and fragrance. That's why there could be no truly fresh cigarette except for scientifically developed methods of applying heat. Reynolds is proud of having discovered and perfected methods for getting the benefits of heat treatments and still avoiding ever parching or toasting. With every assurance we tell you, Camels are truly fresh. They're made fresh—not parched or toasted—and then they're kept fresh in the Camel Humidor Pack. If you wish to know why the swing to Camels is nationwide and steadily growing — resist to them for just one day — then leave them, if you can.

You needn't tell me — I know Camel is the fresh cigarette! R. J. REYNOLDS TOBACCO COMPANY Winston-Salem, N. C. R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company's Coast-to-Coast Radio Program. Don't remove the moisture-proof wrapping from your package of Camels after you open it. The Camel Humidor Pack is protection against sweat, dust and germs. In offices and homes, even in the dry atmosphere of artificial heat, the Camel Humidor Pack delivers fresh Camels and keeps them right until the last one has been smoked.
